The Annual giving fund supports special programs, projects, and community outreach services. Contributed income supports the financial aid and scholarship programs, keeping programs open to all who are interested in learning, and it allows for quality in faculty, programs and performances. It is voluntary support that makes the school a special cultural resource, enriching the quality of life here on the South Shore according to William Reardon, vice president of the board and chairman of the Annual Giving Campaign.

The Conservatory has branches in Hingham, Duxbury and Brockton, serves 40 South Shore communities, and is one of the 150 members of the National Guild of Community Schools of the Arts.

Republican Club meets

Anne Torrey of Scituate will be the guest speaker at the Monday, Oct. 19, meeting of the South Shore Republican Club at the Norwell Grange Hall on Route 123, corner of Main and South Streets.

Her talk, "The Monarch Butterfly," will begin at 1 p.m. and include slides of the Monarch's life cycle.

At noon, a light luncheon will be served with members from Cohasset, Hingham and Hull serving as hostesses. The business meeting will begin at 12:30 p.m.

Eastern Edison to refund $7.4 million

The Massachusetts Department of Public Utilities has approved Eastern Edison Company's proposal to refund $7.4 million to its customers over the next six months.

Eastern will apply credit of five-eighths of a cent per kilowatt-hour (kWh) of electricity to customer bills from October, 1987 through March, 1988.

The credit will reduce the bill of a residential customer using 500 kWh per month by about $3.13 per month — or $18.75 during the six-month period.

Cohasset worship . . .

Shabbat services

Shabbat services will be held at Congregation Sha'Aray Shalom, 1112 Main Street, Hingham on Friday evening October 9 at 7:30 p.m. Dassie Abelson's Hay Hebrew class will lead the family service. Dr. David Spiegler will conduct the service for Rabbi Karol, who will be in New York City with the Confirmation Class.

Beechwood Congregational

The BeechwoodCongregational Church invites everyone to worship Sunday mornings at 10:45.

Adult child care will be provided downstairs after the children's sermon. The pastor is Stephen S. J. Hall. The church phone is 383-0808; Pastor Hall, 545-3810 (home), 545-6800 (office).

Children in nursery school through grade 8 are welcome to attend Sunday school at 9:30 a.m. As usual, we welcome all friends and neighbors. We are looking forward to a fun and exciting year.

Saturday, Oct. 10 at 10 a.m. there will be a special work party to make the church shine for the Emma Damon concert. All are welcome to come and help. A special pot of chili is being donated by an internationally acclaimed chili maker who has promised to keep it to a two alarm rather than his usual five alarm chili.

Sunday, Oct. 11 at 2:30 p.m. marks the occasion for a program of lovely music in honor of Emma Damon. Emma not only served this church for many years as organist and chior director, but always had time to serve her fellow man with her special gift of music. Come with your friend and neighbors and share this program with us.

Oct. 14 —The final in our "how to" series will be held at the church at 10 a.m. Sharon Green of Sharon's Chocolate factory will demonstrate chocolate making.

Our thanks to executive chef, Mark Thomas from J. Bildners and Sons, Betty Kelly from Precious Petals of Scituate, Linda Holland from Cakes by Linda of Cohasset, and Sharon Green from Sharon's Chocolate Factory of Cohasset.

The proceeds from the seminars has allowed the Sunday school to purchase several picture book bibles. Thank you again.

VILLAGE FAIR NEWS

If you have items that you would like to contribute to the Bargain Bazaar this year, you may drop them off at St. Anthony's rectory between the hours of 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. Monday-Saturday. Bea Coleman will be there to let you in. Please do not leave any items outside in the driveway behind the rectory.

The opportunity to be responsible for our church's participation in the Boutique Table and Children's Corner is open! These leadership positions would involve coordinating our support of these fair activities. This includes recruiting assistance in making or procuring items and meeting and planning with other church representatives. The time commitment is estimated at one or two hours per week up to fair week —five to fifteen hours during fair week depending upon how work is delegated. Call now to volunteer.

CARE CIRCLE:

About 11 years ago, the First Parish formed a program to respond with warmth and caring to parishioners who were experiencing some stress. Since that time, hundreds of volunteers have provided church members with cards, meals, transportation and caring at times of births, deaths, illnesses and other stresses of life.

In order to maintain another 11 years of a responsive program, we are asking First Parish members to let the committee know when a church member might need help, or a statement of our presence and concern.

Pilgrim refueling to be completed in ten days

By Sue Asci
Mariner staff

Refueling of Pilgrim nuclear power plant, which began Sept. 29, should be completed within the 10 days. And then about a month or two after that, Boston Edison intends to seek permission from the Nuclear Regulatory Commission to restart the plant.

During the interim period, the utility plans additional plant system testing, maintenance and modification work, said Edison spokesman John Fidler.

As of Monday, 23 percent of the refueling had been completed, with 135 fuel assemblies placed in the reactor core.

Last Friday, the company began testing two boilers. These steam-generating boilers will then be used to test two other systems in the plant. This testing should occur this week or the beginning of next week.

Fidler said the steam from the boilers will be used to test two systems: the reactor core isolation cooling system and the high-pressure coolant injection system.

"In the event of a serious accident where we are losing water from the reactor," Fidler said, "these systems pump water into the reactor to keep the fuel covered. We will test them at operational temperatures and pressures."

"The issue today is not the NRC," Golden said. "The issue today is not the state. The issue this afternoon is Boston Edison. It is Boston Edison who has chosen to begin to refuel that nuclear reactor. The Secretary of Public Safety Charles Barry asked them not to refuel. Did they listen? No. Did they care? No. Has the management team reversed the history of mismanagement? No. Have they found a replacement site for the Hanover Mall? No. Our job from here on is to stop Boston Edison."

Golden said he has filed in federal court an appeal of an NRC decision that rejected his petition for a show-cause hearing. He had petitioned the public hearing for Edison to demonstrate why their license should not be suspended or revoked based on three grounds: mismanagement, inadequate emergency preparedness and flaws in the containment vessel. The petition was denied on all grounds except for the management issue.

He also noted that there is a bill before the Senate which would place a moratorium on the operation of this plant.

Other groups at the rally included the Pilgrim Alliance, We the People, Mass Alert and the Campaign to Stop Nuclear Waste.

Joan Barry of Plymouth, chairwoman of Pilgrim Alliance, was circulating petitions to get a referendum question on the 1988 ballot which would ban the generation of nuclear waste in the state after July 4, 1989. The move would essentially close down nuclear power plants.

"This would ban them until they can find a safe place to store high level radioactive waste off the site," said Barry.

Meanwhile, on Saturday afternoon, more than 100 residents and representatives from various nuclear activiist groups gathered in front of Memorial Hall to protest the refueling and potential restart of the nuclear power plant.

Organized by Citizens Urging Responsible Energy, representatives from the Duxbury and Plymouth chapters were on hand to voice their concerns about public safety issues.

"Today is history," said Mary Ott, co-chairwoman of the Duxbury chapter of CURE. "It represents the coming together of pro-nuclear and anti-nuclear forces united in a common goal: to protest the refueling and restart of the Pilgrim nuclear power station until fully approved evacuation plans are in the hands of affected communities."

Ott urged Gov. Michael Dukakis to take action against the restart of Pilgrim, which she called "a poorly designed, poorly maintained, poorly managed 15-year-old facility."

She said, "Attempts to implore the state to take legal action in our behalf have fallen on deaf ears. Yet Governor Dukakis continues to fund legal action to block the licensing of Seabrook. What about us? We, too, live within the 10-mile radius of a nuclear power plant."

Plymouth resident Diane Buckbee, chairwoman of the Plymouth chapter of CURE, also spoke about lack of response from the state and the governor.

"We are outraged that the NRC would allow this to happen," Buckbee said, "and also we're wondering what's happened to our governor. Where is he? We wouldn't protest at Pilgrim because we don't really have anything to address to Edison anymore. The focus is on the state and federal government. We chose Memorial Hall because the civil defense office is here and it's central in town."

Buckbee said CURE has nearly 2,000 members and is basically an informational and educational group.

"We've not given up because they've started to refuel," she said of Edison. "We're still encouraging people to call the governor and write the NRC and their representatives."

Two South Shore legislators attended the rally with similar concerns about public safety, but each had a different view.

State Rep. Peter Forman (R-Plymouth) expressed concern about the lack of adequate off-site emergency evacuation plans.

Forman said that pressure needs to be kept on state officials.

State Sen. William Golden (D-Weymouth) said the responsibility of public safety in this instance lies primarily with the utility rather than the state. He said Boston Edison has been unresponsive.

famous, but we do it better in Philadelphia, we don't have them." But also that he favored "an aristocracy of mind, not position or property. Open town meeting should be had."

Jacqueline Moores of Cohasset, who came with Quessenberry, asked Franklin several questions, "playing the Devil's advocate."

"I should think there would be other roles you would be more suited to," Franklin said with a smile.

Peter Faoro wanted to know why, with all his achievements, Franklin referred to himself as a printer.

"I am a printer," Franklin said. "It's the thing I'm proudest of."

The performance won rave reviews.

"I thought it was excellent. He's a real scholar. It's a very pleasant way to get history. I thought it would be boring," said Quessenberry.

"He played the part beautifully," said Johnson. "Franklin was absolutely amazing." He noted the several children in the audience sat mesmerized throughout the program.

Laidlaw was also pleased. "I think everybody enjoyed it. It was something different, an informal way of getting information across."

As for Franklin, at one point he was asked about his famous writings. "I'm only a writer to fill space in my newspapers," he said modestly.

A GREAT WAY TO SERVE

YWCA October classes

You can still register for October classes and workshops at the YWCA in Marshfield. A machine applique demonstration will be held Thursday, Oct. 15, from 9:15 to 11:15 a.m.

Lynette Howe, a well-known local teacher, will demonstrate how to use a zig-zag machine to make all sorts of practical and gift ideas.

Also covered will be good tips on care and maintenance of the sewing machine. Advance registration is required, and babysitting is available for those who preregister.

A special pierced lampshade workshop will be held Saturday Oct. 24, from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. In this class, a scalloped lampshade with a design to fit a candlestick lamp will be completed. Materials, including the lamp, are available from the teacher.

Want to learn French? Join an ongoing informal group with a native speaker Wednesday mornings. This is an opportunity to learn or to brushup.

A quilt in a day workshop will be held Saturday, Oct. 17, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. You may choose to make trip around the world or Irish chain. Preregistration is essential.

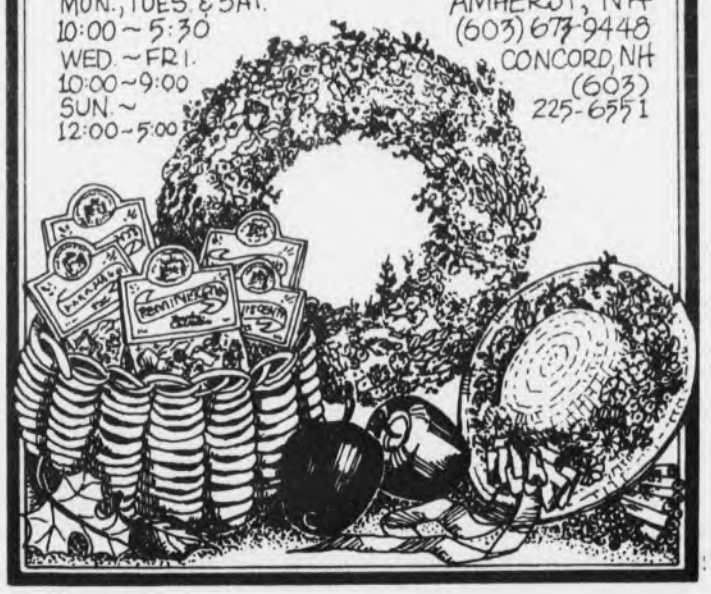
The October speaker series will be held Tuesday, Oct. 13, from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m.

Liz O'Donoghue, popular home economist from the Plymouth County Extension, will speak on childhood nutrition.

The discussion will encompass dietary and nutritional information, the environmental effects on nutrition, as well as anxiety, body language and family relations. Reservations must be made by noon Oct. 9. Babysitting is available.

Postpartum discussion will begin Oct. 29 from 9:30 to 11 a.m. for four Thursdays. This is an opportunity for mothers of new babies to talk about concerns, have a morning out with adults and ask your questions.

Bring your babies, newborn to six months to class. If you have older children, the playroom or nursery is available for a small charge. The discussion leader is a nurse practitioner and mother of five.



October classes include, cooking, flower arranging, statice wreath, ceramics and lace potpourri hoop. More information on these and other classes is available by calling the Y at 834-8371

"Fifteen pounds blocked my career path."
"Being overweight was really holding me back at work. I felt insecure and tired all the time. Then I went to Diet Center. They taught me how to use food as a fuel to make me look good and feel good. In six weeks I lost 15 pounds and 32 inches. Now I have ten times the energy, and I feel like I can master the world."

When you're trying to finance the purchase of a new home, the last thing you need is a "pinball wizard" at your bank. You know the type—ready, willing and able to bounce you from loan officer to assistant vice president to cleaning lady. With no ready answers to your questions. And then your mortgage starts getting bounced from finance company to finance company.
At Braintree Savings Bank, you'll find professional, experienced mortgage experts to help get you through a very important transaction, as smoothly and quickly as possible. With the personal attention you deserve. We'll even meet with you at your home or office, days or evenings.
Don't let a pinball wizard tilt your home buying plans. Call Braintree Savings Bank today at 843-9100 or toll-free at 1-800-634-0103. Offices: 865 Washington Street, South Shore Plaza, Quintree Mall, Granite Plaza.
Will your mortgage banker be a pinball wizard?

Bowman and Co. celebrates with open house

Bowman and Company is celebrating its expanding store at 818 Rte. 3A by hosting an Open House, Sunday, Oct. 11.

From 1 to 5 p.m., new customers and old acquaintances will be able to browse through the many levels of this shop. Owner Sally Toppan of Fair Oaks Lane knows many of her customers by name, size and favorite style. But she is anxious to meet many more.

"This isn't an ordinary boutique," she explained, while leading a brief tour of the shop. "And our customers aren't ordinary. We serve women from 16 to 92. In fact, we just recently dressed a92-year-old woman for her birthday. And she looked wonderful.

"What we offer is year-round clothing. We have wools, but we also have cotton for the woman who may be taking a cruise during the winter," she continued. "We have quite a reputation for our unusual, inexpensive jewelry. They're priced from $8 to $50 , and we want to keep it that way. Our custume jewelry has punch. It is not pretentious, yet you look wonderful wearing it."

Bowman and Company has occupied various corners of this facility for the past four and a half years. The downstairs is currently occupied by building owner Arlene Ferreira's Country House Antiques and Collectibles .

The clothing store includes appliqued sweaters, tops, scarfs, cocktail dresses, leather belts and handbags, and jewelry. The polished wood floors, beamed ceilings and expansive fireplace add to the comfort and casual atmosphere within the shop.

"Everything is very carefully priced," Toppan said, "and we want to keep it that way. Everyone is treated in a personalized manner, and once we know what our customers like, we call them to let them know that something is in stock. We go for a lot of different looks - a lot from California. Loose cowl neck sweaters, belts and casual skirts or slacks with boots. It's a contemporary look for the working girl. I like to think that Bowman and Company is upbeat and alive."

Register for classes at Center

Sign up now for one of the many enjoyable classes at the Cohasset Community Center this Fall.

The Center offers fitness fans a variety of opportunities to get in shape. Dancercise (Wednesday 7:30 - 8:15) will combine elements of dance and aerobics for a quick moving workout. Exercise for fitness and fun (M, W, F or T, Th 9 - 10 a.m.) will really get you in shape, promising improved flexibility, agility and muscle tone. Fitness Equals Fun (Sat. 9 - 10:30) offers men and women a cardio-vascular workout using stretches and low impact aerobics, ideal for those without prior aerobics experience. Similarly, Low Impact Dance Aerobics (T, Th 5 - 6 p.m.) increases flexibility and muscular strength without putting stress on the joints.

Enjoy learning a creative art at the Center. Pressed flower arranging (Monday 7:30 - 9:30) is being offered by Jane Ferguson and Camilla Lowden who were featured in Yankee Magazine. Sweater Sampler Workshop (Tuesday 9 a.m. - noon), taught by Jacqueline Fee, will revolutionize your knitting through its pattern-free method. Stencilling with Nancy Clapp will be offered in the morning and in the evening. Cut-and-Pierced Lampshades is a one-day workshop which will yield a finished shade.

In the health arena, a one day body awareness workshop will offer a holistic approach to health and healing using relaxation, visualization and movement. A course on CPR is being given on Oct. 14, 7 - 11 p.m. Participants will receive certification in CPR.

Landscape Design will yield a plan for landscaping your yard or property. A course in collecting English pottery will teach you how to identify and evaluate antique English wares.

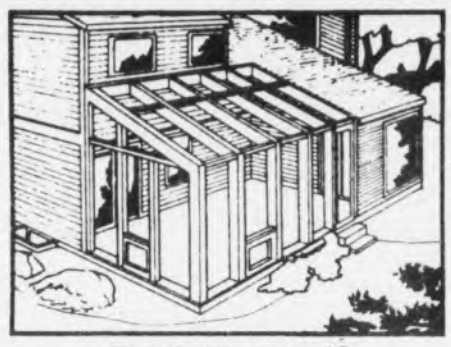
The Cohasset Community Center is a non-profit organization. Membership is open to anyone and everyone is eligible to participate in our classes.

If you would like more information about any of our classes, please call 383-0088 between the hours of 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. Monday through Friday. Give your name and address and we will send you our brochure.

Children's Halloween Fair

The Cohasset Community Center will hold its annual children's Halloween Fair, Oct. 25 from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. on the Common.

The parade around the Common will begin at 1 p.m. Face painting, cupcake decorating, and games will be among the activities.



There will be a pumpkin decorating contest. All pumpkins should be dropped off at the Center by 12 p.m.

In case of rain, the activities will take place in the Center. See you there!

Class schedule change

All gymnastic classes at the Cohasset Community Center will start the week of Oct. 12 because the gym floor is not ready yet. Dance classes will start Oct. 5 as planned. Everyone must use the front door to enter the building. Call 383-0088 if you are unsure of when your class starts.

Second Congregational Church

GUEST SPEAKER SCHEDULED — for Sunday, Oct. 25: Rev. Fred Pease of our Mass. Conference of UCC will be with us on Sunday, Oct. 25, to discuss with us at 11:15 a.m. in Bates Hall, the question: "Does our faith include room for economic justice?" Rev. Pease is the Acting Associate Minister for Mission Outreach and Social Responsibility of the Conference. His talk will explore the draft of a "Considered Statement on Economics and Faith" presented for study at the UCC Annual Conference this year and which will be considered for adoption next year. Our meeting with Rev. Pease on October 25 will be a "kick-off" of our consideration of this report of the Study Commission on Economics and Faith and an opportunity to have input on it when it is considered next year. Hopefully, this first discussion will encourage further study by our members during the Fall and Winter. Please stay after the coffee hour on October 25 to hear Rev. Pease.

YOUTH NEWS

Junior Deacons are planning some very special events for the youth of the church (7 through 12 grade). Coming in November will be a special dinner sponsored and served by the teenagers for all those in our community who live alone and would like to have a family style Thanksgiving dinner scheduled for Sunday, Nov. 22.

The second event will be a trip into Boston to have lunch and see a play, tentatively scheduled for Wednesday, Dec. 23. (Next Junior Deacon meeting will be a speaker training workshop: Tuesday, Oct. 6, 7 p.m.)

Junior Highs (7 & 8 graders) have decided to form a group. Their first event will be a Halloween Party scheduled for Friday, Oct. 30; with dancing, costume judging and munchies! Friends are always welcome!

Wakeman joins association

Samuel W. Wakeman, president of the Natick-based Carlin Insurance Agency Inc., has been accepted for membership in the Builders Association of Greater Boston (BAGB).

Wakeman, a graduate of Layfayette College and the Amos Tuck School at Dartmouth College, is a licensed insurance broker and also holds some important certifications: Chartered Property Casualty Underwriter (CPCU) and Associate in Risk Management (ARM). Wakeman's firm is joining the over 800 builder and associate (those who service and supply builders) members of BAGB.

Town expected to agree with state's revised housing policy

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

The stalemate between state and local officials over a housing program for Cohasset may be nearing an end.

After a meeting Tuesday between town representatives and officials from the state Executive Office of Communities and Development (EOCD), all participants walked away with a renewed spirit of cooperation.

A revised housing policy agreement is expected to be submitted to town officials within the week. If selectmen, the housing authority and the planning board agree to the document, the ban on all state discretionary funds will immediately be lifted.

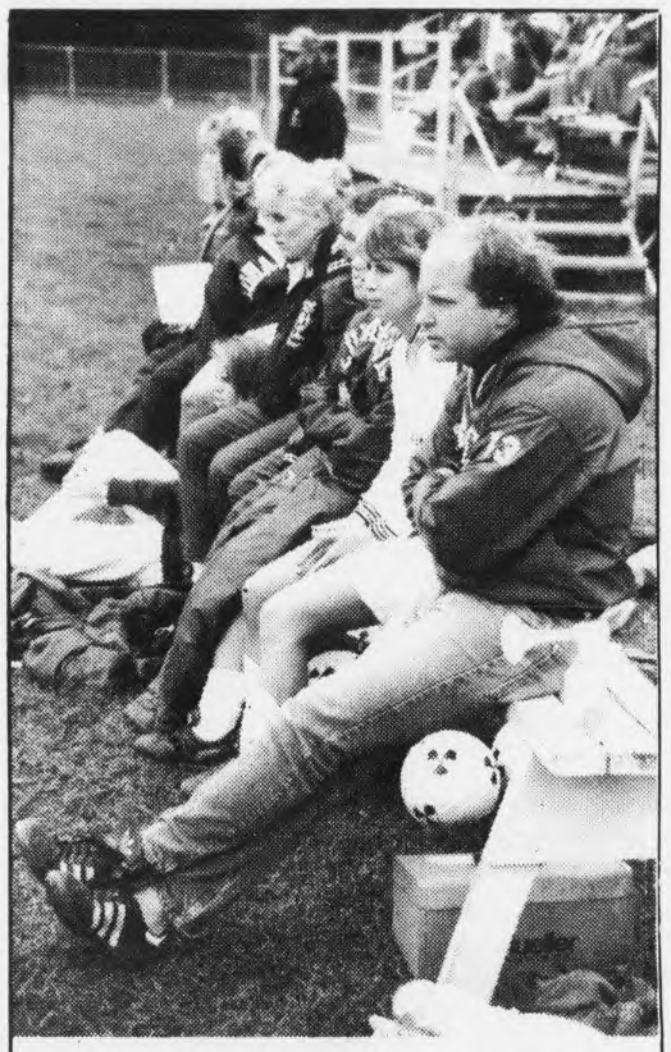
The state house meeting was scheduled at the request of Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, to end what she called, "a form of blackmail by the state against my town."

The blackmail, she said, was last week's reprimand to the town by EOCD. The state labeled the town's housing policies unreasonably restrictive, and withheld all state discretionary funds until a housing policy agreement is agreed to by selectmen, the housing authority, the planning board and EOCD.

Although a draft agreement was sent into the state last month, it did not contain the signatures of selectmen or the housing authority. The state rejected the planning board's agreement, saying it did not meet their requirement for providing an adequate low and moderate income housing plan.

But this week's meeting with EOCD "cleared the air," according to Rep. Murray. She called the meeting, "very encouraging, and very cordial."

She continued, "EOCD is going back to draw up another agreement, taking into consideration everything that everyone had to say at the meeting. It was a good meeting. If everyone had not attended, I doubt the state would have been as responsive."



Among the Cohasset officials in attendance Tuesday were: selectmen Burt Pratt and Martha Gjesteby, Executive Secretary Donald Andrew, planning board members Robert Sturdy, Daniel Cotton, Patrick Plante, John O'Toole and Alfred Moore, and Housing Authority member Leo Happenny.

Rep. Murray said EOCD official Clark Ziegler was "willing to listen and explain what the state was going to do. It cleared a lot of the air. Now they will rewrite the agreement sent previously by the planning board and will resubmit it to us by Thursday or Friday. Then town officials will review the document. If there are any problems, I want them to call me and I'll talk again with EOCD.

"Hopefully, this new document will be agreeable. I've asked the state to immediately remove the lien against the town - as of this moment. They said they couldn't until that document is signed. Once it is, we've been assured it will be lifted. I resent this form of blackmail against the town. And my understanding is that the lien will be lifted once that agreement is signed."

Planning board Chairman Sturdy agreed with Rep. Murray's positive assessment of the meeting with EOCD. "I have every reason to expect that this document will be acceptable to the planning board. We went through the document line by line and I expect

Fields in bad condition; officials disagree on solution

On a scale of one to ten, our athletic fields are a two.

Deplorable. That's how Cohasset's athletic director ranks the varsity playing fields.

"They're terrible," according to Clark Chatterton. "Of all the towns we play, I'd say there may be one school system that has worse fields than ours. The kids know it, and we can't hide the truth anymore. They're in really tough shape."

Kenneth Ekberg, principal of the Deer Hill School, agreed with that assessment - an observation he made about three years ago with Chatterton.

The advisory committee agreed, too. But they disagree with the current solution which will be presented to special town meeting, Oct. 26.

Ekberg recalled, "We (Chatterton and he) were standing together after a varsity football game, it was rainy and we were the only two left in the stands. We looked at the field which was just a mess, and we said, 'we've got to do something about this.' That was the beginning for us," Ekberg recalled.

Since that time, a group of residents have worked hundreds of hours, learning to hurdle past bureaucratic obstacles and persistent objections.

The Milliken Field Improvement Committee faces another test at the Oct. 26 special town meeting. At that time, they will ask the town for as much as $661,000 to construct a varsity football and soccer field behind the high school. Their financial requests could scale higher if that first article is approved by voters.

According to Ekberg, if the article is passed, a second article will request an additional $103,098 for a textured polyurethane surface on the running track at Lillard Field; a third article will seek approximately $113,850 for bleachers at the field. And a fourth article will ask for a maximum of $79,034 for outdoor lighting fixtures at the varsity athletic field.

The additional three articles are an addendum to the primary article which is number nine in the warrant, he explained. "If town meeting rejects the other three, nothing will prevent us from coming back in the future and asking once again," he stated.

The citizens' committee, which was appointed by selectmen, began their work in 1985 with the blessings of selectmen, the school committee, the school facilities committee and the recreation commission. "Everyone thought the idea was great," Ekberg stated, "but it was a question of fiscal constraints."

At a special town meeting in March, 1985, the citizens' group asked for and received $20,000 to complete engineering specifications and plans for the Milliken Field renovation project. "I believe we won that vote by a three or four-vote margin," he recalled.

Cambridge land planner Francis Fox Spinks was hired to complete the plans, which originally included renovations to Milliken Field only.

"Our basic premise at that time," he said, "was not to nickel and dime this project. We wanted a quality facility. Our goal was to determine the costs and to make

Firefighter gets OK to remain on job

Firefighter William Sestito will remain on the department.

Civil Service overturned a previous ruling from the Department of Personnel Administration which determined the 21 year-old firefighter would have to leave the force because he has diabetes.

Sestito, a lifelong resident of Cohasset, said he was "really glad and relieved" to hear the news. He was informed of the commission's decision last week.

A call firefighter for the past two and a-half years, Sestito appealed the decision rendered in August by the Department of Personnel Administration. The department ruled he was medically ineligible to be named a permanent fireighter. The department's medical occupational review panel decided he was unable to perform the duties of a firefighter "because of juvenile onset insulin diabetes. This is a condition which is adversely affected by irregular hours, mealtimes, levels of physical activities, prolonged hours and stressful situations. All of which we normally encounter in performances of the duties of a firefighter."

Sestito said his medical condition, which he has controlled through daily insulin injections for eight years, is stabilized. He denied it would have any adverse

Education the vaccine against AIDS

AIDS awareness month came to a crescendo at town hall last week. A panel presentation was held which focused on prevention of the disease through education.

Public Health Nurse Mary Ann Hansen filled the shoes of moderator Jeanne Blake, medical reporter for WBZ-TV, who ironically called in sick.

Hansen introduced an extraordinary panel of experts to a crowd of about fifty interested listeners. The panel consisted of Jeff Epperly, AIDS action committee health educator; Mindy Mazur, public health education advisory for the Greater Boston AIDS program; Jane Parker from the Visiting Nurses of American, from the South Shore Hospice; C. Michael Bliss, M.D., a professor at the B.U. Medical center; and Stephen Hart, superintendent of the Cohasset Public Schools.

When Jeff Epperly joined the AIDS in 1982 he was in for quite a surprise, "No one knew how serious it would get." said Epperly

"Right now education is the only vaccine we have," he continued. "You are going to walk out of here tonight not knowing everything you need to know but it will definitely get you thinking about things."

According to Epperly the disease originated in monkeys in Africa. Presently there are 42,000 cases of the morbidity in America. 1,100 of those cases are in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Epperly answered many questions right off the bat when he listed some of the ways that you cannot contract the disease. AIDS cannot be transmitted through casual contact, public telephones, sneezing, shaking hands, hugging or from raw meat in the supermarket.

"AIDS is transmitted through blood and blood products," said Epperly. As of 1985, Epperly explained all donated blood has been successfully screened for the disease.

Hydrant tests Oct. 15

The Scituate Department of Public Works Water Division will be conducting hydrant flow tests in North Scituate and South Main St., Cohasset at the town line on Thursday night, Oct. 15.

Although this work will be done at night after 11 p.m. to minimize inconvenience to consumers, there will be some temporary discoloration of the water. Care should be taken to avoid washing clothes until after the water clears. The discolored water is caused from dislodged rust deposits in the water main, and poses no threat to public health.

The affected areas will be North Scituate and the South Main St., Beechwood St. area of Cohasset. For assistance or to answer any questions, please call Scituate water division supervisor Richard Kenney at 545-6700 ext. 264.

Evergreen hearings over

The planning board will not hold any further public hearings regarding the Evergreen Lane access proposal.

After meeting last week with concerned abuttors, the board decided "the issue is over."

The conservation commission has withdrawn its support of a special town meeting article which proposes a swap of land between developer Paul Ferrini and the school department. Ferrini has requested a 20-feet by 160-feet parcel of school-controlled land off Rte. 3A in exchange for a 5,000 square foot parcel he owns in that vacinity.

The developer intends to use the school property as an access onto Evergreen Lane from three house lots he plans to build along Rte. 3A. The planning board originally suggested the Evergreen Lane access option, rather than having the perspective homeowners exiting onto Rte. 3A.

But abuttors to the property along Evergreen Lane and Old Pasture Road have voiced their objections to several town boards. They have repeatedly stated an access onto Evergreen Lane will disturb the protected wetlands there, and will cause contamination of nearby Peppermint Brook, a tributary of Lily Pond.

Last week, the conservation commission withdrew their support of the article, based on advice from their consulting engineer. Planning board members said if a compromise plan is not worked out between the commission and the developer, they will likely withdraw the article on the floor of town meeting.

"The issue is over as far as everyone wants their neighborhood to stay the way it is," chairman Robert Sturdy stated. "We have met with these abuttors and they have presented no new material to us. We are not particularly sympathetic to their demands. We don't feel there will be a significant impact by three houses, but because there are conservation problems, we will have to wait and see."

Complaint filed

An outspoken opponent to the sale of the Independence Building has filed a complaint in Superior Court, asking that a recent decision by the zoning board be ruled invalid.

Mary Klein, who calls herself a low-income resident of the town, acted as her own attorney in filing the complaint against the zoning board. She stated that the board's zoning power "a creature of thirty years evolution has become a beast undermining its original purpose emerging as an instrument for surpressing the rights of the low income to housing."

The complaint, which was filed by Klein late last month. She states that the recent decision by the zoning board to allow variances of town bylaws to the Independence Hall property on Main Street was erroneous.

She argued that the variances sought by selectmen "are specifically for the purpose of sweetening the sale to a private individual for private use a parcel with building . . . but is also part of town common which should be preserved forever for this use of the public, more specifically for use of the low income residents of the town for low and moderate income housing."

Klein has repeatedly asked selectmen to cancel the impending sale of the town-owned building so the vacant property may be converted into low and moderate income housing units.

In September, the zoning board granted variances to the property, which allowed a small portion of town common land adjacent to the building to be included in the property's deed. Klein stated the zoning board moved beyond its legal authority by granting the variances to town common land.

In the complaint, Klein also noted that the zoning board's decision did not take into account the hardship of the petitioner (the town), should the variance not be allowed. The board minimized the hardships to be imposed should the variances be granted, she stated. "Furthermore, the discussion of hardships imposed by the granting of the variance fails to mention the hardship to the town's low and moderate income residents should that building be lost for that genuine and pressing public need, their housing."

Glades tour

A limited number of reservations can still be ac cepted for the Cohasset Historical Society's Sunday, Oct. 18 tour of the historic Glades estate at Minot, North Scituate.

Since the maximum number of visitors must be limited to 200 for this unique and unusual tour, reservations must be handled on a first-come first-serve basis. Members and friends of the Historical Society are invited to join the tour by reserving a place as soon as is possible.

Reservations are $7.50 per person. To place reservations, please send check to: Cohasset Historical Society, 14 Summer St., Cohasset, MA 02025. The tour will be divided into three groups, the first at 1 p.m., the second at 2 p.m. and the third at 3 p.m. Please indicate which tour time you wish to attend. Parking for the tour will be at the Scituate Town parking lot on Bailey Causeway, Minot, where a bus will take visitors to the site of the tour.

Plan to join the Cohasset Historical Society on this most interesting special occasion. The Society's phone number is 383-6930 should additional inquiry be desired.

Smelt fishing tradition lives on in Cohasset

By Bob Tis
Mariner staff

Although not thriving, the old tradition of smelt fishing is still alive in Cohasset. Smelt fishing is more of a ritual of sorts to the hearty souls that man the docks of local harbors each year.

Most people would not find the old New England tradition of smelting fun. Many people would loathe every aspect of this activity. First off, it is always cold when the smelt are actually running, most often it is absolutely miserable. Secondly to feed two people it is necessary to catch about two dozen smelt. They hardly put up any sort of a fight at all, and if you do catch enough to make a meal, contrary to a minority opinion of a brave few, they don't taste too good.

Smelt are a small, 7 to 10 inches long, ocean fish that have been known enter New England harbors, sometimes in great masses, after the weather has got cold enough for people to not want to go outside anymore. They feed on most any sort of bait whatsoever, but experts prefer baby brine shrimp, sea worms or regular garden worms. As of this morning a weeks worth of frozen shrimp costs one dollar at Trasks tackle. The word from Peter Trask is that some of the piers in Bailey's creek have provided him with some of his largest smelt catches. He credits the discovery of this smelting hole to an elderly Italian fisherman from Hill Street who reportedly would consistantly capture four and five dozen of species in a few hours.

The Yacht club pier and the Memorial pier on Border Street have annually been the most heavily fished docks. This year has shown little action so far but the smelt will surely arrive as the blue fish, searching for warmer water, drive them into the harbor. Reports of large catches have radiated from the A Street pier in Hull, the pier directly across from Hull High School and from the Scituate harbor docks.

One good aspect of smelt fishing is the relatively low investment in equipment in relation to the hours of legitimate sport that it might yield. The only necessary items for a smelt fisherman are a bamboo pole, a few yards of cheap line, one or two hooks and maybe a coathanger to act as a combination weight and a spreader for an extra baited hook in the water if so desired.

Many of the seasoned veterans sport handcrafted, "Smelt boxes" that function as a pillowed bench, a receptacle for storing the days catch, and a tackle/tool box. Many boxes, in tribute to the famed ingenuity of the New England smelt fishermen, come complete with beverage holders, rod supports, thermos and lantern clip-ons and built on bottle openers.

A common rig is simply a bucket covered with a piece of wood used for a bench; the wood having a small hole cut in between the fishermens legs to deposit the catch. The reason for this complexity is that when the smelt start to bite, they really bite. Often a school of smelt will bite for hours, sometimes only for a few minutes. This being the case, a smelt fishermen has no time to waste and carefully economizes his actions, as to have the hook unbaited and out of the water for the shortest possible amount of time. A run of smelt can be more exciting than watching a dog fight, batting with bases loaded in the ninth and catching a touchdown pass all rolled into one. The adrenalin rush is very similar anyway.

Most often smelting is very slow. It is a waiting game. Each fisherman harbors different theories. Some jig their rods, some fish near the bottom, most fish close to the top. Some use two rods with up to four hooks, some use one. The discussion of ones strategy is paramount to the overall experience of smelt fishing.

Age is truly a revered quality in smelt fishermen. The more seasons that someone has fished the better he is. There is no showing off on the docks, equipment is secondary to technique.

Discussion is the most interesting part of smelt fishing. Piers are annually lined with between ten and twenty experienced fishermen in a large panel sort of a discussion. Comments are held almost exclusively to the present and the near present. They usually focus on some aspect of New England fishing but this is by no means a rule. Discussion is usually smiled upon during long breaks before bites, it is often frowned upon while a school is biting heavily. Experience is the only qualification for entering debate. Casual observers to the sport are casually ignored.

In documenting some highlights of Smelt fishing this week this reporter managed to bag twenty-seven smelt in one early morning outing and nothing but a cold in a second outing. A man identified as Don related the story of hooking a baby seal in Provincetown while blue fishing last week in Provinetown.

"I had to wrestle in the waves with the little sucker to get the hook out of its mouth," he said.

This reminded an other panelist on the A Street pier of an instance in Cohasset Harbor when he was bringing in a smelt and a seagull took off with the catch and about fifty feet of line.

The story of the morning was offered by a source that wished to remain unidentified. Fishing on the previous morning at high tide a bluefish devoured a smelt on his hook and all of a sudden was in the control of a man with a small bamboo pole, which as he puts it, "is now history."

A question of validity was immediately raised.

One smelter, named Pete gave an informal seminar on fastening a shrimp on a hook. Pete also discussed the importance of fingerless fishing gloves and blamed his nonexistent catch on the breaking of his standard ritual of having tiny marshmallows in his hot chocolate. Another fishermen described in detail why he parked his pick up truck in his father-in-laws vegetable garden the night before.

An overwhelming majority of smelt fishermen had absolutely no sympathy for the striking National Football League players. One solitary female smelter related a very interesting story about a smelting club on the West Coast that requires members to bite off the head of the small gamefish and spit it into the air as a entrance requirement for their society.

Fortunately for the squeamish there is no entrance, age or sex requirement to become a smelt fishermen yet, in Cohasset. In fact, lack of requirements and the down home good naturedness of this sport makes it a nice cheap way to entertain ones self, for seasoned veterans and rookies alike, this fall.

Just make sure you dress warm, and that you are not too entirely intent on catching a lot of fish. Until then, happy smelting!

Solid waste management seminar set for Oct. 24

By Marilyn Jackson
Special to the News

The cost of disposing trash is soaring, outstripping other items in municipal budgets.

Some South Shore communities are running out of space in their landfills, while others no longer operate such sites and must rely on negotiating the best contract possible with a waste hauler.

A quick survey of costs in the 10 towns which are members of the South Shore Coalition shows disposal costs range from $126,000 in Scituate to $2.72 million in Weymouth.

Scituate's costs, however, do not include the leasing of equipment to operate the landfill, according to Paul Scott, town engineer.

On Saturday, Oct. 24, the South Shore Coalition will hold a daylong seminar at Norwell High School for local officials — selectmen, planning boards, conservation commissions, health boards, public works officials and others — on solid waste management planning.

This conference will provide an opportunity to learn about the components of a regional solid waste management plan, according to Marshfield's Jean Christiansen who serves as the coalition's executive director.

The current practices of disposing solid waste as well as alternatives — waste-to-energy, nonburn, landfill, recycling, composting — will be discussed.

In addition, several other topics will be addressed: pending legislation, health issues and packaging.

Legal, financial and procurement issues, such as public versus private ownership, will be discussed.

"I have been touring the state with (Lt. Gov.) Evelyn Murphy for Blueprint 2000," said state Sen. William Golden, D-Weymouth, "and the most significant issue people raise is solid waste.

"It's probably the most important issue.

"The enormous increase in costs of solid waste management will very quickly take funds away from education, public safety and other needs," Golden said.

"Also," he noted, "it is a most important environmental issue, as leachates from landfills are affecting the quality of our groundwater.

"Many of our solid waste landfills could become hazardous waste sites in the future.

"Massburn is a quick fix solution, an out-of-sight generate 100,000 tons of solid waste a year," Wiegand said. "That does not include commercial waste.

"The price ranges from $16 to $20 a ton to $95 a ton, and is quickly approaching $100. We're looking for long-term solutions and stabilizing the price," she said.

The conference, she said, "is an educational effort to approach. It's a pea and shell game with pollutants, creating a new problem of air emissions and a (different) landfill end product," Golden said.

He called for the cooperation of the coalition towns to address the issue of solid waste management in an intelligent, moral and ethical manner.

He proposed the formation of an eco-region which would develop a regional management plan for solid waste disposal which would not only be economical but ecological as well.

"It cannot be one or the other; we need both," he said. Furthermore, he added, communities must accept responsibility in addressing the issue. They cannot have a "NIMBY" — not-in-my-back-yard — attitude.

Hanover Selectman Janet O'Brien, chairman of the coalition, said it is important to cooperate regionally.

"Problems don't stop at the town borders," she said. "What we do affects someone else."

She said since the formation of the coalition, she has seen a commitment among town officials, "a sense of urgency, to work together and address the serious problems we all face — transportation, solid waste, water resources.

"If we don't dispose of solid waste in safe ways, it affects our water resources," she said. "We've come a long way to work cooperatively."

Judith Wiegand, a planner for the Metropolitan Area Planning Council which represents 101 communities, formed a solid waste subcommittee 20 months ago with coalition members.

The South Shore Coalition is one of five MAPC subregions.

"There are about 180,000 residents in the 10 towns who introduce proposals of solid waste management planning.

She said she hoped a resolution could be drafted at the end of the conference dealing with landfills, waste-to-energy plants, recycling — possibly mandatory — and composting which could be presented at the respective annual town meetings.

"One of my chief interests is recycling," said Hull Selectman Stephen Myers. "We're at an interesting point in time. What was out of sight was out of mind.

"But (solid waste disposal) is becoming a crisis for many communities as public awareness increases of our limited resources."

He said he saw a combination of four means of disposal as the solution to the problem: using landfills, which are disappearing; composting; constructing waste-to-energy facilities, and mandatory recycling for everything else.

"We will reduce waste. We'll have a cleaner product that goes into the waste-to-energy plant, and we'll save valuable resources," Myers said.

"We must look ahead 50 to 100 years; otherwise, we are shortsighted."

Golden said the Senate recently passed an amendment to the solid waste bill which would provide $175,000 for a regional model of a solid waste management plan which would include recycling, landfill and hazardous waste pre-treatment.

"I hope the South Shore will be that model program," said Golden.

Wellesley has a mandatory recycling program, Myers pointed out.

He said Camden, N.J., recently instituted a mandatory recycling program and there is a 55 percent compliance rate.

"There is a direct correlation between the level of education. I would think there would be a high level of compliance on the South Shore.

"The problem we face now is trying to get communities to not go off on their own when we're trying to develop a regional plan."

Although the seminar is free, a $10 fee will be charged to cover lunch. Reservations must be made by Friday, Oct. 16, to guarantee lunch.

Checks should be made payable to the South Shore Coalition, Norwell Town Offices, 345 Main St., Norwell 02061.

LWV hosts nuclear plant debate

By Judy Foley
Mariner staff

Senator William Golden of Weymouth, a staunch opponent to the reopening of the Pilgrim nuclear power plant, had a debate of sorts Tuesday on the value of nuclear energy with Ronald Murray Campbell of Cohasset, a nuclear engineer and president of the Massachusetts Voice for Energy, a pro-nuclear power group.

The Scituate League of Women Voters heard both sides of the story during a forum on nuclear power at the First Trinitarian Church in Scituate.

Campbell, who has 40 years experience in the nuclear energy field, told the league members that he's had little personal experience with the Pilgrim plant in Plymouth, but that he favors increased use of nuclear power to meet the country's growing energy needs.

Golden, on the other hand, agreed that nuclear energy should be part of the country's total energy mix, but that he was against the idea of reopening the Pilgrim plant.

The League of Women Voters' official stance on the issue is that, while it opposes increased reliance on nuclear energy, it also recognizes its place as part of the country's energy sources.

While those general statements dampened a clear-cut debate about either the future of nuclear energy in general or the fate of the Pilgrim plant in particular, there were ample opportunities for some sharp exchanges.

The Pilgrim plant in Plymouth has been shut down since April 1986. Boston Edison began refueling at the plant Sept. 29 and intends to seek permission to resume operations in a month or two.

Campbell said increases in population and more need for electricty makes nuclear power inevitable. "The world is not going to have a nuclear-free future," he said.

He warned that reliance on fossil fuels such as oil and coal will put future sources at risk and will add to problems like acid rain and the "greenhouse effect" on the earth's atmosphere.

Campbell acknowledged that nuclear power involves some risks, but pointed out that fire and electricity also involve risks to man. "We cannot do without it."

The problem in New England is becoming even more serious, he said, since the amount of electricity used during peak hours is increasing each season. "In New England we used to have peak hours in the winter. Now we also have them in the summer. Each season the peak usage is higher than the peak before it."

Utility companies must plan on having enough facilities to provide 20 percent over the peak requirements to prevent shortages in case of malfunctions during peak electric use, Campbell said.

He said other countries, which modeled their early nuclear power systems on the United States' models, have forged ahead of the U.S. "Of all industrial states, the United States has the smallest percentage of nuclear power in the world."

Strict regulations on nuclear power plants are restricting new construction, he charged.

"That bubble is going to burst," he said. "It won't last too long."

Campbell agreed that Boston Edison has not earned high marks for management of the Pilgrim plant. "But that doesn't mean that people need to be fearful. The plant has been in operation for a number of years already."

Campbell also pushed aside complaints about Boston Edison's emergency response plans in case of an accident at the Plymouth plant.

"An emergency response plan is not going to keep us safe. Careful engineering and efficient management is going to keep us safe. The emergency response plan is only the last line of defense in case of a serious accident."

He pointed to the evacuation results at the Chernobyl nuclear accident in Russia. "Even with primitive roads, lack of automobiles and poor communications, they were able to evacuate people in an 18-mile radius." He said the Russians reported 31 deaths as a result of the accident, "most from a combination of burns and radiation at the plant itself.

"Why should we be upset with some difficulties in our emergency response plans, when we have superior roads, transportation and communications that we can be proud of."

Golden said he welcomed the chance to debate Campbell "since Boston Edison refused to appear here today."

The Weymouth senator agreed that "nuclear technology should be examined as part of our total energy mix, but nuclear energy as it now exists should not be continued."

He said he's fighting the reopening of the Pilgrim plant for three reasons because of a history of poor management, questions on the structural safety of the Mark I containment vessel, and what he called "grossly inadequate emergency response plans."

Golden picked up the Chernobyl theme.

"I can see the Russians sitting around before the Chernobyl accident telling each other, 'That plant will never explode. We know the technology works. The risks are minimal. There is more of a chance to be killed in an auto accident in Moscow.'

"I've spoken over the years with many nuclear scientists and many who worked with Boston Edison. My concern is that some people honestly believe that there is no risk at Pilgrim."

He said Boston Edison head Stephen Sweeney told a congressional hearing in 1982 that he considered nuclear power "just another way to boil water," and charged Edison officials with striving to meet only the minimal requirements of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission. The NCR, he added, started as a watchdog agency, "but in the 70's and 80's, as the industry has come under heavy fire, has increasingly become an advocate" of the ☐ Caitlin Staunton, daughter of John and Mary Staunton of Rustic Drive, is a 1987 graduate of Cohasset High School. She was a senior editor of the yearbook, a member of National Honor Society, the drama club, student council, as well as the soccer, track, and basketball teams.

☐ Toni E. Cann has been named to Wheaton's NCAA Division III soccer team.

Cann, a freshman at Wheaton College, is the daughter of Rita and Irving Cann of Cedar Acres Lane.

The soccer team's schedule is a tough one that includes games against some of the best Division II and Division III college teams across New England.

☐ Joe Berkeley, formerly of Lantern Lane, Cohasset, has been nominated for a Rhodes, a Fulbright, Marshall and a Rotary Scholarship. Joe attended the Osgood and Deer Hill schools and then went on to St. George's prep school in Newport, R.I. Joe is currently a senior at Tufts University and has maintained a 4.0. He has been captain of the varsity sailing team since he was a sophomore.

Joe spent his summer as a copywriter at a Boston ad agency. He taught sailing every night and weekends at the Boston Sailing Center.

Joe resides with his brother Will and his parents Mary and Jay Kakas at Spinnaker Island.

☐ The Deer Hill School is issuing a plea for all of us to help them . . . they are collecting the UPC labels off of any Prince Spaghetti product, in the hopes of earning a Cam corder (that's a VCR camera for those of you that don't know). They need 25,000 labels and must have them by the end of February. To donate your label, just give them to any Deer Hill Student or call the school.

☐ While your mind is on donating, the George H. Mealey Post Yard Sale is going to be held this Saturday, and they are looking for more donations. They have a lot of articles gathered, so the sale should be a grand one, but if you have something else to add, it will be even better. They will be happy to pick up your articles, call Karen Fiori at 383-0703. The sale will take place at 44 Beechwood Street from 10-3 this Saturday.

☐ Had a call from Nanci and Walt Sweeney last week, to let us know that they will be arriving at the end of this month (not last as originally printed, due to change in flight). It certainly will be good to see them again, though they will be busy campaigning for "the Duke" so their time will be busy!

☐ Silent bidding for art items in the South Shore Art Center's auction will be open to the public today. Go to the Center, see the works available, then place your bids. It sure is a good idea, and a good way to support the Center and its lovely new location! The bidding ends on Saturday, when the dinner auction will take place.

☐ Mr. and Mr. Anthony Ostrom certainly had a great time recently, at the Tiffany and Co. 150th anniversary gala, held at the Museum of Fine Arts. Mr. Ostrom is the Divisional Vice President of Tiffany & Co.

☐ Next week is "Spirit Week" at CHS, and it should be as successful as last year's, if not more so. Monday is hat day sunglasses day; Tuesday is pajama day, Wednesday is Inside-out Day; Thursday is Clash Day; and, Friday is blue/white Spirit day, complete with a pep rally. Saturday promises to be the best of all, with a homecoming parade, a homecoming king and queen selection, and a football game against Norwell. Saturday night is the Homecoming Dance. So, when you see students (and teachers) dressed "strangely" next week, give them a round of applause — they have "SPIRIT." And be sure to do your part by supporting the festivities on Saturday!!

☐ We hear that Mike Londergan's wedding was a real good time, and that it was a mini-reunion as well. Here's to the new Mr. and Mrs. Michael Londergan, Mike and Mary.

☐ Our congratulations go to Dan Cotton and his lovely wife Jean, who recently celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary.

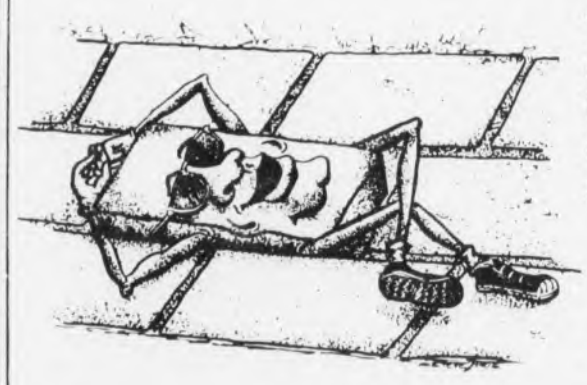
☐ The Carlin Insurance Agency Inc. has announced that Samuel W. Wakeman who is its president, has been accepted for membership in the Builders Association of Greater Boston. How do these already busy men ever fit all of this into their schedules? Congratulations to you, Mr. Wakeman!

☐ Sara Froio certainly is a wonderful sister . . . she attends every one of her brothers football games, and even totes a camera so that she can get all of the key plays that they make (there isn't enough film in the camera to catch them all, they are outstanding players).

☐ Good News . . . the Bread Shop is open! Located at 11 Elm Street, you can get your favorite breads plus a lot more. We defy anyone to just walk by, its aromas make you want to buy one of each!!



☐ A lot of people tuned in to NESN last Saturday to watch Bob Meers play football for Conn. against B.U. Mike plays for CHS, so he played in the afternoon . . . quite a football day for the Meers family, again!

☐ That's all of the news from here . . . keep us up-to-date with your happenings!

Keep talking

The meeting between town officials and representatives of the state Executive Office of Communities and Development (EOCD), were from all accounts, productive.

That is good news, especially when compared to the not unexpected but nevertheless distressing, news we received from the state last week. That news was the official letter reprimanding Cohasset for its shortsighted housing programs, and labeling us unreasonably restrictive.

Not only we were stuck with that unattractive label, we were threatened with the immediate suspension of all state discretionary funds. In plain language, that means the state was going to hold up the $2.6 million sewer project.

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray did not enjoy this bureaucratic form of blackmail. "That's what I call it, and I don't like it when the state acts this way - especially to my town," she said.

She then scheduled a meeting between the local officials involved in this situation, and the state officials responsible for the reprimand. The meeting was arranged at the state house, with several town board members in attendance.

It was cordial, cooperative meeting from all accounts. Everyone left Tuesday's two-hour session feeling a renewed sense of commitment to successfully conclude this difficult issue.

They agreed that a face-to-face meeting between the primary people involved was a necessary step to take. It was not confrontational, but cooperative and congenial, and that made all the difference.

Even Executive Secretary Donald Andrew, who has been unsuccessful in his repeated attempts to telephone EOCD officials in the past month, received assurances that will no longer occur. Just as he was ready to close the file on this one, he feels confident that a chord of cooperation has been struck.

We will know by the end of this week whether there is a basis for all this good will and optimism. By that time, EOCD should have submitted a slightly revised housing agreement to the town. If the housing authority, selectmen and the planning board agree to this document, and sign it, the reprimand and all of its fearsome repercussions, will be immediately vacated.

We sincerely hope everyone's sense of positive cooperation is not without reason. We hope the state is as sincere as our counterparts in Cohasset, and that a new document will spell the end of this period of illwill and disillusionment.

It is time for the state to begin acting in a manner more sensitive to the needs of the communities it serves. Surely real or perceived blackmail is not the proper method of providing adequate housing for everyone.

Keeping those lines of communication will be a necessary link in our efforts to comply with this state mandate. And state officials should continue to work together, not against towns such as Cohasset, that are clearly not opposed to finding adequate housing for all its residents.

Right to disagree

(This letter was written to the Cohasset School Committee last week. Ed.)

To the editor:

We were invited to the School Committee meeting last evening (Oct. 5) to "more fully discuss the advantages of this planned course of action" regarding the proposed land swap.

Letters

The School Committee did not want to discuss the issues. Instead you attempted to exert a public apology from me because of a letter we had written criticizing actions of the School Committee.

That letter was written because you either failed to read, notice or reply to neighborhood concerns at the time of your September 8 afternoon meeting. (See Attachment #3) Again last night the concerns of residents were not addressed by your committee.

In this year of the Bicentennial of our Constitution you should recognize our right to disagree and voice our opinions. As citizens of this country we have the right and sometimes the duty to publicly oppose actions of elected committees. This is called Freedom of Speech.

New fields proposal . . .

this thing happen for the town."

The project engineer surmised that a major cost factor in this plan would be the proposed bathroom and storage facilities. A septic system and a storage building would add considerably to the costs, the committee was informed.

It soon became clear that an easier and less expensive alternative would be to move the bulk of the plan over to Lillard Field behind the high school. "There, we could use the bathroom facilities in the locker room, and the dressing rooms are right there, along with the storage area near Clark's office. It made more sense," Ekberg said.

One unexpected expense, however, was the relocation of a 12-inch water main at the field. That was one more hurdle the engineers successfully overcame to the water department's satisfaction.

A serious obstacle for the group was the realization that $20,000 worth of engineering work would not satisfactorily complete their original plans for the renovation project. Although former Building Inspector Edward Poskus estimated the project would total $300,000, it became clear to Spinks that the costs would be more in the $600,000 range.

"Now remember," Ekberg said. "The $20,000 contract was to cover our estimate of $300,000 worth of plans. There was no way Spinks could work on plans that would clearly double that amount."

Although the advisory board denied the committee's initial reserve fund transfer request of $16,000 for additional engineering plans, the special town meeting in April, 1987 approved the amount.

"We figured we saved the project $200,000 by having the existing bathroom and storage facilities at the high school. But the location of the water pipe, and the low first estimate by Mr. Poskus really threw off our original project price," Ekberg explained.

By a substantial margin, town meeting supported the additional money.

Spinks was back to the drawing board to complete the plans for the field renovation. In the meantime, the committee paid close attention to the timing of the upcoming special town meeting. "We didn't know if it would be in July, August, or September. We wanted to get to this town meeting with our bid documents in hand and specific prices to quote. We guessed October, and prepared four warrant articles for selectmen to submit into the warrant," Ekberg explained.

"We followed the bidding procedure which is complicated and lengthy. The bids are due back and will be opened Oct. 19. Thus far, eight sets of drawings have been taken out, so we'll have no more than that number of bids for the project. We hope to have the specs for at least our first article and the second article, which is the major portion of the project," he continued.

By special town meeting, the committee will have specific prices for the project, with specific contractors at guaranteed prices. And if the project exceeds the $661,000 base figure, Ekberg figured that will be forced to delete certain portions of the plan.

The advisory committee discussed the four warrant articles at their meeting last week and voted 4 to 1 not to recommend them at the special town meeting.

Chairman Jane Goedecke emphasized that each committee member "feels strongly that the playing fields need to be improved. But the feeling of the majority was that the cost and the scale of this plan was too grand, too elegant for a town this size and with the size of our tax base.

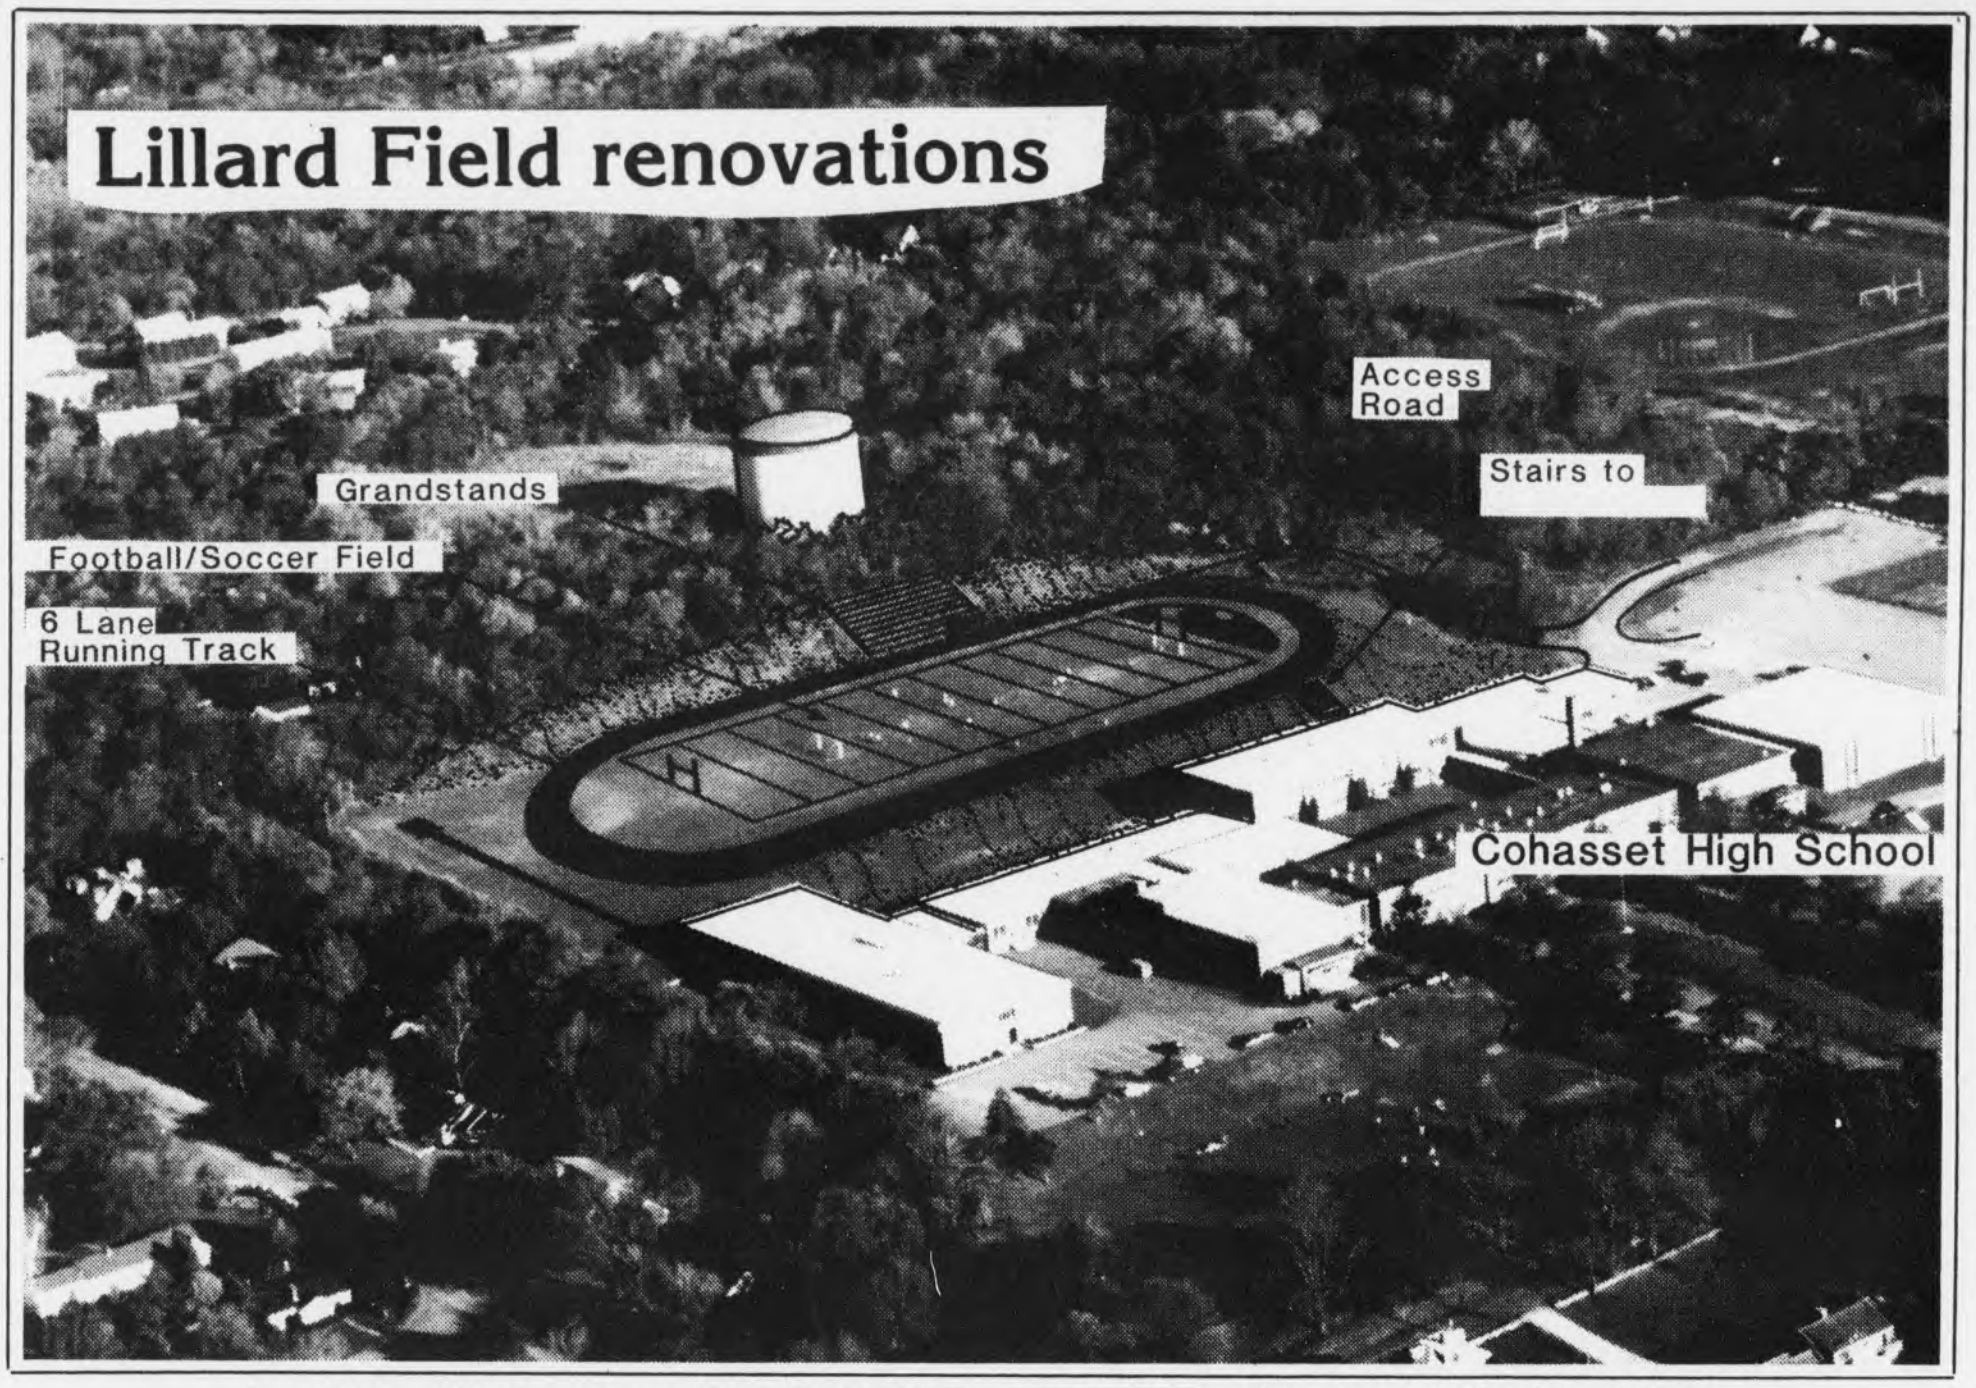
"Two members of our committee stated that if this project came in at about a half-million dollars, that would be more reasonable. We questioned the need for an all-weather track when track is not at this point a major sport. We feel strongly that if town meeting passed the $661,000 project, it would assure the passage sometime later of all the other articles. We were resistant to that.

"The committee hopes the issue is not dead - that it will be revived," she continued. "But the general feeling of the committee is that we really don't like deciding on major financial issues at a special town meeting. We are definitely against that."

Ekberg and Chatterton acknowledge the track teams are down in numbers from previous years. "Perhaps one reason is because of the facility they have," Ekberg suggested. "It's downright dangerous there with baseball practicing alongside the track team - javelins are being thrown all over the field, and someone could easily be hurt by a baseball."

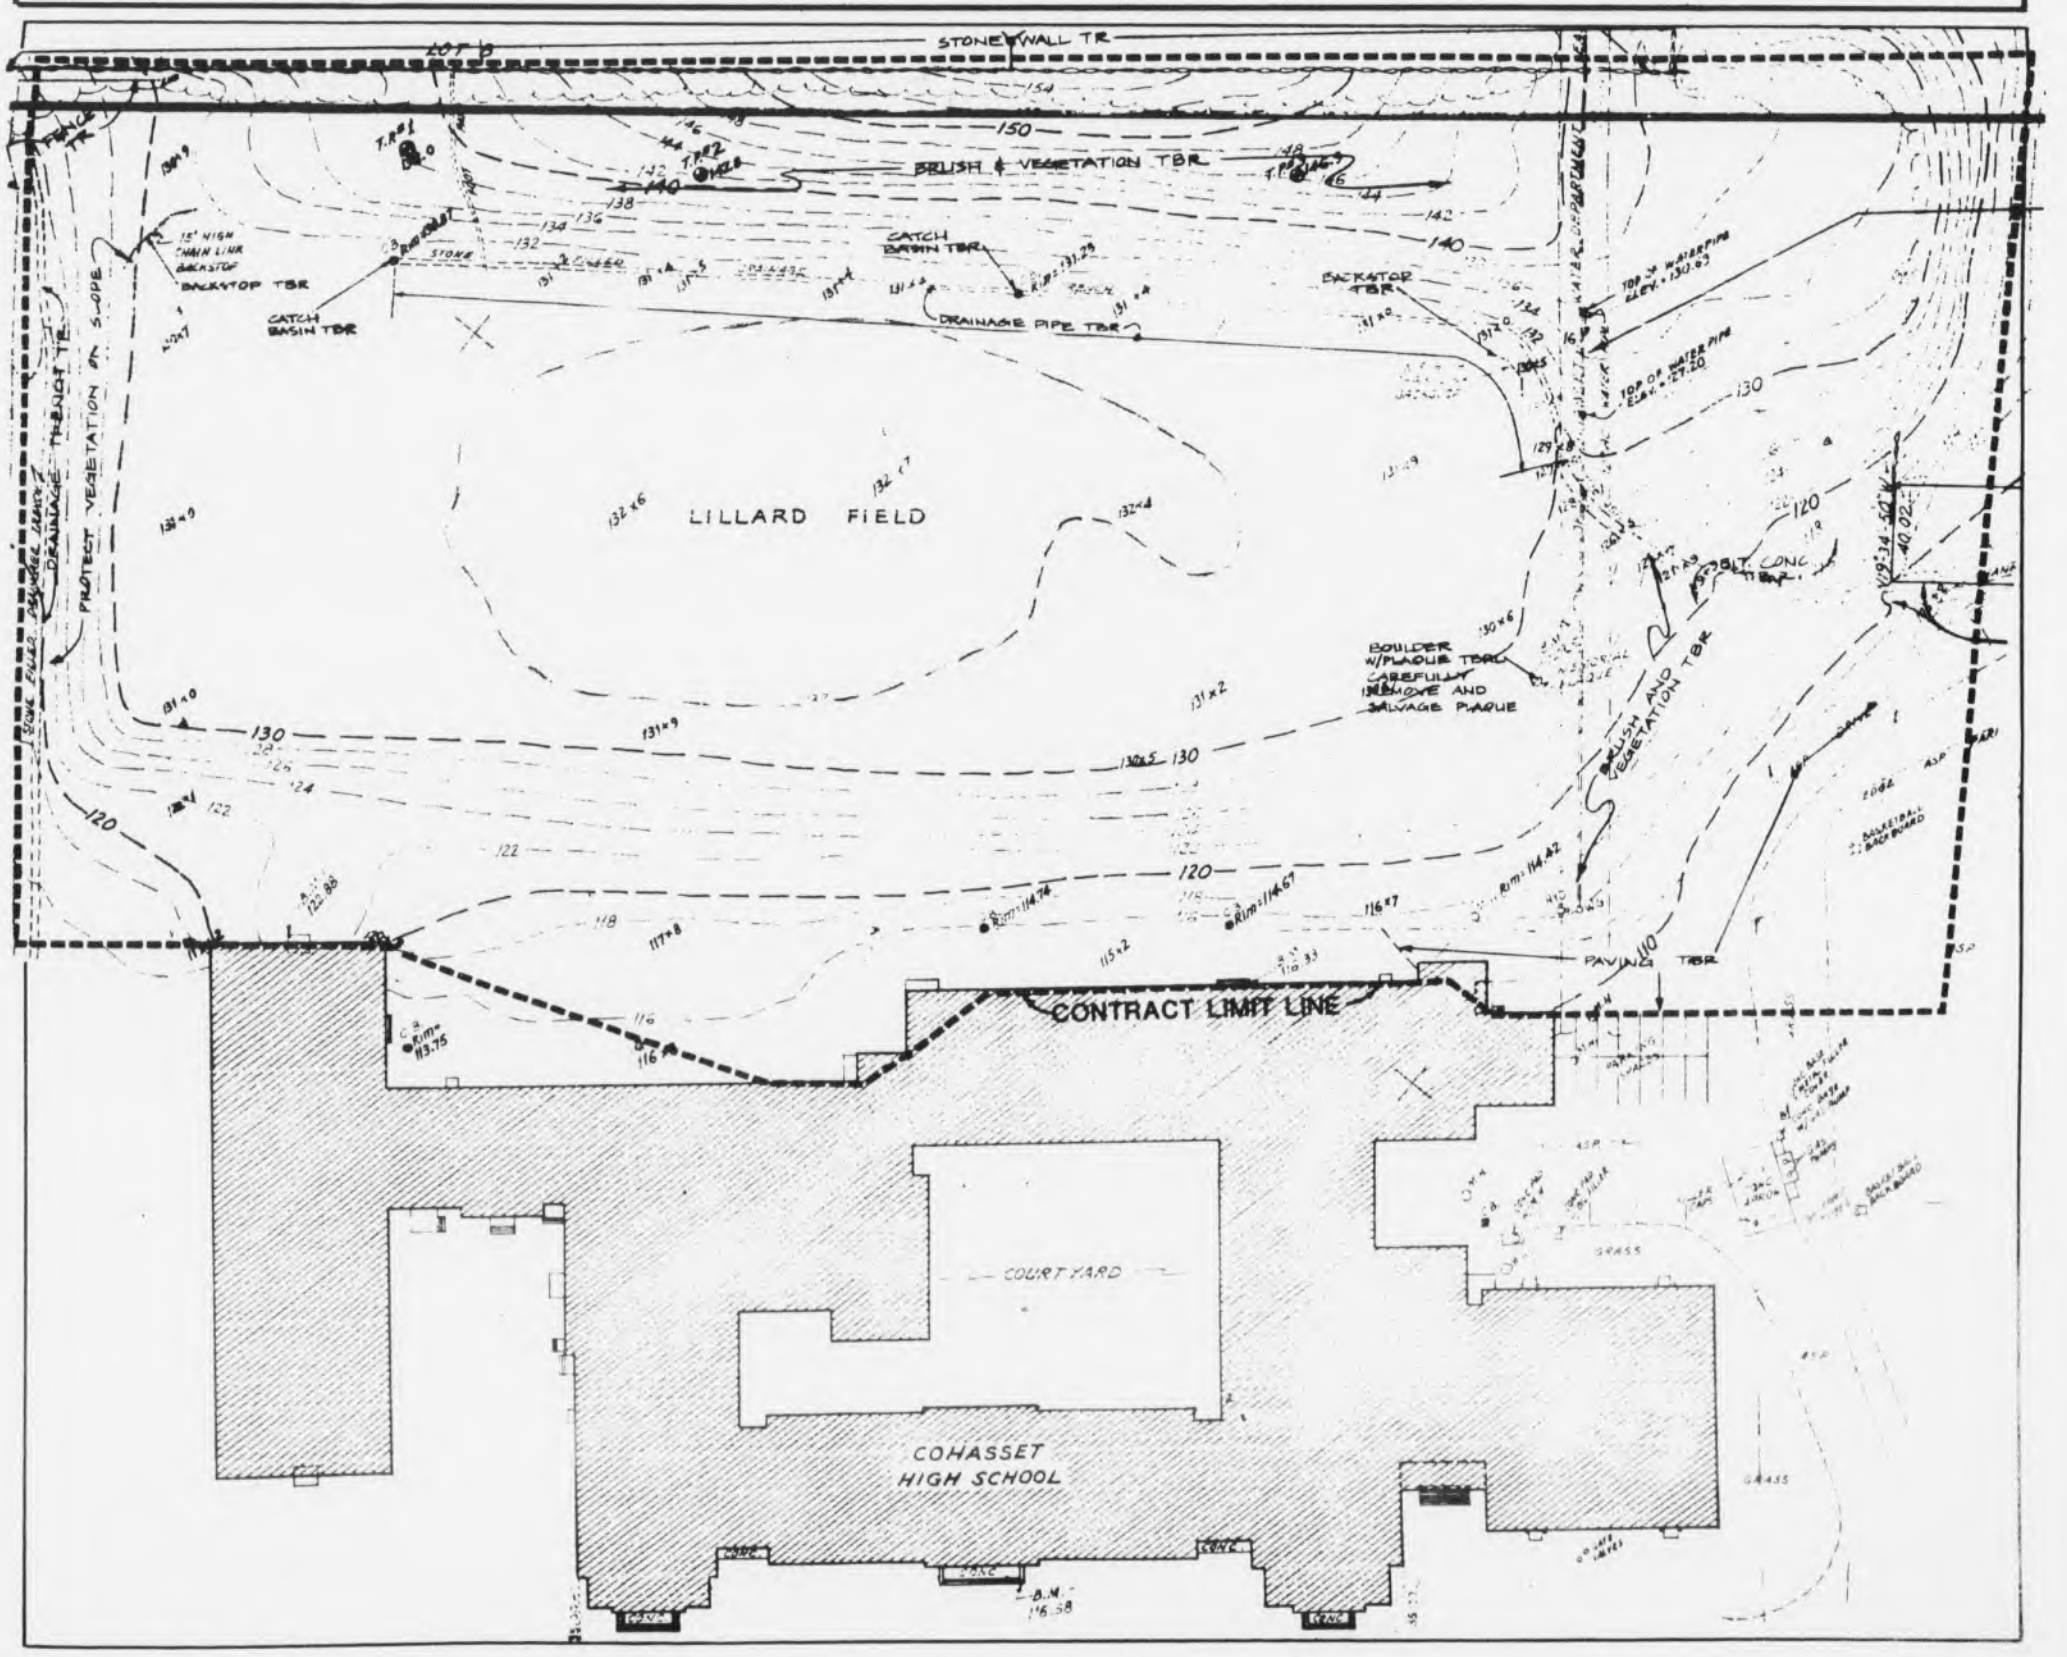
Chatterton agreed a new track facility will alleviate that danger. "Even though our numbers have decreased," he stated, "our girls track team was very strong last year.

The athletic director also noted that because the girls play on a non-regulation field hockey field, their tournament games at the end of the season can not be played in Cohasset.



"I've been listening to people in this town talking about the harbor and the town hall for years. Well, I figure it's about time to do something about this situation. We have 250 kids involved in fall sports at the high school, and then we have hundreds of kids using the fields on Saturday mornings with the recreation department," he stated. "This isn't something just for the student athletes - it's for the community to use.

"Numbers can be deceptive," he added. "Even though our enrollment is down now, we have six soccer teams, two field hockey teams and two football teams. We have ten teams vying for practice space on one field. It's crazy."



Ekberg noted, "We're not trying to elevate this issue above the police and fire station, or anything else in town. But this is an important issue. The committee feels the town should vote on the priority of this. It will be an asset to our community, to the youngsters of this town. The town can afford to do this."

Shine - Aims to serve elders

Beginning Oct. 7, Cohasset senior citizens can receive adequate information on healthcare services and requirements for benefits by making an appointment with the Council on Aging's two trained counselors for the recently implemented SHINE program.

Shine, a acronym for Serving Health Information Needs of Elders, is a new state program sponsored by the Executive Office of Elder Affairs. Currently, there are five pilot area programs, on the south shore area.

"Appointment only, to insure privacy," Kathy Bryanton said as she talked of the recent training session.

Their SHINE services are also available to families of elderly parents who may have questions on coverage, cost, and what's available to meet health care needs.

"They're welcome to come in and we'll present information and options," Bryanton said. "So many do not know where to turn. We also have papers to show them to fill out forms for long term placements."

"Anyone needing help through the SHINE program can call the Cohasset Council on aging office (383-9112) and make an appointment for Wednesday mornings between 9:30 and 12:00 noon.

Coalition grant to address regional growth and housing

By Judy Enright
Mariner staff

State and local officials gathered in Norwell town hall last Wednesday for the ceremonial awarding of a $50,000 grant to the South Shore Coalition.

The grant, presented by Richard Howe, Deputy Assistant Secretary of the Executive Office of Communities and Development (EOCD), will enable Coalition towns - including Norwell, Hanover, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Rockland, Scituate and Weymouth - to plan for growth and work on development of regional approaches to affordable housing.

A housing task force will be established (with members appointed by local boards of selectmen) to serve as a central planning group for the membership region and to balance affordable housing needs and environmental concerns.

Howe told the gathering that there were three times as many applications for the grant money as his department could fund. There was $1-million available this year and 96 applications, which requested more than $2.8 million. A total of $810,750 in grants was approved. The remaining $189,250 in fiscal year 1988 funds (up from $550,000 a year in Fiscal Years 1986 and 1987) will be available throughout the remainder of the year in planning grants.

Rep. Frank Hynes, (D-Marshfield), commented that the median price for houses in this area is about $165,000. Many children, who grew up on the South Shore, cannot afford to return to their home towns when they marry and are looking for a place to settle with their families. "This (grant) will provide some solutions to the housing crunch," Hynes said.

David Soule, executive director of the Metropolitan Area Planning Council (MAPC), complimented the Coalition and cited the cooperation between that group and his agency as "exemplary." He added, "wherever I go, traffic and housing are the two problems that we have to deal with."

Howe said the Coalition grant application provided "just the right approach to the balanced needs of affordable housing and environmental planning. I'm pleased that this organization is playing such an important part in meeting these challenges."

Janet O'Brien, a Hanover selectman and Chairman of the Coalition, accepted the grant on behalf of the Coalition. "The goal of affordable housing will move forward with this," she said. She especially thanked MAPC for their support and technical assistance and the efforts of local folks who implement the objectives. She also thanked the town of Norwell for hosting the Coalition office.

Sen. William B. Golden, (D-Weymouth), thanked Amy Anthony, State Secretary of Communities and Development, who he said had "a particular commitment" to the South Shore Coalition. Golden reminisced about a letter he sent in 1985 to South Shore selectmen, prior to formation of the Coalition, "to say if they worked together, they would attract more resources. This is a concrete example of how this works. We have been able to realize the dream of a regional organization working closely with officials at the state level who want programs that are effective."

Any proposals that receive Coalition endorsement will be presented to the local communities for their individual approval or action.

One of the Task Force's main objectives will be to increase acceptance of affordable housing, through open communication and responsiveness to local concerns.

Golden said no emergency response plan has been formally approved since April 1981.

"Boston Edison has spent $300 million since April 1986 and the NRC has still rejected its plan. There are 3,000 employees working three shifts a day to get Pilgrim on line. Why? I think one man, Mr. Sweeney, still thinks nuclear power is still just another way to boil water."

Golden said the history of management problems at the plant is its "biggest safety problem," but he voiced concerns about the structure of the containment vessel.

"According to many scientists, there is as high as a 90 percent probability of failure in the event of a serious loss-of-coolant accident at the plant," he charged. If the containment structure fails, radioactive material could be released into the general environment.

"Most scientists agree that there will be at least one (loss-of-coolant) accident somewhere in the next five to 10 years," he said. "If we had good management at Pilgrm, maybe we'd all feel a little better about that plant."

Golden also charged that Boston Edison has refused to consider a second containment vessel, such as the kind surrounding the Seabrook nuclear plant in New Hampshire.

He also implied that Boston Edison may be hit with a second fine from the NCR. The firm was fined the largest amount of any civil fine by the NCR in 1982 for problems at Pilgrim."I think they may fined within the next few weeks over incidents at the plant last summer."

He also called the emergency response plans inadequate. "Boston Edison today is refusing to say it will delay the opening until adequate emergency preparedness plans are approved and they complete their own plans on the safety of the containment vessel.

Reardon new trustee at Derby

Thomas M. Reardon was recently elected to the Board of the Hingham school.

Director of University Development at Harvard University since 1975, Reardon was previously New England correspondent for regional politics with the CBS Radio Network, and from 1971 to 1975, served as press secretary to former Governor Francis Sargent. Until recently a trustee of the South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell, he was for three years a member of the Hingham Cable Television Commission.

A resident of Hingham and Cohasset for much of his life, Reardon is now settled in Cohasset with his wife and their four children. An alumnus of Derby, he continued his education at Lawrence Academy in Groton, and graduated from Holy Cross College, where he has since served as class agent, and as a member of the Holy Cross Alumni Council.

Early release day Oct. 22

Thursday, Oct. 22, will be an early release day in the Cohasset Public Schools. There will be no afternoon kindergarten sessions and other students will be dismissed according to the following schedule:

Junior/Senior High School, noon; Deer Hill School, 12:40 p.m.; Joseph Osgood School, 12:50 p.m.

Lunch will be served in the elementary schools and food service will be available at the Junior/Senior High School.

This early release day has been approved by the Cohasset School Committee to allow the staff at the elementary schools to participate in a workshop entitled "The Writing Process." The staff at the junior/senior high will participate in a health education workshop.

Service academy applications

Congressman Gerry E. Studds (D-MA) is accepting applications from Tenth District high school students for nominations to United States Service Academies for the academic year 1988-89. The deadline for applying for nominations to the Air Force, military, naval and Merchant Marine Academies is Nov. 15.

"It is one of my great privileges as a U.S. Representative to have an opportunity to nominate students from southeastern Massachusetts to our service academies," Studds said, adding that nine Tenth District students began their studies at the nation's four academies in July.

As in the past, all academy applications will be reviewed by Studds' Service Academy Nominee Selection Committee, which is comprised of distinquished southeastern Massachusetts residents. The Selection Committee will recommend the most qualified applicants from the Tenth District to Studds, who will forward these recommendations to the academies as his nominees. The selection boards of each academy will then evaluate these nominees, on a strictly competitive basis, for appointment to next year's class.

Studds also informed students of the opportunity to apply for admittance to the U.S. Coast Guard Academy. Procedures for appointment to the Coast Guard Academy do not require a Congressional nomination, and the Academy's deadline for application is Dec. 15. Interested students should contact the Academy directly by writing to: U.S. Coast Guard Academy, New London, CT 06320.

The Congressman said that students interested in an academy nomination, or requiring further information, may contact his nearest district office in Hyannis (771-0666), New Bedford (999-1251) or Pembroke (826-3866).

After School Games Program

The Cohasset Recreation Department will offer an afterschool sports and games program for grades 2, 3 and 4 Wednesday afternoons, at Deer Hill School from 3:45 to 5 p.m. beginning Wednesday, Oct. 21.

Recreation Department supervisors under the direction of Richard Redick, will offer a variety of indoor and outdoor low-organized games, sports and activities.

The program, which is open to girl's and boy's grades 2, 3 and 4, will meet on a weekly basis for a six-week period from Oct. 21, through Dec. 2. It will not meet on the Wednesday before Thanksgiving. The fee for the program is $8, with a 50 percent discount offered to the second and subsequent children registering from the same family.

Children are not allowed to stay after school unless they are enrolled in the Deer Hill after school program which ends at 3:40 p.m. Parents must pick-up children by 5 p.m. Activities will be held outdoors when weather permits, but most generally will be held in the gym.

Because a limited number of registrations will be accepted, children will be enrolled on a first call, first enrolled basis. To register; call the recreation department office at 383-6791. Fee payments may be made by check, payable to the Town of Cohasset, and brought to the first class.

Parents of kindergarten and first grade students who would like a program for that age group should also call the recreation office. Should response be great enough a K and 1 program will be arranged as well, but separate from the grades 2, 3, and 4 groups.

Early Release Day

The next scheduled Early Release Day will be Thursday, Oct. 22. The Osgood PSO will be showing a Disney Movie, The Aristocats, on that day. Details to follow on next week's menu.

Thanks to all

A very special thank you to all who participated in our Osgood Open House. Your expressions of enthusiasm and support are deeply appreciated.

The field trip was planned for Tuesday, Oct. 13 with a rain-date of 20 October. Participants include Jack Buckley, the Alt School's director, Colleen Lucas, CHS' art teacher, and members of the Alternative School. The field trip is an all-day event.

CHS play this weekend

Twelve Angry Jurors, directed by Ron Emmons, marks the commencement of CHS' drama season this weekend.

The play, originally titled Twelve Angry Men, centers around the deliberations of the jurors as to the guilt or innocence of a young man accused of stabbing his father to death.

The cast consists of Jack Beddows, Scott Caristo, Michele Casalaro, Jen Endris, Zach Hochkeppel, Holly Ludlow, Leslie Magee, Jay Marsac, Joe Mazza, Mary Beth McNamara, Erin Monaghan, Samantha Platt and Allison Reilly. Ron Emmons directorial assistant is Katie Tolini.

The audience is limited to 65 people per night, and seats are reserved. Tickets are $3 in advance and $4 at the door. The first performance is on Friday at 8 p.m., and the play runs through Sunday.

For information, call 383-6100.

Literary magazine meeting

The high school's literary and arts magazine, Whispers and Shadows, held its first organizational meeting on Oct. 7.

Remember . . . basic skills testing for all third graders will begin the week of Oct. 12.

Career Education Program

During the weeks of Nov. 9-13, and 16-20; the P.S.O. and the Guidance Department will sponsor a Career Speakers Program for the English classes. As you may remember, most of our speakers are members of our community and they have been well received by both students and faculty alike.

The program will be run as it was last year. During that two week period, each English class will be addressed by a guest on his/her English-related occupation; consequently you will lose one teaching period. (All of the sessions will be held in the Studio) I will notify all English teachers of the specific time for each class as soon as it is available.

We have also established a timetable for Science, Math and Social Studies listed below, for those of you who like to plan ahead.

February - Math 1-12; March - Science 7-18; April -Social Studies - 11-15 and 25-29.

Boys soccer streaks to two more victories

By Peter Kasperowicz
Mariner Correspondent

"Sandwich has the exact same record as we do," soccer coach Dan Magner said recently. "We can't let them get ahead of us, so we have to keep on winning."

The boys have done just that. They've won eight out of nine games, and tied only once (to Sandwich). Most recent victories were against Whitman-Hanson last Tuesday, and Scituate on Thursday.

Although they defeated Whitman-Hanson 5-1, the team initially had some trouble scoring. At the start of the first half, Cohasset wasted three or four perfect opportunities to score. Magner continually urged his players to slow the game down.

"I tell you, the longer the score remains 0-0, the better Whitman-Hanson feels," he said.

Any good feelings Whitman-Hanson had were finally taken away when Dave Schultz scrored with help from Ian Smart. With this edge, Cohasset managed to score once more before the half ended; Jimmy Reidy assisted Todd Fitzpatrick, who later left the game after colliding with a Whitman-Hanson player.

"I would have scored at least three more goals if I had stayed in," Fitzpatrick reflected.

During halftime, both teams were told that the referees were getting upset at all the cheap shots taken. Magner agreed.

"We're not playing our game, we're just booting the ball around. You guys have to stop being so sloppy so you can control the ball and take more shots," Magner said.

Band. Bang. Bang. Within ten minutes, the boys brought the score to 5-0: Jimmy Reidy scored with help from Dave Shultz, Ian Smart was assisted by Jimmy Reidy, and Dave Shultz was aided by Matt Beggan.

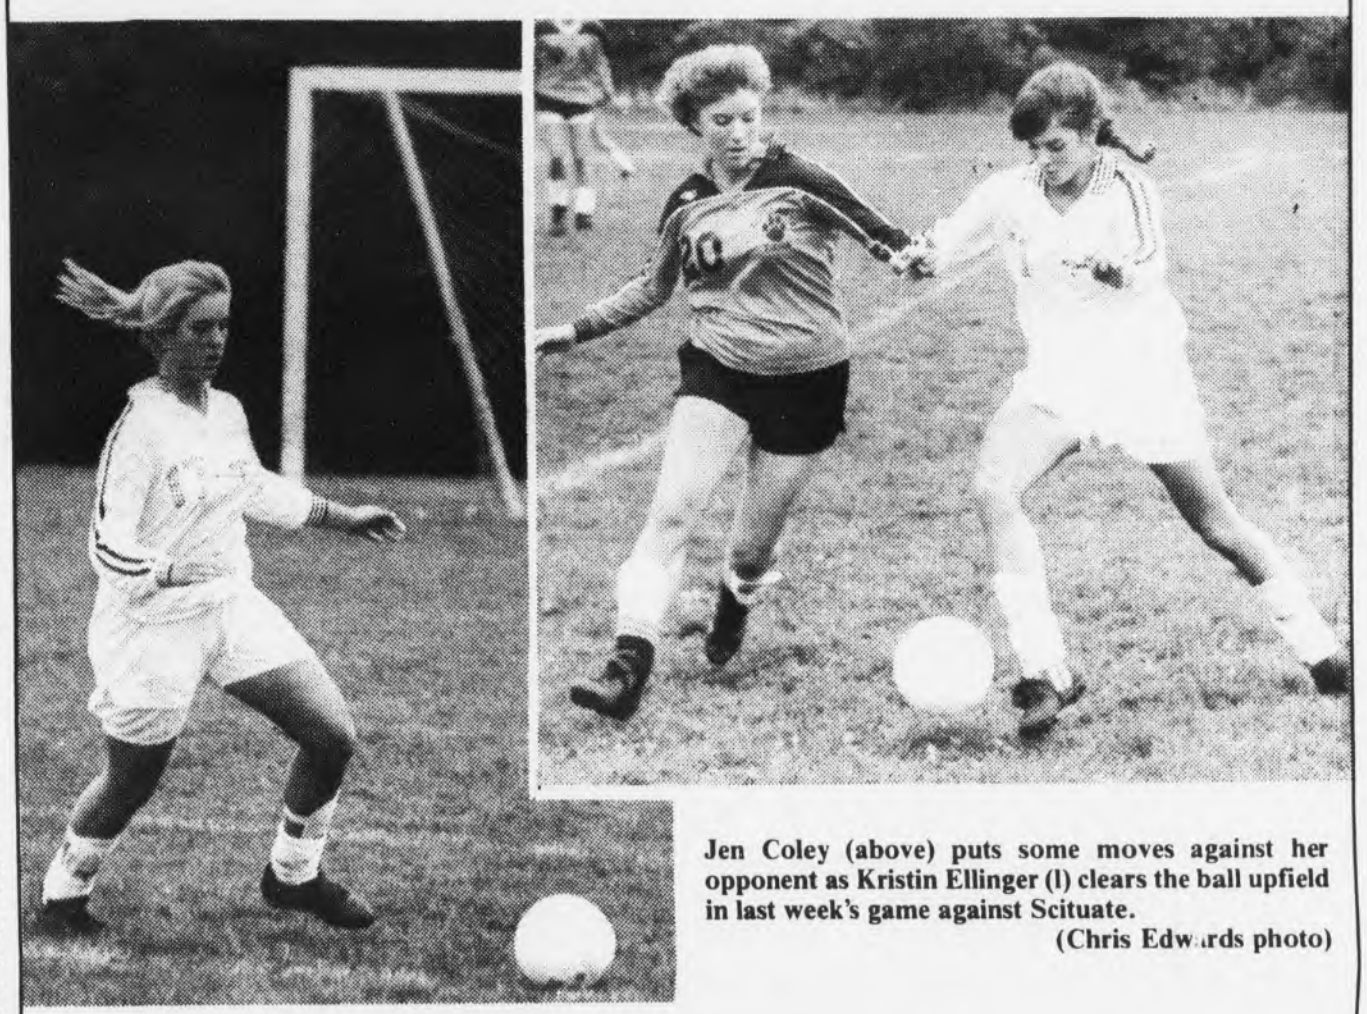
Then, with 4:50 left, Whitman-Hanson scored the last goal of the game on a direct kick, making the final sore 5-1.

John Linsley offered his explanation on why the game was so rough-and-tumble:

"We were dominating the game so much that they resorted to taking it out on our ankles," he said.

However, The Whitman-Hanson game felt like a leisurely game of dominoes when compared to the Scituate game. Cohasset won 4-1, but the price of victory was high. There was rarely a minute of play in which someone was not lying on the ground, and there were even some spectators who were injured as a player dove into a crowed bench. One Scituate player sported a "Rambo-like" headband.

Cohasset initially had some problems adjusting to Scituate's kick-and-run style of playing, but Todd "Twinkle-Toes" Fitzpatrick finally broke through and scored. Scituate's goalie left the scene with a cut face, but returned later on.



Fitzpatrick didn't score next, but he did the next best thing by bouncing the ball off the top crossbar to Dave Shultz, who had an easy time of heading it in. Scituate's hopes were soon rekindled as they scored on Cohasset goalie Joel Reidy. However, Reidy was avenged by his brother, Jimmy, seconds before the end of the half making the score 3-1. Cohasset was winning, but coach Magner knew it wasn't over.

"These Scituate kids have a lot of adrenalin; they can run hard, and if they score again, they could get pumped up enough to win. Jimmy's goal was timed perfectly; right at the end of the half. Let's use that to our advantage, and not let them get back into it," Magner recited.

Only one goal was scored in the second half, and Fitzpatrick sored it off a beautiful pass by John Linsley. The score was 4-1, and a frustrated Scituate was out of time.

"Way to go," Magner said, "let's get some pizza."

The team travels to Middleboro on the 16th, and then stays home for the next two games against Duxbury, on the 20th, and Hull, on the 22nd.

Jen Coley (above) puts some moves against her opponent as Kristin Ellinger (l) clears the ball upfield in last week's game against Scituate.

Golfer wins local and state honors

Laurajean Yurkstas of Cohasset closed the 1987 summer golf season with four major victories and election to two posts.

She won the Women's Club Championship at Hatherly Country Club, as well as the Mixed Scotch Foursome Championship with her father, Dr. Albert Yurkstas as her partner. Laurajean also won the Women's South Shore Golf League Nancy Black Trophy (Net Championship), and with her partner, Louise Mariani, won the Women's Golf Association of Massachusetts La Bonte Cup.

Ms. Yurkstas will be the Chairman of Women's Golf at Hatherly Country Club for the second year, and will be serving a second term as Publicity Director for the Women's South Shore Golf League.

A realtor with Hunneman and Co. Inc. in Cohasset, Laurajean formerly taught platform tennis at a California college before entering real estate four years ago.

Cohasset skaters

The Winterland I.S.I.A. Skating Team, including several Cohasset skaters, is holding its first annual competition on Saturday, Oct. 24. This day long competition with over 100 skaters from all over Massachusetts is free to the public and will include categories of Freestyle, Spotlight, Footwork, Couples and Compulsories.

The group of skaters formerly skated at the Cohasset Winter Gardens and after a successful summer at their new home, the Rockland Rink, plan to continue their team effort as the Winterland Skating Team and the Silver Blades Skating Club, which is the oldest figure skating club in the South Shore area.

Along with the individual competitors our undefeated champion precision team is preparing to travel to Lake Placid in January and gearing up for the I.S.I.A. Nationals in Dallas in August. The precision team skates under the direction of Marcia J. Breen and Priscilla Petterson.

Skating Director, Katy Hayden said, "This is the first opportunity for the local children to see what a good skating program is being offered in Rockland.

The skaters from Cohasset in the competition are Michelle Buckley, Marisol Perry, Kara Protulis, Kim Ward, Michelle Ward and Lauren Wood.

Local officials optimistic about agreement

there will be very many changes in language in this revised document."

According to Sturdy, the basic problem which resulted in the reprimand against the town was that the previous agreement had been signed by the planning board and not selectmen or the housing authority. "Looking back on this, I'd say it was folly for the town to submit the planning board's version of a housing agreement, without the selectmen's or the housing authority's signatures," he commented.

The changes made to the EOCD document will not be substantive, Sturdy predicted. "They want some further explanations, but basically, they said the planning board's draft agreement was okay," he stated. "I believe they will send the revised agreement to selectmen for signatures. I don't anticipate any further difficulty."

The planning board chairman stated, "what necessitated this meeting was that among the items in the original agreement was an untrue statement that our zoning bylaws are unduly restrictive. That is not so. Nothing about our zoning is restrictive. The heart of the problem is the real estate market prices versus what lower income people can afford. The planning board is not about to let developers come in here and do whatever they want. It's an issue of homerule. Basically, we have the ability through our town bylaws to work with the developers, for the benefit of the townspeople, and not for the benefit of state subsidized housing. I verbalized this concern, and there seemed to be no problem on the part of the state."

He continued, "the planning board feels there should not be any state subsidized housing for a certain time period - the idea being in 15 or 25 years it will be turned over to the town. The state agreed this week that they don't really want that kind of housing. From this type of housing comes giveaways."

Executive Secretary Andrew agreed the new document should not contain "anything new. I think the state agreed to a few changes in the language which will be more pleasing to the planning board."

He added, "I think at Tuesday's meeting we saw the planning board addressing the agreement and what should be included. They did not concentrate on whether the governor has the right to issue executive orders, as they have in the past. Ziegler said some points the planning board made will be accepted into the revised document, and some won't - such as a mandatory 12 units of low and moderate income housing. That is the number it has to be. If the housing authority can't come up with 12 specific sites, they're not going to kick out their application. They could go now with nine and work toward three additional sites in the future."

There are two sections which selectmen and the housing authority agreed to earlier which will be contained in the new policy statement, he said. That is the need for the authority to apply for the Chapter 705 fair housing program, and a section pertaining to local housing policies and bylaws.

"I think to a certain extent the state was playing with us, trying to see how much we could comply with the document we signed, and waiting to see if the planning board would or would not sign it. They may have been waiting deliberately to see what the planning board was intending to do.

"But I was very encouraged by this meeting," Andrew added. "I'm just holding my breath now, waiting for them to send back an agreement. But I think this meeting was well worth the effort we put into the discussion. I don't expect the new agreement will include many changes."

Sestito remains a firefighter

effect on his work performance. In fact, on his first "run" as a Cohasset EMT, Sestito assisted a Scituate diabetic who was experiencing an insulin reaction.

Fire Chief Daniel Brock agreed Sestito's medical condition did not negatively affect his work at the fire station. The chief noted that Sestito's knowledge of the illness has already proven helpful for the young EMT/firefighter who was offered appointment to the department, May 18.

Under Civil Service regulations, Sestito is now eligible for permanent employment in the department.

Although no one, including Sestito, had to testify before the Civil Service regarding the appeal, several town officials were supporting his effort. Chief Brock said he wanted the young firefighter to remain. "He's done a good job. I'm glad he'll be able to continue," he stated.

And Selectman Rocco Laugelle, also a diabetic, said Sestito should remain on the force. "I think he will be a great firefighter," Laugelle said at the time of the appeal.

"It made me happy to know these people were on my side," Sestito added.

INTRODUCING

Dr. Ronald E. Wuotila Chiropractor

Please allow me to introduce myself to the town of Hanover and it's surrounding communities. I am originally from the South Shore area and graduated from Palmer College of Chiropractic in Davenport, Iowa. I have received extensive pre and post graduate training at the Gonstead Clinic of chiropractic in Mount Horeb, Wisconsin which specializes in the treatment and care of patients with structural problems of the spine. My practical experience includes six years of clinical work treating patients for various spinal related conditions utilizing X-ray analysis and a specific adjusting technique.

Being a licensed Chiropractor in the state of Massachusetts, I did an extensive demographic study of the South Shore region and decided the town of Hanover was centrally located to service patients from many communities. My new office is conveniently located on Route 53, one and one half miles south of the Hanover Mall exit 13. To aquaint you with our newly opened office and all that Chiropractic care has to offer, my staff and I would like to provide to you or another family member, a spinal examination absolutely FREE. This examination (a $35.00 value) will include an orthopedic test, neurological test, blood pressure check, spinal alignment check, examination for restricted or excess motion in the spine, muscle strengthness test, and a private consultation with the Doctor to discuss the results.

Garden club honors men

To further advance the art of gardening and to encourage education in the area of ecology, horticulture and floriculture, the Garden Club of Hingham recently held an all male floral and horticulture exhibit at the Cohasset home of Mrs. Edward F. Logan.

Alfred R. Prusick of 11 Colonial Road in Hingham was presented the Green Thumb horticulture award and Stuart Arnold of 451 Gardner Street won Honorable Mention.

Best of the unique and original floral arrangement was awarded to Herbert T. McMeekin, Jr. of 2 Rocky Run. Honorable Mention awards were presented to Dr. Leo P. Cavanaugh, Henry S. Day, Tracy C. Dickson III, Richard D. Erickson, William L. Handy, William S. Kimball, Oliver H.P. Rodman, Jr., Kendall W. Smith, Kenneth F. Strone, and Arthur M. Whish.

President, Mrs. Leo P. Cavanaugh, noted that the Horticulture Society was founded in 1829 by men who met at luncheon to discuss and exchange horticulture information and the Hingham Garden Club wanted to encourage more male participation and will make this male exhibit a biennial event.

Chairman of the exhibit was Mrs. Edmund C. Fitzmaurice assisted by Mrs. Henry S. Day, Mrs. William A. Gray III and Mrs. John F. Reid, Jr.

Judging the male exhibit was noted Flower Show Judge, Mrs. John O'Toole of Cohasset.

Award Winning Play at Cohasset

A new version of the Emmy Award-winning Twelve Angry Men will open the Cohasset Drama Workshop's season on Oct. 16-18.

Director Ron Emmos has reworked the play to include a cast of both men and women. This variation upon the original play has been renamed Twelve Angry Jurors and will be presented with the audience seated on three sides of the action with no seat more than ten feet from the action. Because of this seating configuration, seating will be extremely limited.

A nineteen-year old boy has just stood trial for the fatal stabbing of his father. As the twelve jurors are taken into the bleak jury room, it looks like an open-and-shut case - until one of the jurors begins opening the other jurors' eyes to the facts. "We have nothing to gain or lose by our verdict.

We should not make it a personal thing." But personal it does become, with each juror revealing his or her own character as the various testimonies are re-examined, the murder is re-enacted and a new murder threat is born before their own eyes! Tempers get short, arguments grow heated, and the jurors become twelve angry people. Their final verdict and the way they reach it will eletrify the audience seated so close to the action.

Seniors in the cast are Scott Caristo, Michele Casolaro, Jen Endris, Holly Ludlow, Jay Marsac, Joe Mazza, Mary Beth McNamara, and Samantha Platt. Juniors (all making their CHS acting debut) are Jack Beddows, Leslie McGee, Erin Monaghan, and Allison Reilly. Sophmore Zach Hochkeppel completes the cast. Serving as assistant to the director is Katie Tolini.

Only sixty-five tickets will be sold for each night, so early purchase is suggested. All seats are reserved and are priced at $3 in advance and $4 at the door (if any remain). For ticket information call 383-6100

Volunteers needed

Plymouth County Special Olympics is actively recruiting key volunteers to help run the area program. Special Olympics provide year round training and competition opportunities for athletes with mental retardation. Volunteers are the key element in making Special Olympics the largest amateur sport organization in the world.

Massachusetts Special Olympics is divided into 14 areas, one of which is Plymouth County, that are responsible for area competition, fundraising, public relations, training, families, volunteers and outreach on behalf of athletes. Volunteers are needed to help the Plymouth County Special Olympics program in one of the above areas.

Each year Massachusetts Special Olympics grows larger, because of the support of dedicated volunteers. Individuals interested in joining the Special Olympics effort in Plymouth County can contact Leon Seymour, Director for Program Operations at Massachusetts Special Olympics, 774-1501.

Amateur Gardners Meeting

The Amateur Gardners of Cohasset will meet Tuesday, Oct. 20 at 1 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Alicia Seavey.

Co-hostess will be Mrs. Betty Madden. Members will bring their own flower arrangements and share ideas and suggestions.

Coalition meets Oct. 22

The South Shore Coalition will meet at 7 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 22 at Norwell Town Hall on Route 123 to discuss Braintree's request to join the 10-town coalition.

The coalition presently is comprised of Weymouth, Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, Scituate, Norwell, Hanover, Rockland, Marshfield and Duxbury.

In addition, the coalition members will be asked to authorize its officers to negotiate a contract for services with the Metroplitan Area Planning Council or another consultant to carry out the work program authorized under the $50,000 housing grant recently awarded by the state Office of Communities and Development.

The coalition will also nominate a member or members for a possible seat on the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority's citizen advisory committee and discuss the transportation task force's request for support for additional commuter parking.

Antique show Nov. 7

Plans are underway for the 11th Annual Antique Show and Sale sponsored by the Beechwood Congregational Church on Saturday, Nov. 7, (9 a.m. -5 p.m.) at Deer Hill School, 206 Sohier Street (off Route 3A) just before the South Shore Music Circus.

There will also be a snack bar and ample free parking. Dealer space is still available. Please contact Cheryl Kristiansen at 383-0070 for more information.

First Parish panel presentation

The first Parish Unitarian Church of Cohasset invites all interested parents to a panel presentation and discussion on the topic "Perfect Parents, Perfect Kids" to be held Friday, Oct. 16 from 7-9 p.m. in the Parish House at 23 N. Main Street, Cohasset

Members of the panel are: Sally Atkinson, Director of the Carriage House Nursery School, Edward Leonard, Youth Adjustment Counselor (grades K-6) for the Cohasset Public Schools and Fred Nagle, Guidance Counselor at Thayer Academy. The presentation and discussion is planned to address the concerns of parents of children of all ages. Babysitting will be provided in the Parsih House during the program (please call the church office at 383-1100 to reserve space).

Campaign for Down Syndrome

On behalf of National Down Syndrome Month in October, local parents in conjunction with the National Down Syndrome Congress will be displaying spare change canisters with merchants in and around Cohasset.

Down Syndrome is the leading clinical cause of mental retardation in this country, but much can be done to allow those with Down Syndrome to lead useful and productive lives. Funds collected from this drive will provide local as well as national support and information for those whose lives have been touched by Down Syndrome.

To make a donation, look for canisters this month or contact the National Down Syndrome Congress, 1800 Dempster St., Park Ridge, Ill., or Maria Plante, 383-9263 or Taffy Nothnagle, 383-0895.

Video Volunteers needed

The Cohasset schools would like to show more school activities on the new school cable channel 52 this year.

We are looking for volunteers to video tape any school activities: plays, music performances, sports, interesting classes, etc. We hope especially to have help video taping at the Osgood and Deer Hill Schools.

The high school has one camcorder that may be borrowed for taping school functions. If any family has its own camcorder the school will be glad to furnish the video tape. We could also copy the program material from your personal tapes so you could keep those tapes for yourself.

Please contact Jack Creamer at Osgood, Ken Ekberg at Deer Hill, or John Packard and Carolyn Contis at the high school, if you are able to help or need more information.

LDS lecture Oct. 18

Sun. Oct. 18 at 7 p.m. author Norman Rothman of California will speak on the subject: "So how come a nice Jewish boy became a Mormon?". He will tell his personal story at the LDS Meetinghouse, 76 Main St. in Foxboro, (Rt. 140). The lecture is free and open to the public.

Family services

A family service celebrating Simchat Torah will be held at Congregation Sha'Aray Shalom, 1112 Main St., Hingham, Friday evening, Oct. 16, at 7:30. Rabbi Stephen Karol will bestow Birthday Blessings to those children whose birthdays are in October. An Oneg Shabbat will follow the service.

Couple to serve mission

"Serving the Lord with Gladness" is the theme of the 9 a.m. Sunday worship service at The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, Hingham. The speakers, Don and Lois Flannigan, members of the congregation, will tell of their call to serve a mission for the Church.

Leaving home, friends, family (including 18 grandkids) this retired couple will spend the next twelve months--at their own expense--serving in the Colorado-Wyoming areas. They will share with others the joys of the gospel of Jesus Christ and His restored church.

Some 2000 older Mormon couples are presently serving missions in this world-wide church.

Temple to hold annual auction

The sound of the auctioneers gavel will echo throughout Boyer Auditorium at Temple Beth Sholom Sunday evening, Oct. 18, as the temple holds its Annual Goods and Services Auction.

A wide range of items, something for everyone, will be featured during the evening's festivities. Among the items to be placed on the auction block will be jumbo stuffed animals, entertainment equipment, restaurant gift certificates, Bruins Tickets, stereo radios, hotel gift certificates, theatre tickets for Sweet Charity, gifts, collectibles, fuel oil, professional services, and many other items too numerous to mention.

Myron Klayman will be the lead auctioneer with several guest auctioneers also taking a hand at the gavel.

The auction, which is open to the public, will take place at the Temple's School and Community Center Building, 600 Nantasket Avenue, Hull. Doors will open at 6:00 p.m., with the auction action starting at 7:00 p.m. There will be refreshments and door prizes, fun, surprises and entertainment. All this for only a $2.50 admission!!!!! Its a great way to spend a Sunday evening, be with your neighbors and friends, get a head start on holiday shopping and help a good cause, so don't miss what is always a fun event.

Temple Beth Sholom is the area's oldest year round congregation. Its members come from the surrounding South Shore towns. The Temple sponsors religious, social, charitable and educational programs. Members include young, middle aged and seniors, marrieds and singles, those with children and without, couples of inter-religious marriages, and those from orthodox, conservative and reform backgrounds, as well as for all levels of Jewish identity.

For more information about the auction, including donating goods and services, as well as information about the Temple, please call the Temple office at 925-0091 or 925-2377.

National Domestic Violence Awareness Month

By Joan Stiles
Special to the Mariner

October is National Domestic Violence Awareness Month. There is a threefold purpose to this awareness campaign: to mourn the loss of life and safety through domestic violence; to celebrate the strength and success of the survivors and the programs working to end domestic violence; and to organize community support for the effort to end violence in the lives of women and their children.

The U.S. Surgeon General has declared domestic violence as a major health problem facing the American family, as well as the number one cause of injury to women.

In Massachusetts, a woman is murdered by her husband or boyfriend approximately every 22 days. Statewide, shelters logged 49,000 calls for assistance from battered women in 1986.

Approximately 5,000 women and children fled to Massachusetts' shelters in 1986, and an equal number were turned away due to lack of space. Studies indicate that battering is a problem which equally affects women from all social, racial, ethnic, religious, and economic backgrounds.

If you think battering is not a problem in your community, ask your local police department. The nation's police devote approximately 30 percent of their time responding to domestic violence calls. Approximately 23 percent of police officers killed in the line of duty were attempting to halt family fights.

It is estimated that incidents of violence occur in 50 percent of American homes and are common occurrences in 10 to 25 percent of our homes. This is a national disgrace. We can no longer dump this problem in the laps of our police departments and expect them to handle it alone.

What is needed is a comprehensive, integrated, community response. It is time to train professionals from the mental health, medical, religious, public education and criminal justice fields to respond appropriately to family violence. This is an effort which can be most effectively undertaken on a local and county basis.

It will require a long-range commitment of time and energy from community leaders; an allocation of funds from town governments; development of violence prevention curriculums from educators; and planning of an integrated strategy to allow police, court systems and other professionals to respond effectively to ensure safety for victims.

Taken in its entirety, this may seem to be an overwhelming or an unrealistic goal. Taken one step at a time, however, it is an achievable and an absolutely necessary goal, if we are to improve the quality of life for our children. All we can do is begin.

There are close to 30 programs for battered women in Massachusetts. Pembroke is served by the South Shore Women's Center, which is located at 14 Main St., Plymouth.

The women's center operates a 24-hour hotline for victims of violence (746-2664). Services include crisis intervention, short-term shelter, individual and group counseling for victims, and court, housing and social services advocacy. All services are free and confidential.

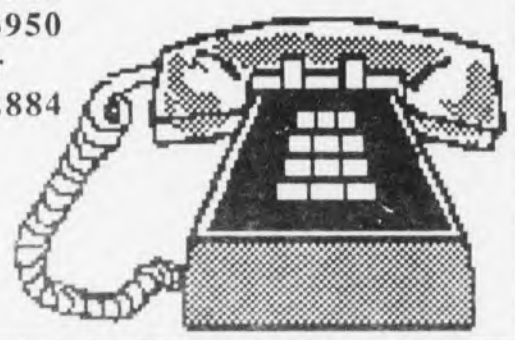
The center also sponsors a treatment group for abusers, "A Man's Choice." Speakers are available to address large or small groups about the issue of domestic violence.

Many services are made possible through the participation of volunteers. If you are interested in becoming involved, call 746-2664.

The women's center has recently appointed a community outreach coordinator to work with local churches, agencies, police departments, courts and community groups. Fundraising has begun to hire a community educator to work with local school departments.

Only through increased public awareness and subsequent local commitments of assistance can the women's center hope to achieve its goal of significant social change. We need your help.

Several public awareness efforts have been introduced, locally, for the month of October. Each clergyman in the area has received a packet of information, resolutions and prayers which they have been asked to share with their congregations.



Each library has received a display and reading list concerning domestic violence issues.

Local police departments will be contacted with information about services and ideas about working more closely together.

Local grocery and drug stores will be contacted to participate in a nationwide "shelter aid" program. "shelter aid" has been created and sponsored by Johnson and Johnson in partnership with the National Coalition Against Domestic Violence. Johnson and Johnson provided a $562,000 grant to the N.C.A.D.V. to establish a national toll-free domestic violence hotline, (1-800-333-SAFE).

Domestic Violence Month . . .

On Sunday, Oct. 18, specially marked coupons for "shelter aid" products will be inserted into newspapers nationally. For each coupon redeemed through Dec. 31, 1987, five cents will be donated to local shelter programs; up to $500,000 nationwide. Please identify South Shore Women's Center, 14 Main St., Plymouth, as the program in your area when redeeming coupons or proofs of purchase.

South Shore Women's Center would like to use the National Domestic Violence Awareness Month of October to kick off a year of awareness in Plymouth County.

With your help, we can sponsor educational forums for all appropriate professionals and laypersons who come in contact with victims of family violence.

The first of these will be an ecumenical forum to address the issues of family violence and the church. We would like to hold it in December to tie in with the message of the holidays that peace on earth begins at home.

Our society implicitly condones family violence by closing its eyes to it. We at the Women's Center hope that you will open your eyes, acknowledge the problem, and take action to make your community a place where violence will not be tolerated.

Joan Stiles is the outreach coordinator for the South Shore Women's Center which serves 10 communities.

Natural Science Center activities

Mid-October is a perfect time to enjoy the world around you. Register today for a nature walk at South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell.

ADULT ADVENTURES

Enjoy autumn on a leisurely beach walk investigating tidepools and their inhabitants. You will also examine the beach for treasures that the ocean has brought ashore and learn about the geology of the shoreline. Bring boots if you want to get your feet wet. Naturalist Barbara Devine leads this adult/family walk on Monday, Oct. 19 from 9 a.m. to noon. Meet at the Science Center. Pre-paid registration required (members/$4; non-members/$5). Call 659-2559 for registration information.

SCITUATE CONSERVATION LAND

Travel with naturalist Barbara Devine to this conservation land and observe boulder fields, evidence of past glaciation. You will explore mixed woodlands of hardwoods, pines and hollies and perhaps see the last of the season's asters. Wear comfortable walking shoes and join us on Wednesday, Oct. 21 from 9 a.m. to noon. Meet at the Natural Science Center. Pre-paid registration required (members/$4; non-members/$5). For registration information, call 659-2559.

MAGIC CARPET TOUR

Travel to spectacular Austria, Yugoslavia, Switzerland, and southern Germany. View the magestic Alps and tour Dinkelsbuhl, an old walled town. You will also make a memorable visit to Mauthausen, a Nazi concentration camp. Your guide on world-wind trip will be traveller and amateur photographer Harold Simms. This European slide tour will be presented on Friday, Oct. 23 from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. An ethnic luncheon will be served after the tour. Pre-paid registration required (members/$7; non-members/$9). For registraton information, call 659-2559.

South Shore Natural Science Center is on Jacobs Lane, Norwell, just off Route 123 and less than 5 minutes from the Hanover/Rte 3 interchange. The Center is open Mondays through Saturdays from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and on Sundays and most holidays from 1 to 4 p.m. Trails, exhibits, gift shop, library. Free admission.

"Because of this," said Epperly, "the blood supply is safer now than it has ever been."

Epperly stressed that AIDS can be transmitted from mothers to their children in childbirth and through sexual activities.

"The risk lies in peoples health habits, said Epperly, "a persons drug use and sex life. Right now it is a game of Russian roulette and there are more and more bullets in the chamber all the time. In Central Africa the disease is evenly split between men and women."

Epperly sees abstinence as the smartest choice at this point.

"The next best thing is safe sex. By that I mean no exchange of body fluids. Condoms are not perfect. For those people that are going to have sex, condoms are better than nothing at all."

Epperly said that there will be no vaccines available until at least the mid 1990's and that is even doubtful.

"There are a lot of teenagers and young adults having sex and we have to do something about it," said Epperly.

One of the most interesting questions of the evening was raised by Mindy Mazur. She examined how having yourself tested for AIDS will help pyschologically. Some of the questions she raised included, "If you think you might have AIDS do you need a test to change your behavior? What kind of relationship problems might having the test cause? nd do you want to have knowledge of a disease that there is no cure for?"

"It is a very personal and voluntary decision," added Mazur.

Any licensed physician can give an AIDS test, explained Mazur, although some might decline.

Upon questioning, Mazur defended her stance on educating people to all aspects of the disease.

"This is not discouragement about having the test done," said Mazur, "It is an individual decision that everyone has to make. I just hope it is an informed one."

Dr. Charles Bliss had some relatively good news for the audience on Wednesday.

"Massachusetts is one of the few states that does not accept pay donors," explained Bliss. Junkies have been known to peddle their blood for money in many states. The AIDS virus is now prevalent among members of the drug culture. Bliss also explained that the disease is not transmitted through mosquitoes.

The audience was attentive during last week's AIDS seminar sponsored by the Board of Health and the Social Service League. (Dave Sullivan photo)

Jane Parker of the visiting nurses association told some sad stories. Parker described a 28 year old man that she knew, with AIDS, for the audience.

"He would wake up in the morning and know that death was coming. He would wake up in the middle of the night sweating. He would do careful body searches each day for lesions. He was constantly worried about paying his rent, having food to eat and who was going to care for him. His life was filled with disappointment and he had no future."

Stephen Hart looked at two major areas in depth. As far as developing policies for children with AIDS attending public schools, Hart maintains a policy of inclusion.

"We would allow children to attend public schools on the advice of the child's physician. A potential hazard would be dealt with in another way."

Hart also touched on the obligation of providing education. Cohasset has a very respected health education program that teaches all of the students about the disease.

"The AIDS program begins in the seventh grade," said Hart.

A major factor missing from Wednesdays program, aside from the telegenic Jeanne Blake, was the presence of members of Cohassets youth. The absence did not go unnoticed.

"As a parent of a teenager I see this as a red flag, a real concern in the world today," said Judy Ritts of Old Coach Road. "It is a life and death issue."

Sue McNamara from the Community Health Education Advisory Commission in Cohasset was in attendance for a number of reasons.

"We are concerned with the implementation of state guidelines," said McNamara. "I want to gather more information to help make some productive recomendations. We all must be aware that AIDS is a reality even in this pristine little town that we live in."

Dave McCarthy, one of the few college age people in in attendance, " I came to see what kind of reaction the townspeople had to the disease."

"I was aware of a lot of the things said tonight. They aggressively teach the facts about AIDS at Northeastern. I am interested mostly in the curriculum. I would like to know what is planned for the kids. There is a lot of prejudice that kids grow up with today and that is what concerns me the most. They should teach the kids how to deal with the pressures. Kids used to grow up worrying about baseball."

Pilgrim's problems haven't been resolved, Studds says

Commentary

By U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds

Recently, I met in Duxbury with local officials and residents from towns in the vicinity of the Pilgrim Nuclear Power Station to discuss various issues related to the facility. The plant has been shut down since April 1986 to resolve a number of operational problems.

Most of the discussion focused on issues relating to the possible restart of Pilgrim, whose owner — the Boston Edison Company — is expected to seek federal approval to resume operations in the near future.

These issues included emergency evacuation planning, modifications to the plant's containment structure, and the management problems that have plagued the facility for many years.

Questions were raised not only about Pilgrim, but about the production of nuclear power generally. Several participants were interested, for example, in legislation relating to the liability of nuclear power plant operators and to designation of disposal sites for high level radioactive waste.

I also took this opportunity to describe several specific requests that I had recently made of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC).

In one letter to NRC Chairman Lando Zech, cosigned by Senator Edward Kennedy, I called for broad public participation in NRC consideration of any proposal to resume operations at the Pilgrim plant.

In my view, the agency's current plans for public participation are totally inadequate. Only a formal, comprehensive hearing will afford sufficient opportunity for public involvement.

In a second letter to Chairman Zech, I asked the agency to perform an environmental assessment — as required by its own regulations — prior to the restart of Pilgrim, with specific attention to modifications to the plant's containment structure. In particular, I noted that a proposed venting system — intended to keep the reactor from exploding if the cooling system fails — has not been subjected to a review of the environmental effects of a radiation release.

I also called on the NRC to delay judgment on Boston Edison's request for approval of this venting system until the agency completes an ongoing evaluation of the general issue of containment venting. While the utility's venting design may indeed be a safe and appropriate method to prevent core damage or mitigate its consequences in the event of a severe accident, a decision to approve this system at this time would be premature and unwise.

Finally, I stressed to the group my view that problems which led to the closing of the troubled plant have not yet been resolved.

While Boston Edison has been making progress in several areas — management problems, security, radiological controls, and fire protection — I am not convinced that these changes are sufficient to allow the plant to resume operations.

Moreover, the Pilgrim plant should not be allowed to restart, under any circumstances, until the state develops an emergency evacuation plan that is satisfactory to local and federal disaster planning officials.

I was pleased to have had this opportunity to meet with area residents to discuss concerns relating to Pilgrim. I intend to continue to follow this issue closely and will do all I can to see that all levels of government properly carry out their regulatory responsibilities in this matter.

Health board votes to close Heights landfill

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

The health board has ordered the shutdown of Cohasset Heights Ltd. The order was expected to be issued Thursday, Oct. 22.

Following the unanimous vote late Monday night, board members notified special counsel Michael Leon of their action. A cease and desist order was expected to be delivered to the landfill Thursday, requiring the immediate shutdown of the commercial landfill.

Atty. Leon said he is also preparing a complaint which will be filed Monday seeking judicial enforcement of the cease and desist order. "This will enforce the order to stop operations at the landfill," he stated.

Information regarding the board's actions was sketchy as all comments were referred by Health Agent Joseph Godzik to board chairman, Dr. John Burns. Burns could not be reached for any clarifying comments late Wednesday.

Water commissioner Ronald Goodwin, who attended Monday night's lengthy board meeting, said the members definitely voted to shutdown the landfill.

As part of its Monday night agenda, the board discussed quarterly well monitoring samples. Also included in the board's discussion, chairman Burns stated Tuesday, was whether CHL had posted a $750,000 bond

Special Town Meeting Oct. 26

Divided opinions on Rte. 3A zoning

There are strong sentiments on both sides of this street.

There's a faction in town who wants the community to remain residential. There's another segment who encourages controlled business growth.

They'll meet to debate this issue at Monday night's special town meeting.

The Oct. 26 warrant includes a proposal to redistrict certain sections of Rte. 3A from light industry and highway business to residential. As expected, business owners throughout the town are lined up against this proposal which was suggested by an equally vocal group of residents.

One resident, Kevin O'Donnell, joined a number of neighbors in an effort to place the article in the warrant. Although he was not instrumental in helping to formulate the zoning bylaw proposal, O'Donell said he wholeheartedly supports it.

Local businesses wonder where to turn for help

By Bob Tis
Mariner staff

The old saying, "It is just impossible to find good help these days," has become a reality for local businesses. Help wanted signs adorn windows and the newspapers are full of adds but the unskilled labor force just don't seem to be interested.

Plain and simple there is a labor crisis is Cohasset. The college students have gone back to school and in many cases local businesses are at the verge of closing their doors.

"People are calling and calling looking for kids to work," said Mary Babaian, a guidance counselor at the high school. "There are some great salaries but the kids just don't seem to be interested. They want to have their free time. We have tons of jobs posted. We announce them on the intercom in the morning. The kids just don't bother coming in."

Babaian explained that last year the work study program was dropped because the kids were beginning to use the program for reasons other than it was set up for. Presently there is an early release program where students can leave school early for their job with parental permission providing they can fit all of their classes in the morning periods. According to Babaian this is not a very popular program.

"Maybe six students, if that, take advantage of it," said Babaian.

This is a far cry from the situation at the high school throughout the seventies and early eighties when students clammered for minimum wage earning jobs.

According to owner Paul Logue, most of the unskilled labor positions at Hugos are filled by High School students from Cohasset and Scituate. Logue reported having a difficult time finding help.

"I have resorted to paying $6 and hour to start," said Logue. "I'm amazed. I myself worked as a dishwasher when I was younger and I always wanted more hours. Frankly I don't think that these kids need the money. I think they look at it as sort of a hobby type of thing. They say to themselves well I'll just give this a try and see how I like it."

Susan Swift the manager at the Casual Male in Cohasset reports a similar situation.

"It is very hard to find someone to work mornings. Very often I'm working by myself," said Swift. "If it gets busy I can't wait on someone as well as I should."

According to Swift, Casual Male is now advertising to attract senior citizens as well as offering incentive plans to workers in general.

The situation has grown a little more tragic at the Cohasset Pizza House. Starting this week the Pizza House will be closed on Sundays.

"We can't find any help," said owner Debbie Ryan. The Pizza House is staffed by only three full time

Cohasset's week . . .

'Poor, handicapped ignored'

Following last week's meeting with representatives of the state Executive Office of Communities and Development (EOCD), resident Mary Klein said town officials, "should be called to task for ignoring the housing needs of the poor and mentally handicapped."

Reacting to statements made by Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray who said the state was "blackmailing" the town into providing fair housing, Klein noted, "in my opinion this is absolutely appalling and strictly a political statement. These positions taken by our politicians are morally bankrupt and I will fight them to the end."

Klein, a longtime Cohasset resident, is without a home. She has filed a complaint in Superior Court against the town, charging them with failing to provide low and moderate income housing within the town, and attempting to block the impending sale of the Independence Building on Main Street.

She will now seek an injunction to prevent the town from leasing the building until the complaint hearing is completed. "I am actively working to force the town into helping its residents. They have ignored these problems for too long. I fully expect to succeed in my actions," Klein said. The Cohasset resident, who is currently camping out on town property, is representing herself in court.

"We should call these politicians to task. The town has a lot of problems, be it their poor, their landfills or their solid waste disposal. They're trying to export these problems out of town. It's time for our officials to take responsibility for human problems," she said.

Workers at Webb-Norfolk Conveyor have been on strike for more than a week. Union spokesmen would not publicly discuss the reasons for the strike.

Cable company merger

Selectmen were informed this week that a recent decision was made by the board of directors of American Cablesystems Corporation to enter into a merger agreement with Continental Cablevision,Inc. American will become a subsidiary of Continental. The transaction will not be complete until the first part of 1988.

"We have to watch this very carefully," said Burt Pratt. "We have to make sure that we don't continue to pay more than all of the surrounding towns for cable service."

Company officials informed selectmen that the reason for the merger was, "so the company can combine with a larger company better positioned to operate successfully in the long run."

Continental is currently the third largest cable system operator in the country.

Salvador entitled to pay

In a special meeting held earlier this month the personnel committee voted unanimously that Manuel Salvador was entitled to vacation pay for accrued vacation which he had not taken.

Committee members William Good, John Brady, and Charles Douglas as well as town counsel Richard Henderson were present at the meeting with Salvador.

After lengthy discussion the board decided that Salvador was entitled to 19 days of sick leave, representing the number of days that he had accrued before but not taken before his position was terminated.

Salvador was on sick leave at the time the job was eliminated and was unable to take his vacation.

Selectmen reject Lillard project

By Bob Tis
Mariner staff

Selectmen made some surprise recomendations on the warrants for Mondays special town meeting on Monday, shying away from some of the big money articles.

Selectmen voted 3-2 not to support Article 9, a $661,000 bill for major renovations to Lillard field.

"I have no information besides what is in the warrant," said selectman Martha Gjesteby.

"I think that a special town meeting is the wrong time to consider an article this large," said selectman Burt Pratt referring to the fact that heavy expense would come in the middle of the fiscal year.

"I too would like to see how this is going to fit into the scheme of things," said selectmen Cliff Mitman.

Article 9 is loosely tied to articles 10,11 and 12 which would provide a six lane running track, bleachers and lights for the field bringing the total cost near one million dollars. Each article, however, is seperate. Selectmen chose to put off voting on 11-13.

"We are trying to correct 25 years of neglect all at once," said Mitman. "I think that maybe we should take one bite at a time. I don't know if I can support it at this particular time."

Selectmen Rocco Laugelle and Jim Gallagher voted in favor of reccommending the Lillard field renovations.

Gjesteby and Pratt sided together again not to reccomend the one million one hundered thousand dollar police/fire station renovation. Gjesteby called the new structure, "too large."

"I think that these two departments ought to live together," said Pratt referring to a lack of common living space shared by the two departments.

Laugelle, Mitman and Gallagher overrided Gjesteby and Pratt voting to recommend the article for approval.

Selectmen voted unanimously to oppose a citizens appeal to turn King Street into a one way street.

"A one way street doesn't necessarily slow traffic down," said Mitman. "I think that we should wait until the street light is up," Mitman continued, referring to the present installation of a traffic light in front of the Stop & Shop.

Selectmen also voted unanimously not to support the proposed land swap for the benefit of a residential subdivision on the easterly side of Route 3A.

"If it was an individual who wanted to live there, it might be a different story," said chairman Laugelle. "It is for three homes that the developer is going to sell. I think it is a bad deal."

After stirring oratories from John Bishop of Fair Oaks Lane and Donald Steele, selectmen voted 4-1 to support a rezoning of certain highway business districts on Route 3A.

"We don't want to stifle business we just want to control it," said Bishop. "We are concerned about the character of the town and we are interested in controlling the growth of this commercial area."

If Article 6 were passed by town meeting it would still be possible for land owners to zone commercially. They would have to submit careful plans to town boards, however.

"A lot of people in town are busy doing a lot of things," said Donald Steele. "It was when the Stop& Shop thing came up that I wondered, is there anything in place to stop another one."

Selectmen voted 4-1 to support this measure on local business with Gallagher dissenting.

Selectmen voted unanimously to support both warrant articles requested by the disposal area study committee. Article 14 will authorize the board of selectmen to negotiate and execute an agreement with SEMASS. Article 20 is to see if the town will raise and appropriate money for the purpose of engaging a consultant to design a transfer station relating to the town's waste disposal.

Selectmen did not realize that at the same time, only a few blocks away, the board of health was voting to close Cohasset Heights Landfill.

Selectmen also recommended approval of $500 for the purpose of a hazardous materials response unit and to enter into a contract with other towns to share the cost of equipping and maintaining hazardous materials.

Selectmen voted to support a bill that will widen and relocate Rosano Lane off North Main Street.

Divided opinions on Rte. 3A zoning . . .

"I clearly see Cohasset as a residential community, not a business community. And the last thing I want for this town is a Rte. 3A similar to a Rte. 53 in Hanover and Norwell," he said. "I think a mixture of good businesses and residences along that area would be an appropriate use of the remaining available land."

The Fair Oaks Lane resident denied that he and his neighbors were lashing back at the local businesses because of the pending arrival of the super Stop and Shop. Many Fair Oaks Lane residents attempted to stop the approval of the supermarket at the corner of Sohier Street and Rte. 3A. Their efforts to prevent the store from operating 24 hours a day were successful last spring, when town meeting passed an ordinance limiting the business hours of local retail stores.

"I simply feel this is a good use of the land left along Rte. 3A," O'Donnell said. "We're probably about thirty years too late, but anything we can do now will help in the future."

Several businessmen along Rte. 3A disagree with this proposal and are gearing for a verbal fight on the floor of town meeting.

John Seavey, president of Seavey Engineering on Rte. 3A, is opposed to the article. His strongest objection, Seavey said, stems the belief that there should be a diversity of land uses within a town, not residential property alone. "I don't believe that philosophy works. A town is a better place for its diversity," he stated.

A 30-year resident of the town, Seavey thought the plan at that time to create a business district along the state highway was correct. "I still don't like the idea that Cohasset should be a little bedroom community," he said. "That's a negative attribute. I feel strongly about the creation of new jobs through the creation of light industry. That's a proposal worth preserving. Industry creates new jobs, particularly for the young people who would like to live and work here. "

The arguments for an against the proposal may simply be a "tempest in a teapot," according to the businessman. "Those properties not yet built upon along Rte. 3A are mostly unbuildable, wetlands or have septic problems, with the exception of the 19 acres owned by Deck Point Inc."

Seavey said it was always his desire to live and work in Cohasset. His company now employs about 40 people, most of whom live on the South Shore.

"It's probably all water over the damn," he cautioned, noting that the time to debate the issue was 30 years ago. "I think the remedy to the problems created by the existing businesses is for our town boards to maintain their strength and to keep the strong controls they have over the use of these remaining properties. The planning board and the zoning board have strict restrictions on access to Rte. 3A, and parking. And the board of health has severly tightened its septic waste disposal laws. So these controls will wipeout any future haphazard development along Rte. 3A.

"We can live with the zoning as it is. Let's not throw the baby out with the bath water. We must support our town boards who are well guided in their notions to develop Rte. 3A property. The town must encourage a diversity of land use here."

Wayne Sawchuck, a local businessman, is also a former resident of the state highway. "It's tough raising a family there," he said, recalling that the busy road is not well-suited to life with small children. There is little sense of neighborhood along the main thoroughfare, he added.

"I certianly understand why residents signed this proposal," Sawchuk said. "These residents are interested in a better-appearing Rte. 3A. But I think that the means by which they are going about this, can certainly be changed. They're sending a message, but I don't think it's the right message.

"The planning board, through its site plan review process, especially since its new guidelines have gone into effect, determines a substantial buffer between residential and business property along Rte. 3A. There are no requirements now for the amount of structural coverage allowed on a property, and requirements for landscaping and parking. People have to realize the type of developoment we have there now could never happen again. But it takes time for new proposals to be built, before the effect of these new bylaws can be seen," he stated.

A trickle-down effect of climbing Cohasset property values will affect the type and appearnace of businesses coming into Cohasset. "With land more valuable, I think, we'll see better uses of the land along Rte. 3A," he said. "I think this is signified by the new Bergeson's and Seavey's new place.

"I really wouldn't say Rte. 3A has gone down in the last five years. On the contrary, with the number of improvements, including Cushing Plaza, Rte.3A is looking better than it has in the last five years."

The planning board voted four-to-one to reject this citizens' proposal. Member John O'Toole was the only member to favor the redistricting plan.

Chairman Robert Sturdy called the proponents "selfishly motivated," and said the petition was "selfishly motivated as a backlash against the Stop and Shop plan.

"The reasons for this proposal have nothing to do with their concern for the other residents of this town," he stated. "They are concerned about themselves. It's a reaction to Stop and Shop, pure and simple. They want us to be a bedroom community."

But Sturdy said passage of this article could lead to furthering an antagonistic relationship with the state. Through executive order 215, the state has mandated that Cohasset provide fair housing in the town. "In effect, the wording of the order says each town need not pass its burdens onto someone else - be that low income, landfills or business.

"Right now, Cohasset is a somewhat balanced community. It is not 100 percent balanced, but we are not pushing the larger burdens onto someone else. I think this proposal is unreasonable. Cohasset must provide opportunities for people to work in the town where they live. That is very important to employment here."

The board chairman stated that in his opinion, the proposal "is highly discriminatory to the existing business people on Rte. 3A. They will not be able to improve or expand their buildings in the future," he explained.

"And Rte. 3A is not apppropriate for residential use," he continued. "We've had four different traffic experts tell us this an extremely heavily-traveled road. That is not the appropriate place for kids to play. I hope the town will vote against this."

Selectmen's briefs

Building leased

Selectmen voted unanimously this week to provide a one year lease for the Independence Building in Cohasset Village. The building will be leased to the prospective owner of the property who plans to renovate at least part of the building for personal office space. According to town Counsel Richard Henderson the final sale of the building could be blocked, due to litigation, for one year.

Committee change

Selectmen accepted the resignation of Tom Sheppard from the Insurance Committee. They voted unanimously to approve the appointment of Sam Wakeman to the committee. Selectmen also granted the chamber of commerce use of the common on December 13,1987 for their annual party. The title of this years celebration is "White Christmas."

Emotions high on controversial warrant articles

By Bob Tis
Mariner staff

Advisory board member Arne Gjesteby suggested at Tuesday's meeting that a secret ballot be used at next Monday's special town meeting for some of the big money items including Lillard field renovation and the police/fire renovation.

From some of the feelings evident in townspeople, this could prove to be a very emotional town meeting. Gjesteby noted there is pressure on many people to vote in certain directions.

Advisory board members discussed having a lottery of agenda items. The reasoning behind this is that in the past, special interest groups have entered town meeting in large groups, voted on their one specific interest and then left. This has outraged citizens with the patience to sit through the entire meeting only to lose their vote to herds of voters ushered in for a brief time.

This special town meeting will be no different because special interest groups will be in attendance. It is more than probable that athletic boosters will be out in full force to support the Lillard field article. Police and fire department supporters will arrive with the main intention of voting in the new station. Fair Oaks residents will most likely be out in large numbers to vote in the rezoning of 3A.

Two men spoke at the Tuesday night's advisory board meeting, trying to persuade members of the advisory board to vote for what they saw to be the best interest of the town. In both cases it failed.

John Seavey owns the Whitney Hill Technology center. He employs around forty people many of them from Cohasset at his 3A business. Seavey told the advisory board that he was, "disturbed by the article."

"3A does not belong in a residential zone," Seavey told the board. "It is not a proper place for kids to be picked up on a school bus. It is just not a safe place."

Seavey, as well as the advisory board, and the selectmen have all heard the arguement from citizens, who want this to remain a, "residential community." Seavey doesn't agree.

"A diversity of land uses if you think about it is beneficial," said Seavey. "Many jobs can be created in the light industry zoning that remains."

Seavey stressed the fact that he works and lives in Cohasset. Also he employs many prospective young engineers from Cohasset.

"I think that there is something healthy about employing them in the community," said Seavey.

Seavey concluded that developing the Deck Point land would not make good residential property.

"It would be an island seperating the residents from the rest of the town," said Seavey. "We have a strong planning board and a strong appeals board. They can control development. The board of health has already made it twice as difficult to build in Cohasset. I would like to see them do their work."

Seavey asserted that many people would like to see Cohasset turn into a bedroom community.

"I don't like congestion. I don't want to see 3A turn into more of a strip joint than it already is," said Seavey.

"This is a heavyhanded approach to the long term cleaning up of 3A," said Seavey. "It is too late to take this heavy handed approach."

In reply, Bill Lean of the board told Seavey, "If you don't have heavy handed control you have no control."

Lean explained to Seavey that they were not trying to stop businesses like his, but only major endeavors like the Stop&Shop.

"Look at that thing sitting there," said Lean obviously there was no way anyone could control it," he continued.

Seavey disagreed, "the land is job creating. The elitist attitude that would wish to do this would set the town back fifty years," he said.

As a resident of 3A at one time Wayne Sawchuk was able to explain to the board first hand how he felt about the rezoning of 3A."It is not a spot to have individual houses."

"Economicly," said Sawchuk, "we have a single tax rate. Business is valued higher than residential property. Residential property on 3A has one of the least values on 3A. If you rezone you are absolutely going to lose."

"There is a tax consequence," said Sawchuk. "The only use for a property that is a gas station now will be a gas station. It is either going to be a gas station or a house," said Sawchuk referring to the fact that property owners will not be allowed to upgrade their grandfathered businesses.

The advisory board told Sawchuk that variances can be applied for.

A motion was forwarded to support the article despite the speeches of both, Sawchuk and Seavey.

"The decision was made 30 years ago to make that land commercial," said Paul Lualdi of the board, holding to the ideals of Sawchuk and Seavey. "You can't close the barn door now that the horse is out. It is discriminatory against the people who bought the land."

Despite Lualdi's efforts, the motion made by Lean carried by a 3-2 vote.

I think we are seeing a judgement of the people in the town and where they want the community to go," said board chaiman Jane Goedecke. "Sometimes it is just a personal decision.

The real test will be on Monday. The voters of Cohasset have the choice to rezone some of the only light business commercial property left in town and possibly start a trend towards making Cohasset a bedroom community.

School committee keeps article in warrant

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

By a slim margin, the school committee voted this week to keep an article in the special town meeting warrant which would authorize a swap of land with an Evergreen Lane developer.

Despite a request from abuttors to withdraw the article, the committee decided to keep the article in the warrant. The committee did not take a vote whether to support the article, but only decided to submit it at the request of two other town boards.

The planning board and conservation commission requested the school board submit an article which would authorize the swap of a 6,518 square-foot piece of school-owned land to developer Paul Ferrini, in exchange for a 18,524 square-foot parcel adjacent to school-owned land. The two boards proposed the swap which would allow Ferrini to build a common access for the three house lots along Rte. 3A onto Evergreen Lane, rather than onto the heavily-traveled state highway.

But in an Oct. 7 letter, the conservation commission informed the school committee that it was withdrawing its support of the article. Based on a report from its engineer, who indicated the Evergreen Lane access would severely impact the adjacent wetlands, the commission recorded its opposition to the plan.

The planning board has not notified the school committee of its recommendation regarding the proposed land exchange.

Project abuttor Peter Pacetti of Evergreen Lane asked the school committee to withdraw the article from town meeting consideration. "In light of the conservation commission's decision to withdraw its support, we are asking you to reconsider. We are asking if you would support something if you knew that two boards were dyametrically opposed to it," he questioned.

But chairman Joseph Nedrow stated, "If we take this action and deny the town the right to debate this issue, I share the concern (with member Christopher Ford) that to deny that is pretty presumptuious on our part."

Ford noted, "I'm troubled by this. The only reason we acted in the first place is so we wouldn't be obstructionist between two boards. We're trying to do the best for the town, but we are not privy to environmental concerns. Those are the issues to be addressed by the planning board. They must have the opportunity to continue to investigate them without us jerking the rug from under them.To say the town can't explore this anymore is to violate our position."

There was division within the committee, however, as member Nancy Sandell favored withdrawing the article from special town meeting consideration. "If these issues are as critical as the planning board says, then the annual town meeting time is the time for them to step forward and fight for this," she stated.

Pacetti explained to the committee that the planning board has failed to listen to their concerns, and will not consider the abuttors' comments before the Oct. 26 special town meeting.

Supt. Stephen Hart said it was his understanding that if the conservation commission withdrew its support of the article, the planning board would not push forward with the proposal next week.

One resident added, "the most graceful way out for you may be to withdraw in your behalf."

The committee chairman added, "but the parlimentarian in me says if we have equal boards of equal stature, maybe town meeting is the place to arbitrate this. We put this on the warrant as a result of two boards asking us to do that If we back out, we are denying town meeting debate."

Sandell was adamant that without an official response from the planning board, and considering the conservation commission's withdrawal from the article, the proposal should be postponed before town meeting.

Evergreen resident Pacetti agreed, stating, "it will not be a valuable use of town meeting's time. If you had two groups opposed to each other from the beginning, would you have put the article in?"

Member Diana Kornet answered affirmatively, noting, "but we are not the ones to put our thumbs up or down on this issue." She noted that her conviction to allow public debate on this issue preclude her personal feelings about the proposal.

But member Barbara Bliss said she still "has some anger toward the planning board. I don't think they've given great thought to this. Maybe it would be wrong to withdraw the article, I don't know. But I want to know why they (planning board members) still haven't responded. Is that a reason to withdraw this article? I have a real problem with this."

On a motion by Sandell to withdraw the article from next week's special town meeting, only Bliss voted for the idea. Members Nedrow, Kornet and Ford voted against the motion, with Kornet commenting, "that's not how I'll vote at town meeting."

In other school committee action this week, Cohasset High School senior David Shultz was awarded the Superintendent's award for being the number one academic student in the senior class.

The award is sponsored annually by the Massachusetts Association of School Superintendents. "We're very pleased to award this to David." Supt. Stephen Hart said Monday night. "It now becomes part of the student's package which will go off to the colleges he applies for."

The next meeting of the school committee will be Nov. 2 at 8 p.m. Supt. Hart noted that the school committee will be presented with its first look at the proposed Fiscal Year 1989 school budget on Jan. 4.

The budget format will remain the same, he explained, and will be ready for public input after that date.

Supt. Hart noted that the school department recently received a $4,800 Early Childhood Allocation Grant. The money will be used to employ a speech and language therapist who will assist in language screening, support services and language development in the pre-schools throughout Cohasset. The therapist will provide integrated language services at some pre-schools in the community, he explained.

The seventh grade team teachers made a presentation to the school committee this week in which they explained the successful method of "clustering" the young students at the high school. The concept of team teaching is new to Cohasset, they noted, but the concept helps to provide a closer sense of community and personal attention to the young students entering the high school.

The school committee praised the concept, noting that the four-teacher teams are a more expensive method of teaching, but may prove successful enough to continue into the eighth grade. They requested parents to comment about the teaching method to the teachers and the to the committee.

as required by Oct. 2. That requirement was part of the site assignment agreed to by the health board and the landfill owners, John and Paul Barry, in May, 1986.

The site assignment required that CHL post two $750,000 bonds to cover the construction costs of the landfill's leachate treatment facility. The facility would prevent further breakout of the leachate, the landfill's liquid refuse, from the landfill into the adjacent swamp or nearby Lily Pond reservoir.

Dr. Burns said although the first bond was posted by the deadline, CHL had failed to post the second amount. "We were concerned that there would be no guarantee for the town. We feel it will be a threat to the public health if this plant is not built, so we took the vote to suspend their permit to operate," he explained. "It was a violation of the site assignment - including the timetable and the amount, which we all agreed to last year."

"The landfill's failure to post that bond was the reason a stop-operations order will be issued," Atty. Leon explained.

A letter was also addressed to the CHL owners which stated that during an inspection of the landfill Oct. 19 by Health Agent Joseph Godzik, the town official saw leachate spilling over into the vacinity of the underdrain and tanks. The leak ran across the road, according to the letter, and eroded an area of hay bales near the road. The leachate also spilled into the swale in Whitney Woods which is owned by the Trustees of Reservation, for a distance of about 75 feet from CHL.

"This was a direct violation of the Board of Health's order to contain all leachate on site," Dr. Burns stated.

The problem appeared to be resolved by Wednesday, Atty. Leon said, based on a re-inspection of the site by Dr. Godzik.

According to the board chairman, CHL was issued a cease and desist order Tuesday by the health agent, based upon evidence of that leachate spill. But according to the health agent's report, it appeared that CHL was in the process of cleaning up the spill, Dr. Burns said late Tuesday afternoon.

"If the problem is corrected, that particular cease and desist order could be rescinded," he added.

Dr. Godzik also noted that during a routine inspection of the commercial landfill, he viewed some substance that resembled asbestos. He showed the sample to the health board Monday night, and explained he would have it tested Tuesday at a Weymouth laboratory.

The lab reported Tuesday that the substance was not asbestos. A written report detailing the contents of the material would be immediately sent to the board.

"I was concerned when I saw this material, because it did resemble asbestos. They hadn't buried it and it was located directly in the work area. Since they are not authorized to dispose of asbestos in the landfill, I wanted to check it out," Dr. Godzik explained. "As it turns out, there is no asbestos in the sampe. They mentioned a few synthetic fibers were found, but everything will be put into a written report to the board."

The health agent said the board did not request information on the toxicity of the substance.

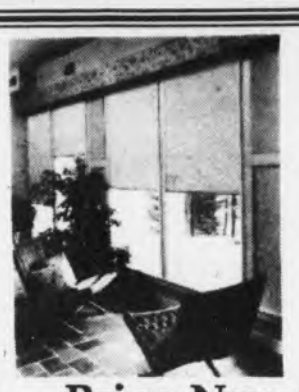
employees. Debbie and Jimmy Ryan have not had a day off since the Fourth of July and before that they have trouble remembering having a day off.



"Sunday is actually a very good day for us," said Jimmy Ryan, manager at the local restaurant. "We can't close during the week though, people depend on us for lunch."

Advertising at the Cohasset High School, in the window and in local papers has proved fruitless for the Ryans. The result being that a lot Sunday afternoon football watching pizza gobblers aren't going to be able to consume there favorite product.

The situation is the same at rival Papa Gino's. A local newspaper advertizes positions at the pizza chain with a starting pay of $330 for a five day work week, experience or a degree not required.

"It's been brutal," says the manager at Bildners, "since the college kids have left. We are running adds in 3 papers and have a referral program with our employees. Also our wages are very competitive; in fact I think they are over competitive."

"If I'm late for work it's really no big deal," said Trisch Hamil,16, counter help at a oceanside bakery.

☐ Attorney William D. Weeks has been elected president of Plymouth County Development Council (PCDC) for the year 1987-88.

A graduate of Harvard College and the University of Virginia Law School, Mr. Weeks is currently a partner in the Boston law firm of Sherburne, Powers & Needham. From 1964 to 1970, he was a member of the Massachusetts State Senate, representing the Norfolk and Plymouth District. Weeks is also Town Moderator in Cohasset.

She also won the Scituate Heritage Days juried photo award last summer.

☐ Todd Henry has been getting quite a kick out of his post graduate year at Williston School in Easthampton, Ma. Todd, a 1987 CHS graduate, is starting tight end, defensive end, kick off speciaist, field goal specialist, and extra point kicker. He was five for five attempts for extra points last Saturday during his team's 35-0 victory over Westminster and hasn't missed a point-after attempt this season! Keep up your grand efforts, Todd, that sure is a super record!

☐ Another football story that's worthy of mention . . . remember Mark Lahive and Jay Contis, 1985 CHS grads? They were football heroes while at Cohasset too, and have gone on to Middlebury College and Bates College. They are now "foes" on the field, and Middlebury won this week . . . you can be sure that Jay will be looking for revenge next time around!!

Auctioneer F. Allen Weisenfluh holds a soccer ball autographed by the CHS soccer team. The ball was auctioned Saturday at a gala art center benefit.

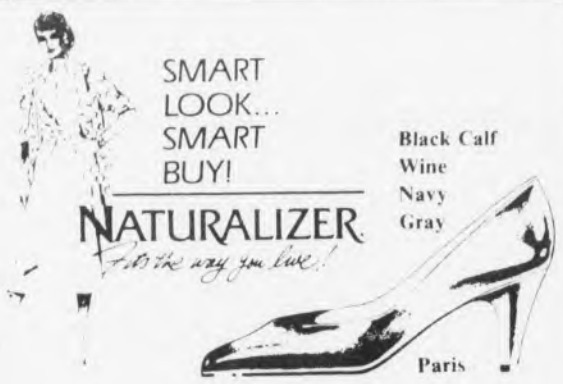
☐ Cohasset certainly lost a fine man this week, Mr. McCarthy was one that always did for others. If you didn't know him,, you surely knew his car . . . the antique red convertible that has been in every parade that's been around. When you see it at the Homecoming Parade this Saturday, be sure to remember him and all of his efforts to make our town a better place to live. Remember how he adored children and loved life, and how lucky we all were to be touched by him.

☐ This week is one to remember, it's time to set the clocks back already. Don't forget, Saturday at 2:00 a.m. it will really be 1:00 a.m. Here come the long dark nights.

☐ There is another Jimmy Fund benefit in the works, this one is aimed at all of you "jocks" that played football for Cohasset High in 1962, 1963, or 1964. Mr. Burke of Hull is planning to hold a touch football game, with a breakfast beforehand and probably tons of whirlpools afterwards! The game will take place in Hull, with the date and time to be announced. If you were a member of one of the classes mentioned, and are interested in participating, please call Clark Chatterton at 383-6103 (work) or 383-0560 (home).

☐ Lots of happy people "around town" when it was learned that Bill Sestito will remain on the Fire Department. Hats off to Civil Service for making the decision, and to Bill for appealing the ruling of the Department of Personnel Administration. Bill will certainly make a good and conscientious fireman, and we are fortunate to have him.



☐ Be sure to stop by the newly located Print Room at the Lilac House on Main Street. Its owner, Lauren Lydon, has sure made it a beautiful place to look at, browse through, and buy from. You'll love it.

☐ Congratulations to Tom Reardon, who was recently elected to the Board of Trustees at Derby Academy. Tom will be a grand addition to the Board, he is a great guy and a hard worker!

☐ Yes, that was Dudley Bryant that you saw on channel 38 a few weeks ago. Dudley is a member of the sophomore class at Cohasset High, and certainly is becoming more and more famous for his artistic talents.

☐ Good luck to Lauren Wood, Kim Ward, Michelle Ward, Kara Protulis, Michelle Buckley and Marisol Perry all of whom are competing in the Winterland ISIA Skating team. The first competition will be this Saturday and they will compete with over 100 skaters. The group, which skated at the Cohasset Winter Garden now makes its home at the Rockland Rink.

Warrant opinions

Town meeting begins Monday, Oct. 26 at 7:30 p.m., although debate about the warrant articles has lingered long before that.

Among the more controversial will certainly be those articles that carry a hefty price tag.

One such expensive proposal is the police and fire station renovation project. It appears the project could cost the town $1.1 million. It is a project worthy of our consideration. But the ultimate question for voters to answer Monday night will be whether this plan is necessary.

Unfortunately, these plans are often seen in conjunction with another expensive proposal before special town meeting - the repair of Lillard Field.

Voters must realize these are two separate requests, although together they could cost the town about $2 million. And with the additional requests for a transfer station, a possible firefighters' contract and other municipal expenses, this town could be nearing that 2 1/2 limitation.

It's difficult to prioritize expenditures, particularly when one can see some merit in all requests. In these days of fiscal contraints, very few frivolous requests come before voters. To prioritize each capital request is the unenviable task of the capital budget committee. It is their duty to view each request in cold, hard cash. Numbers are their major concerns, while looking at the necessity of each request from a learned, knowledgeable perspective. Which items are more necessary by a majority of residents is how they rank each proposal.

Also included in this crowded warrant are some non-capital expenses which are nonetheless controversial and crucial to those affected residents. A request to convert a portion of King Street from Pond Street to the Rte. 3A intersection into a one-way street is important to a number of residents living on that heavily-traveled street.

We're not sure their problems will be solved by this solution, and we are certain this re-routing will cause havoc for commuters. If this solution is approved, what's to stop other neighbors . . . along Nichols Road, Jerusalem Road or Main Street, from making the same request? And once that precedent is set, there is nothing to stop the town from complying with future requests.

And another neighborhood has banned together to redistrict a portion of Rte. 3A from light industry and business to residential. It is their concern for the future of that state highway and its impact on the residential quality of Cohasset that brought about this action.

Again, we do not see the merit in this article brought by a number of Fair Oaks residents. As we see it, Rte. 3A does not make the best family neighborhood for future residents of our town. We also feel that the planning board and zoning board of appeals are equipped with strict and proper bylaws which enable them to equitably resolve the types, location and business structures which will be allowed along Rte. 3A.

We acknowledge and appreciate their concern, but we disagree with their solution. With constant supervision of our town boards, and the continuation of tough but fair bylaws, we can encourage and control the size and amount of businesses into our community.

Another article which has received extensive publicity is the proposed land swap between a Rte. 3A residential developer and the school department.

First, let us say we agree that the school committee was obliged, at the request of two town boards, to submit the warrant article. We feel they were right in refusing to withdraw it from the warrant, as several residents requested.

But we are also opposed to the article. It does indeed appear that the planning board has tried desperately to please one developer, perhaps at the expense of the residents and the protected wetlands in that neighborhood.

We do not support this article, which has since lost the support of the conservation commission.

There are many articles to consider for Monday night's special town meeting. Whatever your views, every voter should plan to attend. With a small quorum requirement of 100, your vote is particularly important.

An autumn view of Central Cemetery.

The history of Central Cemetery

By David Wadsworth
Special to the Mariner

Early New England colonial Burying Grounds can be found throughout this area where the first European settlers migrated to establish small villages and groups of farms. Cohasset's Central Cemetery is one particularly unique example of just such a colonial Burying Ground.

Located near the original Town Common and overlooking Little Harbor, the Central Cemetery contains within it the oldest of Cohasset's early Burying Grounds.

The oldest home still standing in the town dates from the 1690's, the earliest gravestone in the cemetery is scarcely later, dating from 1705. It marks the burial place of Margaret (Hardin) Tower, wife of Cohasset first settler Ibrook Tower. In its earliest days the "center burying ground" served an area extending from the Colony boundary at North Scituate to the shore at today's Jerusalem Road, roughly the extent of the First and Second Land Divisions of Conahasset. Its oldest stones, sometimes referred to as "The Old Slates," carry the names of Cohasset's first families. At that time this was the easternmost part of Hingham, and its land, called by the Indian name "Conahasset," had been divided up among Hingham landowners in 1670.

Among family names on the oldest of the "Old Slates" were Tower, Pratt, Lincoln, Bates, Beal, Whitcom and Hobart. The second oldest of Central Cemetery's stones is that of Sarah, wife of Aaron Pratt, whose marker dates from 1706, and the third oldest of Priscilla Lincoln, 1712. In earliest days the town's Burying Ground was located on the south face of a low slope a few yards from the ancient way leading from Conahasset to its parent village at Hingham. A narrow side road leading to the burial place itself was known simply as "the road to the Burying Ground," and today is called Joy Place, for Capt. Thomas Joy, whose house was built nearby. The ancient way to Hingham is today's North Main Street.

By the latter 1700's the town had authorized a survey of its Burying Ground, and in 1787 a committee made up of Samuel Bates, Deacon Abel Kent, Micah Nichols and Joseph Beal drew a crude map of its boundaries, and reported a swap of some land with an adjacent owner, to increase the size of the useable space. They also reported straightening the line of the road leading to the Burying Ground. As the third decade of the 1700's approached the first generation of Cohasset settlers was passing from the scene; Mordecai Lincoln in 1729, in his 71st year, Daniel Lincoln at age 80 in 1732, Aaron Pratt in 1735 at 81 years, and in 1741, Elizabeth, widow of Daniel Lincoln, in her 87th year. 1736 saw the passing of Mrs. Lydia Hobart, age 32, wife of the town's first clergyman, Rev. Nehemiah Hobart.

Today the ancient slate gravestone of the Hobarts can be seen side by side in the old Burying Ground, Nehemiah's holding the simple but eloquent message "first Pastor of ye Church of Christ in this place, died May 31, 1740 in ye 44th year of his age, and 19th of his pastorate." The town's Clergy and their families would find a resting place at the Burying Ground through numerous generations. In 1769 Jane Browne "the pious and amiable consort" of Rev. John Browne, Cohasset's Revolutionary War preacher, was buried there, to be joined in 1791 by her husband, aged 67 and Minister to townspeople for 34 of those years. 1898 saw the burial of the Rev. Joseph Osgood, a founder of the town's central library and school systems.

The original colonial Burying Ground had been part of the town's undivided Common Land. As Cohasset grew so did its cemetery, and in 1825 Joanna and Samuel Bates deeded to the town about 3/4 of an acre of land between the Burying Ground and North Main Street, forming the southern most section of today's larger burial place. Then in 1867 Edward Everett Tower conveyed another parcel to the north of the original ground. By the mid-19th century Central Cemetery had passed into the hands of an Association of townspeople, who have maintained the historic burying place since then for the benefit of the community Expansion of the old center Burying Ground provided a place for succeeding generations of the town's families, whose names can be found in all corners of today's cemetery. Later arrivals in Cohasset came from numerous places, including Cape Cod seafaring names such as Lothrop, Larry, and Snow, and from neighboring towns, Bailey and Tilden.

By the latter 1800's, Portugese names were appearing on Central Cemetery's stone markers, such as Joseph Grassie, age 3 weeks in 1862, and Manuel Joseph aged 2 years in 1869. December 1859 saw the passing of Deacon Abel Kent, in his 93rd year. He had been one of the original surveyors of the Burying Ground in 1787, and his marker appears in today's Central Cemetery. The memorial stones of many of the town's leading citizens can be seen there; Clergymen and doctors, merchants and shipowners, farmers, fishermen and craftsmen. Found upon numerous stones dating from Cohasset's long "Age of Sail" is the simple legend "Lost at Sea."

Atop a low hill just north of the original Burying Ground stands a Celtic Cross of granite, honoring the victims of Cohasset's worst shipwreck, placed there in 1914 and standing 20 feet high. In November 1849 the brig "St. John", of the island of Lettermullin, County Galway, Ireland, struck the Grampus Ledge off our shore. Bound for Boston with passengers aboard, the "famine ship" from Galway sank, taking with it 99 souls from the Irish counties of Galway and Clare. Cohasset's Civil War Medal of Honor recipient Levi B. Gaylord's special memorial stone of white marble can be found in the main part of the cemetery, as can markers of Cohasset's War Veterans from the Revolution to Vietnam.

Cohasset's central burying ground still serves its community. Alongside the "Old Slates" and the marble or granite stones of earlier times one finds a 20th century columbarium, or low wall of seamface granite containing "niches" or spaces for burial urns. The first such columbarium in this South Shore area, Central Cemetery's Cumner Columbarium, soon will be joined by a larger facility now on the drawing boards. Thus additional space will become available for the future use of the unique cemetery at Cohasset Center, a Colonial Burying Ground whose roots go back beyond the town itself, but whose eyes are still upon the future.

WHO IS THE SPECIAL INTEREST GROUP?

FACT: The Conservation Comission has voted to oppose Article 7 based on their engineer's report. This report showed that access through Evergreen Lane would destroy three times as much wetlands as the developer's original plan.

FACT: The School Committee, guardians of this land, called for a public meeting with the Planning Board, Conservation Commission and developer to discuss this deal. The Planning Board and developer would not attend, hindering open discussion of the issues.

FACT: The Planning Board has repeatedly refused to schedule a meeting to listen to opposing concerns. Residents of Cohasset have been denied a forum to refute the interests of the developer.

FACT: Access from Evergreen Lane is extremely valuable to the developer. Land offered in exchange is useless to the town.

FACT: The unbiased Advisory Board voted unanimously to reject the article based on abuse of Cohasset wetlands.

FACT: The Board of Selectmen also voted unanimously to reject the article.

FACT: Area residents are opposed to this swap despite the likely increase in their property values from this development.

FACT: Passage of this article will encourage the Planning Board and developers to misuse vulnerable wetlands.

CONCLUSION: The voters are being asked to encourage the destruction of wetlands in order to benefit one developer. There is indeed a special interest group involved in this land swap. Who do you think it is?

VOTE NO ON ARTICLE 7!!

What is the biggest problem that faces the school system today?

I think the biggest problem would be to continue the tradition of excellence in a declining enrollment and to maintain community support. Each year there are more and more households in the town that don't have children in the schools. The challenge to the school committee is to make those people who don't have children in the system supportive of the school programs.

How has the school system evolved over your six year tenure on the board?

As we have wrestled with declining enrollments we have become innovative in a number of areas. We have a number of revisions in the curriculum. We have changed the entire administrative team. We have students on the school committee that provide input for decisions that effect them.

What kind of parental support is there?

We are real fortunate in having the kind of support that we do. We have a very active parent student organization. They have been quite supportive from kindergarten through grade twelve. A recent change in the in the schools has been the educational reform act(chap. 188). It provides for increased community involvement.

What about the Horace Mann Grants. Have they been helpful?

It has helped because it has allowed teachers to devote professional time which they might not be able to, in their day to day activities. We have used it in a lot of

Lupus Workshop

An all-day Lupus workshop, featuring a panel member from Cohasset will be held Saturday Oct. 24 at the Milton Health Care Facility on Brush Hill Road and Neponset Valley Parkway in Milton.

The morning program, sponsored by the South Shore Lupus workshop begins at 10:00 a.m. and will feature the medical panel of Dr.'s Dennis Goldin, Rheumatologist, Walt Kagen, Hematologist, and Laurence Kulla, Neurologist. A question and answer period will follow.

The afternoon program will feature a "patient panel" at which time patients and their families will discuss their diagnosis of Lupus and ways of coping and adjusting to living with a chronic disease.

Susan Shumaker of Cohasset will be a member of this panel.

For further information call 383-1443 or 326-4960.

Art center lecture series

In conjunction with the Helga Show at the Museum of Fine Arts, the South Shore Art Center has planned a lecture workshop giving an overview of this exhibit and its significance.

The Helga Series — Andrew Wyeth given by MFA lecturer Judith Hanhisalo is the first of a two-part Design for Living Series. The Helga lecture is Thursday, Oct. 22 beginning at 7:30 p.m.

The second workshop in the series is Typically English Gardens given by photographer and lecturer Russ Marchand on Thursday, Dec. 3 at 7:30 p.m. The center, at 119 Ripley Road, requires advanced registration for this series.

Hanhisalo will focus on Andrew Wyeth and his recently publicized intimately portrayed images of his neighbor, Helga. The workshop is designed to give participants an insight into his painting of his neighbor. The workshop comes on the eve of the opening of the Helga Show at the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston.

The second workship in December will offer a quiet interlude in the busy holiday rush. Marchand, a familar figure to South Shore audiences, will incorporate screens, songs and music to wrap his viewers in the color, sounds and charm of the English garden world. His colorful depictions of these beautiful gardens will take the chill off the December air.

For information and registration, call the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548. The Center is supported in part by a grant from the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities, a state agency.

Blue ribbon art exhibit

The South Shore Art Center's annual all members' Blue Ribbon exhibit will feature works of art by gallery artists.

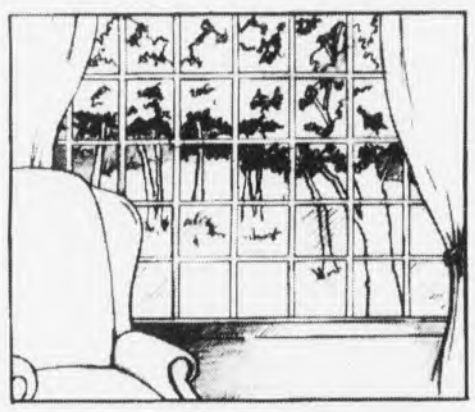
The exhibit opens Sunday, Nov. 1 with a formal reception from 4-6 p.m. in the Center's gallery at 119 ripley Road in Cohasset.

The annual Blue Ribbon show represents a variety of media and styles with ribbons awarded in various categories. This exhibit gives gallery artists and members a chance to show their work in a comprehensive exhibit and for the general public, an opportunity to see the quality of work created by South Shore artists.

Immediately following the opening reception will be the Center's annual meeting for current members. The agenda calls for the election of officers and board members and updates on the different facets of the South Shore Art Center.

Guests and center members are invited to the Blue Ribbon Opening and may stay for the annual meeting; however current members of the center may vote. A requested donation of $3.00 at the Blue Ribbon opening is to benefit the MacIvor Reddie Scholarship Fund awarded in the spring to a deserving high school senior from the South Shore who plans to pursue a career in the visual arts. MacIvor Reddie, himself, was a well-known watercolorist from Cohasset who was responsible for painting the murals that are in the rotunda of the Cohasset Paul Pratt Library. He was one of the original founders of the Center and was the head of painting at the Art Institute of Boston.

Hours for viewing the exhibit are Monday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Saturdays, 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. For further information, please call the Center, 383-9548.



The Center is supported in part by a grant from the Mass. Council on the Arts and Humanities, a state agency.

A "B"eautiful day at school

Last Friday, Oct. 16, Marie Price's kindergarten classes had a Big Bear Bash to end the week of "B" sounds.

During the week, Robert Cunningham wore his Christmas Bulb shirt. Jamey Strebel brought in the bear he received for his first birthday. Steven Maynard enthralled us with the adventure he and his much-loved bear had following tracks that led into a cave.

Andrew McAuliffe brought in a big bird's nest for us to study. Elja Gobes brought in a baby in a bottle of soap.

Friday we held our Big Bear Bash. Each child brought their bear as a guest. Kara Johansen and Brianne McKenney both brought in the biggest bears. Caitlin Donovan wore bears in her hair. Most children wore bear shirts, sweaters or dresses.

Mrs. Tranca Curry brought in Smokey the Bear. Mrs Wendy Lee Price brought in her Wedding Bears. Mrs. Marie C. Price brought in her big boys' bears.

The class enjoyed brownies, banana bread, bear napkins, blowing bubbles and playing blockhead.

Caitlin Stansell baked her own banana bread. Mr. Gene Price sent in Gummy Bears. There were bear songs and the musical play of Goldilocks and the Three Bears.

The students read Jessie Zerendow's Alphabears book and Brianne McKenney's book The Bears' Picnic.

The children had a bear parade and performed a short action poem about Teddy Bears for Mrs. Fewksbury and Mrs. Clark's second grade classes. All received Big Bears stickers.

Many thanks to moms: Meredith Gledhill, Deborah Niessink, Olga Noke and Agnes McCarin for helping. A special thanks to Wendy Price for teaching us an action bear story song.

Glades summer homes open door to public

By Judy Foley
Mariner staff

To most Cohasset people, the Glades is the imposing grey structure across the harbor, a mysterious part of the landscape.

To Scituate people, it's been the summer home of families like the Adamses, Saltonstalls, Codmans and Hunnewells for generations.

Thanks to the generosity of the families who've inherited a piece of the association—and who've since departed to their real homes for the winter—the Glades was opened in part to the Cohasset Historical Society Oct. 25.

Perhaps because of the unseasonably warm weather last Sunday, perhaps because of the incessant curiosity that the public shares about the complex, nearly 200 visitors took advantage of the tour.

The Cohasset Historical Society organized three groups which departed hourly from Scituate on a shuttle bus. The bus was essential, given the seclusion of the narrow, winding road that is the only access to the complex at the end of Strawberry Point.

Robert Thorndike, the resident manager and the fifth generation of his family to be a member of the Glades Club, led a series of walking lectures around parts of the 100-acre property.

Thorndike, a Scituate selectman, has been living year-round on the secluded estate for 10 years.

The first hotel, part of the present main building, was erected in 1847 by Abel Hayden, a Boston ship owner who was shipwrecked off the coast of the property in 1840. The hotel held about 75 people, who were brought to the resort from Cohasset by boat. But Hayden's venture was short-lived, partially because the rocky, hazardous coastline around the Glades has made boat passage difficult over the years.

After passing through several hands after the Civil War, including those of some reputed gamblers, the complex was purchased about 1875 by an association of wealthy families as a "summer playground," Thorndike explained.

The original association included the Saltonstalls, Codmans, Sturgises and other prominent families. In 1880 two Adamses joined the group. The families lived simple, communal lives during their summers here, Thorndike said. The original square house held six apartments; the Adamses shared two townhouses in the adjacent building, and other families were scattered about cottages and homes on the property. Some seasons the owners would not come, but would let their rooms to others like the Hunnewells, Prescotts and Wolcotts.

"It sounds like the first time-sharing plan," said Philip Hamilton of Cohasset, who was visiting with his wife Susan.

Susan Hamilton, a Cohasset native, recalled secretly riding her bike into the Glades as a school girl to sit on the rocky beach when the complex was deserted in March and April.

She said the property has always been an alluring scene from Cohasset Harbor, where many of the Glades residents have sailed over the years.

Philip Hamilton, who comes from Maine and recently settled in Cohasset with Susan, remarked on the spectacular view of Minot Light from the property.

The location, with its sweeping view of the coast, has lent the property to more practical use over the years, Thorndike told the visitors.

One of the summer homes at The Glades, overlooking the ocean and Minot's Light.

The Massachusetts Humane Society stationed lifeboats off the tip of the peninsula, and it was common for Scituate men to be called in to rescue those who failed to navigate the treacherous waters around Minot Light.

During World War II, the army, navy and coast guard used the property as a submarine watchpoint in order to protect Boston Harbor. Two mock summer homes—complete with false windows designed to trick a U-boat commander—and an imposing concrete watchtower were constructed on the site during the war.

There was little action at the Glades during the war, Thorndike said. Only one submarine was spotted.

"There was one casualty, however," he said. "The caretaker's horse was shot for failing to identify himself to the sentry one night."

Today, 14 families share ownership in the association.

"You may be surprised by the simplicity of the buildings and homes here," he remarked. "These people like to live simple, quiet lives here. The furniture is plain and the paint is peeling. They come here to get away from their other lives."

The rooms which were open to visitors displayed that unassuming, quiet charm. Plain, inconspicuous furnishings are sparsely arranged around the rooms. The well-worn wooden floors are bare. The painted walls are adorned by a few pictures and documents detailing the history of the property.

Betty Grassie, a member of the Cohasset Historical Society, remarked that it seemed okay to track a bit of the newly-cut lawn into the hallway.

Like other visitors on the tour, she was surprised at the simple repairs and haphazard maintenance of the buildings. The paint is peeling in places; broken window panes are either boarded or replaced with ill-fitting glass, and simple carpentry keeps some of the porches together.

It is, as Thorndike described, a place where the owners can feel free to walk barefoot.

Grassie was on the tour with her sister and brother-in-law, Nancy and Lincoln Wright. They also brought along John and Janet Crowe, relatives from Rochester, New York, who were visiting after seeing their son at Boston University. John Crowe, who had not been back to this area for many years, was enjoying the local history lesson.

For A.G. Antoine, the history of the Glades has a more personal meaning. Antoine recalled mowing the lawns there as his summer job when he was a boy. This was his first trip back for nearly 40 years, he said.

He has also discovered that his own family is part of the Glades' history. In researching his geneology, he's found that Elizabeth Queeney, his grandmother, was born at the Glades in 1859, the daughter of Timothy and Catherine Queeney.

Family folklore has it that his grandfather, A.G. Antoine Sr., sailed across Cohasset Harbor to marry Elizabeth in 1881, he said.

He's enlisted the aid of Robert Thorndike to uncover more information about the family, he added.

Although the Scituate Historical Society has sponsored tours of the Glades in the past, this was the first time the Cohasset group has given its members a chance to see the venerable property. The tour was arranged by Osborne Ingram, who invited the visitors to take as much time as they pleased before returning on the shuttle bus. The group also supplied an array of refreshments in the main dining room.

Liz Crosby, a board member of the Cohasset Historical Society, offers visitors "saleables" during Sunday's exclusive tour of The Glades.

Gymnastics classes at center

Gymnastic classes at the Cohasset Community Center were scheduled to start Monday, Oct. 19. We request that all participants call to confirm their starting dates.

Several children's programs are accepting registration again. In the Pre-School Science and Nature class Fridays at 9 a.m., children will enjoy nature crafts and discovery walks. In the Tiny Tot Chef class, pre-schoolers will enjoy preparing simple recipes.

Both classes are scheduled to start on Friday, Oct. 29. Call 383-0088 to reserve a place in class.

The wrestling program is still taking sign ups. This class will be offered Tuesday evenings from 6 to 8 p.m. Participants must weigh 65 pounds to participate. This program offers excellent coaching in all styles of wrestling.

The Art of Making Doll House Miniatures on Thursdays from 3:30 to 5 p.m. promises creative fun for girls age 8 and over. This class will meet on Thursdays from 3:30 to 5:00 starting Oct. 29.

Adults can still register for the following crafts workshops: Cut and Pierced Lampshades on Saturday, November 21, Oriental Rug Making on Saturdays from 9:30 to 12 p.m., Stencilling Wednesday evenings or Thursday mornings, and Calligraphy on Wednesday evening beginning November 4. The Sweater Workshop for people who can knit will offer freedom from pattern reading and will teach techniques for seam-free sweater making.

Fitness classes for adults and teens are on-going and include Fitness Equals Fun, a non-impact aerobic workout geared to individual fitness levels, Yoga, Dancercize, morning Exercise for Fitness and Fun, and Low Impact Dance Aerobics. Call the Community Center for times and new starting dates.

A Therapeutic Movement Class is available for nursing home or Alzheimer clients on Tuesday or Wednesday mornings from 10:30 to 11:30. This class is free and we provide transportation in the Scoot van. Call 383-0088 to register and make arrangements for pick up.

The Cohasset Community Center is a non-profit organization and serves the residents of Cohasset and the South Shore area. We are not subsidized by the town or any public source. We rely on memberships, program fees, space rentals, donations and gifts from those individuals and private organizations who believe in our special function.

different areas in the curriculum. We have had teams of teachers as well as individual teachers who have done research as a result of the grant.

Cohasset has obviously included METCO in its future plans. Do you think it is a beneficial program?

It has been a real good program. We had our first graduate who had been in the program since kindergarten last year. I think that everybody who has had any association at all with the METCO program has felt that it is a very good one. A good program, not only in academics but in athletics and extra-curricula activities as well.

How do some of the extras like sports, music, art, shop and so forth fit into the budgeting of the schools?

The school committee has felt that that those extra-curricula activities are an integral part of the educational experience and that they are really not a frill. For some children the ability to participate in an extra-curricula activity is the kind of glue that keeps them stuck to the academic areas.We don't see them as a frill in any sense of the word. They are an integral part of the academic program.

What is your favorite part of working with the schools?

I think working with four other people who have as their focus the children of the community. The total committee is focused on helping the kids. They don't have any hidden motives about anything. It is rewarding. Everyone is working together and seeing some of the results of the changes that I mentioned before.

How do you see the school committee's role as a policy-maker in the school system?

The role of the school committee has historically been one of establishing the policy. The administrative team is responsible for the implementation of the policy. The decisions you make reguarding policy can only be as good as the information you have to base it. In any case where we have had any policy decisions we have tried to get as broad a base input as we can. In terms of the school committee, before any policy is adopted, we have a procedure that gives people time to respond. The procedure that we use for establishing policy is sound and the idea of having as much input as possible has given us a good policy base.

INTRODUCING

Dr. Ronald E. Wuotila
Chiropractor

Please allow me to introduce myself to the town of Hanover and it's surrounding communities. I am originally from the South Shore area and graduated from Palmer College of Chiropractic in Davenport, Iowa. I have received extensive pre and post graduate training at the Gonstead Clinic of chiropractic in Mount Horeb, Wisconsin which specializes in the treatment and care of patients with structural problems of the spine. My practical experience includes six years of clinical work treating patients for various spinal related conditions utilizing X-ray analysis and a specific adjusting technique.

Being a licensed Chiropractor in the state of Massachusetts, I did an extensive demographic study of the South Shore region and decided the town of Hanover was centrally located to service patients from many communities. My new office is conveniently located on Route 53, one and one half miles south of the Hanover Mall exit 13. To aquaint you with our newly opened office and all that Chiropractic care has to offer, my staff and I would like to provide to you or another family member, a spinal examination absolutely FREE. This examination (a $35.00 value) will include an orthopedic test, neurological test, blood pressure check, spinal alignment check, examination for restricted or excess motion in the spine, muscle strengthness test, and a private consultation with the Doctor to discuss the results.

Wizard of Oz Cast

Brian Marks has posted the cast list for this year's musical, The Wizard of Oz.

Over 75 students in grades 4-12 are involved; this includes about 30 munchkins, played by 4th, 5th and 6th graders.

Marks is being helped by Ms. Parker, Deer Hill band teacher; Ms. Foley, CHS's band teacher; and Mr. MacInness, the Deer Hill's music teacher.

Rehearsals were scheduled to begin Tuesday, Oct. 20. The show itself is scheduled to begin its run Dec. 4.

There will be three performances: Dec. 4 and 5 at 7:30 p.m. and December 6 at 2 p.m. Tickets are reserved. They are $4 each, and unless the performance is sold out, they will be available at the door.

The following students were named to the cast: Auntie Em, Letitia Linsley; Joe, a farmhand, Matt Kuhn; Uncle Henry, Arthur Meacham; Dorothy, Amanda Sweeney; Mayor of Munchkins, Trevor Stockinger; Munchkin Farmer, Joe Andrade; Sorceress of the North, Celia Mullen; Wicked Witch of the West, Laurel Collins; The Scarecrow, Peter Kasperowicz; The Tin Woodman, Doug Moe; The Cowardly Lion, Derek Lacks; a Private, Jim Reidy; Generals, J. Cameron, J. Gaston, T. Graham, J. Reidy, A. Ross, B. Schulz, J. Whitman (others to be added) Old Oz Lady, Michelle Massa; Lord Growly, Ian Sullivan; Gloria, his daughter, Kate deLima; Wizard of Oz, Matt Silvia; other witches, E. O'Connor, J. Knowles, B. McCarthy, P. Tolini; Tibia, Adam Durant

Other smaller spoken parts and solos will be selected from the chorous: B. Anderson, S. Beasley, S. Douglas, E. Ford, D. Granita, R. Haynes, S.B. Holman, V. Kelley, M. Lavagelle, A. Ludlow, K. McNamara, M. Nothnagle, H. Proodian, N. Riley, C. Ripley, J. Turner.

Munchkins: Grace Deveney, Anne Lindgren, Caroline de Lima, Michael Riley, Scott Theriault, Brendan Leung, Lara Martin, Jemilah Afshar, Chloe Chittick, Brielyn Crossman, Jennifer Ripley, Becky Golden, Colleen Meehan, Kara Protulis, Abby Pease, Jessica Sullivan, Ann Dane, Allison Ritts, Christa Ansbergs, Andrew Collins, Lauren De Vito, Meredith Equi, Sarah Kirk, Amy Silvia, Katie Ross, Bonnie Krueger, Conor Mangan, Caitlin W. Connolly, David Hansen, Danny Silvia, Dawn Meehan.

Osgood Artist-of-the-Month

The Artist-of-the-Month program has begun at the Osgood School with the introduction of the famous French Impressionistic artist, Claude Monet.

Children used pastels to blend colors to show the effect of light on objects in nature. Due to the enthusiastic response from the volunteers, the program has been expanded to cover kindergarten as well as all students in grades one through three.

Many thanks to the following PSO parent volunteers: Connie Afshar, Sue Cameron, Chris Conley, Betsy Connolly, Karen Devine, Martha Equi, Janet Faulkner, Kathy Gray, Lee Jenkins, Linda Keller, Nancy Kinchla, Patty McCarthy, Monica McKenney, Marianne McLaughlin, Madeline Olney, Dee Dee Nicynski, Priscilla Sullivan and Betty O'Soll and Gail Whitehouse.

If you would like to have more information or to volunteer to participate in the program, please call Retta Dwyer (383-6629) or Olga Nohe (383-1273).

Osgood book fair

The PSO of the Cohasset Joseph Osgood School (K-3) is sponsoring its Annual Holiday Book Fair to be held in the Osgood Library Nov. 4, 5 and 6. the Book Fair hours will be 9-3 on Wednesday Nov. 4; 9-7 Thursday, Nov. 5; and 9-3 Friday, Nov. 6.

This is an excellent opportunity for children to buy books for themselves as well as getting an early start on Christmas shopping for siblings and friends. There are extended hours until 7 p.m. on Thursday, Nov. 5 for the convenience of all interested parents.

College Workshop Nov. 18

Take the Mystery out of College Admissions Decisions!! Find out what happens after you have processed your college application. Attend a workshop Wednesday, Nov. 18, from 7:30 - 9:30 p.m.

This workshop will be conducted by Robert Thornton, Director of Admissions of New College, one of the "Public Ivies" located in Sarasota, Fla.

Thornton has presented this workshop to the National Association of College Admissions Officers at the Annual Meeting in Seattle, to the Illinois Association of College Admissions Officers at their summer workshop, and to the Southern Association of College Admissions Counselors at the region's annual meeting.

This should be an informative and productive meeting.Thornton describes the workshop as follows:

"Little of the subjective nature of the Selective College Admissions Committee Rating and Review Systems stands as public knowledge. This presentation offers the audience the opportunity to read and rate an actual application to a highly selective college, using a rating system employed successfully by institutions to which your best students vie for admission. Comparisons will be made between three candidates and their respective ratings, culminating in a vote which restricts the committee [the audience] to one offer of admission. In addition, the presentation speaks to special considerations:

Athletic Ability, Ethnicity, Legacies, Development Office Interests, Ability to Pay, and Public/Private School Origin."

So that we can plan the evening and provide everyone with a workshop packet, we will need to know how many students and parents plan to attend.

The registration for this program has been extended to Wednesday, Oct. 28. If you are interested in participating, please call 383-6102. The program will be cancelled if there is insufficient interest.

CHS musical production, 'The Wizard of Oz'

By Peter Kasperowicz
Special to the Mariner

Munchkins.

No, not those little round doughnut things. We're talking about real munchkins. Still lost? Let Sarah Kirk explain.

"A munchkin is a little guy, or girl, who meets Dorothy when she kills the witch with her house. The munchkins have to tell Dorothy how to get to Oz so she can get home. They're like little help guys, and they're very small."

How small?

"Well, Deer Hill munchkins are under five feet," Sarah says.

Let me fill you in. Bryan Marks, Choral Director at Cohasset High School, has recruited thirty or so munchkins to take part in the all-school musical (can you guess?) The Wizard of Oz. Sarah seems ready to play the role of a "little help guy."

"I've seen it about ten times."

Fellow munchkin and friend Jen Ripley has also had some outside preparation for the show.

"We watch it for my birthday at night."

Every year?

"Yup."

Mike Riley is one of the five or six male munchkins in the musical.

I guess it's pretty good being one of the only guys because you get all the girls, right?

"Uh. . .yeah. . ."

Although most of the munchkins have seen the show at least three times, there is still some confusion around the plot. The big question: did Dorothy actually travel to Oz, or was she dreaming? Becky Golden doesn't believe for one minute that Dorothy physically travelled to Oz.

"Dorothy was dreaming," she says.

Are you sure?

"Of course, she was knocked out in the storm."

Well, whatever the case, everyone's sure of the four main characters: Dorothy, Tinman, Scarecrow, and the wolf, uh lion. It's a tough group to choose from, but everyone has their favorites. Mike and Sarah like the scarecrow the best. "He reminds me of myself," Sarah remarked. Becky is going with Dorothy, who is "Pretty cool" in her opinion. Jen seems to favor the lion, and even ventures to say that the lion is better than Dorothy. "He's just a funny guy," Jen says.

One thing common to all four is that The Wizard of Oz marks their theatrical debut. The show runs from December 4-6, and tickets can be bought at the high school.

After the show? Who knows. Jen, Sarah, and Becky plan to become famous actresses. Mike plans to take a different route.

"I think I'll stay in school a while longer." Not a bad idea.

A special program is scheduled for Thursday, Nov. 19. Lunch will be held as usual at noon, with reports on the "Fair."

The program chairman is Barbara Fellows, who will announce a Happy Entertainment hour, with Ed Bennet and his musicians. Included will be piano and sing-alongs, which everyone enjoys. Everyone should attend and bring a new member.

Classic Tours is offering Sixty Plus Club members a one-day trip, Thursday, Nov. 12, to White's on the Watuppa River, in Westport.

The trip will be by deluxe motor coach, with assistance from an available representative.

In the morning, a stop will be made at the Kay Windsor Factory in Dartmouth.

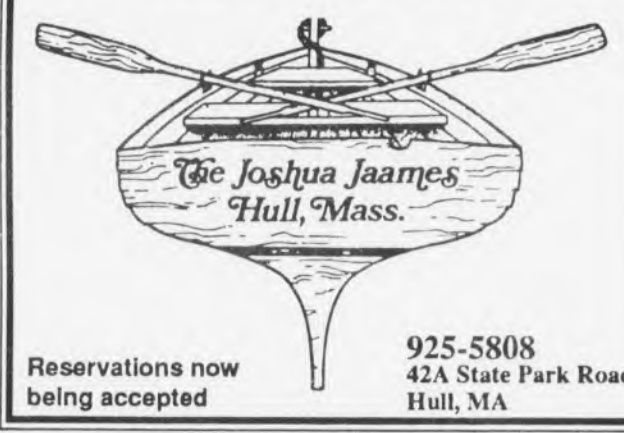
A social hour will be held at White's before dinner, which includes a choice of roast turkey, or yankee pot roast, with all the fixings.

Entertainment will be a floor show, dancing and a sing-along.

The complete cost is $29.95. Call Connie Silipo at 545-3349.

Club member Don White has a new special program offered to all senior citizens.

Cohasset Tennis and Squash Club, 40 Cedar St., welcomes seniors to use their inside tennis courts at $4, for 1½ hours every Friday from 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. No club membership is required, but this offer is for seniors only.



Call Don soon at 383-0886.

New word for soccer team's vocabulary—loss

Peter Kasperowicz
Mariner correspondent

What? The soccer team lost? What does "lost" mean? Hmm. . . I'll have to look up that strange word. Hmm. . . "locust" . . . "logarithm" . . . ah, here it is. "Lost—Of a battle, game: In which one has been defeated."

Enter that word into Cohasset's vocabulary, and look up "shutout" while you're at it: the team lost to Rockland last Wednesday by a score of 2-0. The game wsa basically an open and shut case. By the first half neither team had scored, but Cohasset had discovered Rockland's weakness.

"Rockland tends to follow you guys very closely, and they're leaving huge gaps on the sides. If you can get the ball to some isolated person on the sides, it's an easy goal: no-one's around to stop you from doing it," coach Dan Magner urged.

Ned Chase also noticed how close Rockland stayed to Cohasset.

"They're like leaches: they grab onto you and suck your blood."

Cohasset felt positive that they could score with this new plan of attack, but after ten minutes of play Cohasset had bigger concerns: Rockland had scored.

"No communication," Magner mumbled.

Bang. Rockland scored again.

"A complete breakdown," Magner shook his head.

Thirty minutes later, an elated Rockland bus left with another victory under their belts, while Cohasset dealt with their first loss of the season.

"Alright, we lost one, but don't get down on it. We know what it feels like now, but let's work so it doesn't happen again."

Two days later, Cohasset did pull together to defeat Middleboro.

"The field looked like the moon," Steve Myers said. "There were craters just about everywhere."

The field wasn't enough to stop them: individual scorers were Ian Smart, Tod Fitzpatrick, Adam Durant, Jason Cameron, and Jay Staunton. Despite victory, most players weren't satisfied with the teams performance.

"We were kind of lucky to win," Jimmy Reidy said. "We didn't play very well: we slacked off almost from the start. I think it's because we know we're probably going to win, so we just go in with an "I don't care" feeling."

Magner has also noticed this problem.

"After winning all those games, it's real easy to take it slow and goof off at pratices. But after losing to Rockland, I think that it's time to change that attitude of "we're invincible, let's have fun." Having fun is fine, but when it's time to play seriously and with enthusiasm, we're just not doing it."

Another big concern is Duxbury.

"Never in it's history has Cohasset defeated Duxbury, and it's not going to be any easier this year. So far Duxbury is undefeated and unscored upon," Magner said.

Magner still feels that they can give Duxbury a good game.

"We'll be ready for them. We just have to concentrate more, and not get discouraged if we're down. I had some Rockland kids that came up to me and said how surprised they were when we let down after Rockland scored. Rockland thought that we'd be all over them, but we just gave up. We can't let that happen with Duxbury."

Field hockey breaks Green Wave , 2-0

By Jennifer Plante
Mariner correspondent

Last Thursday, Oct. 15, the girls' varsity field hockey team defeated Abington by a score of 2-0.

Both goals, one in the first half and one in the second half were scored by junior forward Sara Bishop. Coach Clare Brady felt that senior halfback Coleby Manty, who assisted the first goal, played an excellent game and has shown much improvement in the past few weeks. Brady also remarked on senior link Michelle Casolaro's performance with a sore hand. The second goal was tipped in from assists by senior Debbie Hartley and Junior Sue Lean off of a corner hit.

Because Abington showed weakness in their offensive line, the ball remained in Cohasset's possession for a large majority of the game.

The Greenwave goalkeeper, however, was a tough hindrance, blocking thirty-six shots on net.

This week the team will face their rivals, the Scituate Sailors on Wednesday and they will host Hull on Friday. The game will start around 3:30 so come by and cheer them on if you have a chance.

GIRLS' SOCCER

Last Friday, Oct. 16, the girls' varsity soccer team hosted Middleboro and came out on top by a score of 3-0.

Senior forward, Jen Coley, played an excellent game, scoring two goals in the first half. Sophomore halfback, Madlyn McDonald also scored from a corner kick in the first half.

The Middleboro team seemed weak compared to the strong Skippers, therefore, many of the substitute players had their chance to play more and show off their abilities. Also, Junior halfback Kristin Ellinger did a fine job as goalkeeper for Cohasset.

This week the girls will travel to Duxbury Tuesday for a game they expect to be a tough one to pull off. On Thursday they will play Silver Lake, the game is at home so if you have an opportunity come by and root for them! Good luck!

Gridiron 3-2, ready for Homecoming game

The football team seems to be holding it's own this year. Their record is 3-2, and they've been up against some pretty tough teams. Whitman-Hanson recently defeated them 21-0.

"Whitman-Hanson is a very good team. By half-time the score was 14-0, and after that we gained some momentum that could have changed the outcome, but we fumbled and lost it. I suspect that Whitman-Hanson will go undefeated this year," coach Phil Pisano said.

Playing East Bridgewater was a different story. It was a close game at the half, and the score was 7-6 in favor of Cohasset.

"But then we just exploded," quaterback Peter Sandblom said. "It was the best game we've played so far."

That game ended at 26-6.

"I was very pleased with our offense," Pisano said.

Although they had defeated East Bridgewater, Duxbury waited just around the corner with a surprise for Cohasset. And surprise them they did.

"They dressed about 75 kids for the game," Pisano laughed. "We were really outmanned."

Derek Lacks saw the advantage Duxbury had by having twice as many players.

"I'd be out there huffing and puffing just like Duxbury, but then they would get replaced with rested men. And I'd still be out there huffing and puffing."

Cohasset hung in there until the last few minutes, but then gave in to exhaustion, losing the game 15-8.

"It was very frustrating to lose that way. The boys played bravely and courageously, but they just tired out," Pisano commented.

Next on Cohasset's list is Norwell, whom they play at homecoming on the 24th. Pisano thinks that Cohasset is emotionally ready for anything.

"Norwell is a good, solid team, and we are definitely expecting a physical game. About it being the homecoming game, I don't think we'll play especially harder than usual. These kids have consistently played their hearts out every game; they have a tremendous desire to win. We're more than ready to play."

Obituary

Charles H. Dole

Protesters blocked the Crocker Lane entrance to Cohasset Heights landfill on Monday. Six people were arrested for trespassing.

Arrests follow Monday's protest against landfill

It was an extraordinarily tense morning at Cohasset Heights landfill this past Monday morning that ended with the arrest of six persons.

A group of concerned citizens gathered to see that a cease and desist order from the board of health would be carried out.

Paul Barry, owner of the commercial landfill was also on hand to talk with citizens, local and state police and an impressive showing from the news media, including cameramen and reporters from all major television networks.

The circus was over at 11 a.m. when police arrested six residents for trespassing on landfill property.

Arrested were: Susan J. Rogerson, Carol E. Caryl, William S. Hodgson, Douglass C. Orr, Peter G. Whittemore and David Bigley. Two other residents, Robin and Burga Lagemamn, were also summoned to appear in Quincy court on trespassing charges.

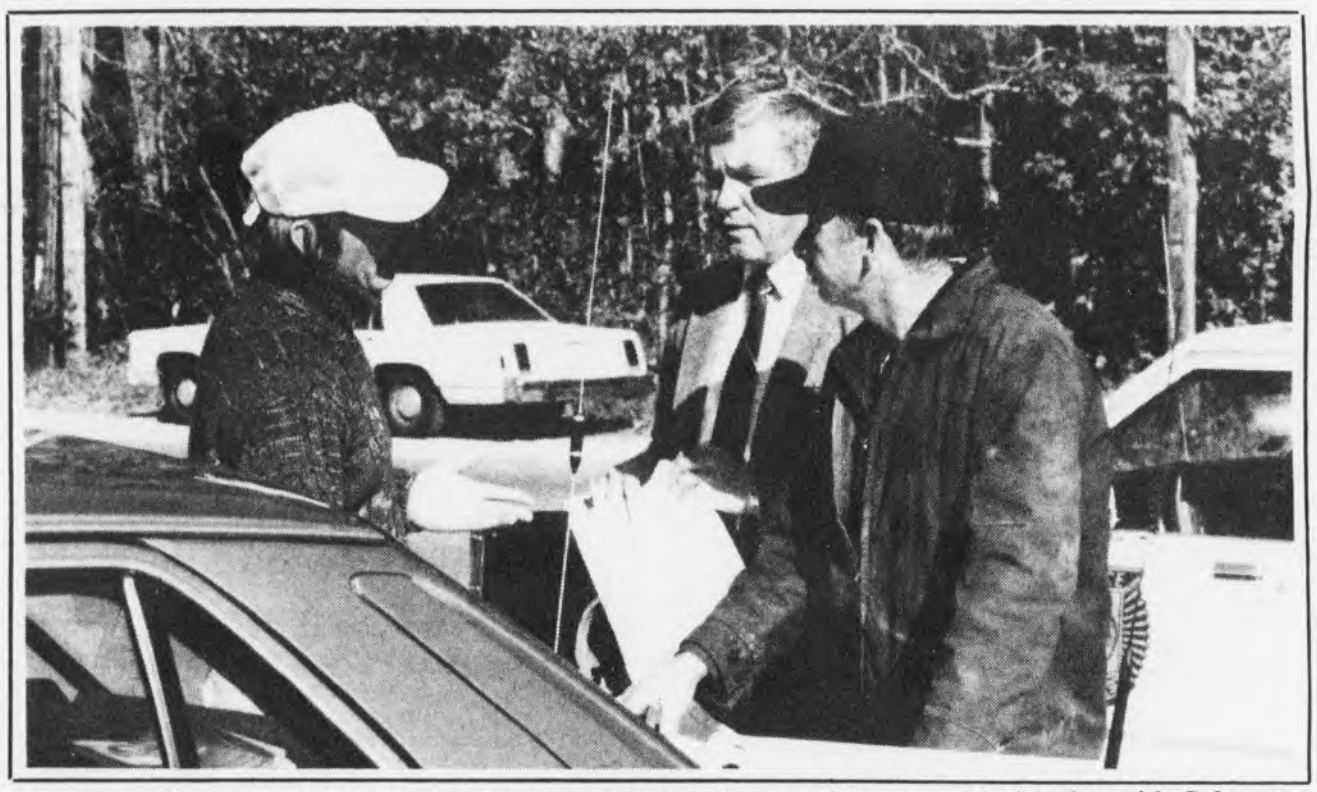
Landfill owner vows he will not pollute our water

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

After Monday's confrontation with a handful of protesters, and years of turmoil between his business and the community, the owner of Cohasset Heights Ltd. refuses to see this as a personal fight.



But it is a battle he will not relinquish.

"There is no way I want to ruin Lily Pond," Paul Barry said this week. "A lot of people think I have my eyes only on the dollar. But that's not the truth at all. It's not an ego thing with me - I don't want to be making dollar after dollar while I ruin the environment.

"But my contention is, Lily Pond is not being polluted. I have to go by what my engineers (GHR Engineering) have said, and what Camp, Dresser and McKee have said on the opposition. Lily Pond is not being polluted by this landfill."

Paul and John Barry have owned Cohasset Heights

Record crowd refuses to upgrade fields

By Bob Tis
Mariner staff

A record crowd gathered Monday night at Cohasset High School to defeat three major articles concerning Lillard field, rezoning along Rte. 3A and one-way traffic on King Street.

"I guess we just have to go on the way we have been with deplorable conditions," said Athletic Director Clark Chatterton, referring to the rejection of the Lillard field article.

"Lots of people were upset," said Chatterton. "I can't see another bid coming in again so low."

A picture of financial doom was painted early at Monday's meeting by executive secretary for the selectmen Don Andrew and Jane Goedecke, chairman of the advisory board, who both warned voters of the possibility of a Proposition 2 1/2 override.

"It appears that we would be able to afford both articles," Andrew told voters referring to the high priced Lillard field and police/fire renovation projects. "But you will be facing a project override."

Andrew warned voters that future projects for a solid waste disposal, a sewer project and for work on the town's cemeteries are all looming in the future.

"If all the projects before you are voted you will be facing an overide," said Andrew. "There is no question about it."

Jane Goedecke told voters, "It would be naive of us to look only at what is before us tonight and not into the future. It would be almost equally naive of us only to look only so far into the future as to the projects that we now see. Not to assume additional needs to the town is simply foolish. Things always happen, we need to prepare for that."

"We want all of you tonight to keep in mind that we have the articles before us. We have a sewer issue coming, we have SEMASS and a transfer station coming and we undoubtedly have repairs to our schools coming and other expenses that we don't know about yet. Our recommendation in all, to you, is that we cannot in good conscience vote both major articles tonight and still note be seriously contemplating an override."

" It is up to you to decide if you want either,or, both, or none. But we want you to be voting looking further down the road. We do not think it is a good idea to vote

The new 1988 real estate tax bills have been set at $12.98 per $1,000 valuation.

That is a hike of 24 cents from the previous year's rate of $12.74 per $1,000 valuation.

Tax bills are expected to be mailed to residents and businesses by Nov. 6 with payment due Dec. 6.

Executive Secretary Donald Andrew, who along with town accountant Mary Matthews brought the new rate into the state for certification last week, said the average tax bill will not increase drastically with the new rate.

For every $100,000 of property valuation, the new tax rate will increase $24. Thus, he explained, for a home assessed at $200,000, the tax bill will climb $48 this year.

The $12.98 tax rate will be the same for residential, business and open space property throughout the town. The town was revalued last year, a procedure which is required every three years according to state law.

Although tax bills are usually sent out by Oct. 1,

Fair Housing meeting

The Fair Housing Committee will be meeting Thursday, Oct. 29 with the state director of technical assistance for affordable housing.

The meeting will take place at St. Stephen's Church at 7:30 p.m. Peter Gagliarti, state director of technical assistance for affordable housing, will attend. According to Fair Housing Committee Chairman Clifford Cutler, "Our hope as a committee is that this housing forum will help us better understand the opportunities before us, what the possibilities are, our role as members of town government, that of the state, and provide a forum where our questions and concerns may be addressed."

Personnel request

The personnel committee has requested selectmen's attendance at their next meeting, Tuesday, Nov. 10 at 8 p.m. at town hall.

The committee intends to discuss changes made by selectmen to article five in the April annual town meeting warrant regarding the position of selectmen's administrative assistant.

In addition, they want to discuss with selectmen: lack of response to letters they have sent, including a letter about the revised dog officer's job description and selectmen's refusal to allow them access to town counsel regarding standby pay at the Water Dept. The committee also intends to discuss the committee's files and selectmen's removal of an article sponsored by the conservation commission intended for this week's special town meeting. The commission had previously discussed the article with the personnel committee.

Open space law

Senator William Golden informed town officials last week about pending legislation which would enable towns to purchase land necessary for the preservation of its drinking water.

According to Sen. Golden, the Open Space Bill would appropriate $30 million for land purchases. Towns may file applications with the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) to qualify for financial assistance in the purchase of land determined by the DEQE to be of critical importance to the town water supply.

The senator said he strongly supports the proposed legislation, and urged selectmen to consider utilizing this legislation to further protect the town's drinking water.

Personnel problems

The personnel committee informed selectmen that they currently have not approved a position of assistant town accountant or assistant to the town accountant, although an employee of that department has been appointed to the position. "We have not been informed as to what job description governs her appointment," committee member Jan Daggett stated, "nor do we know the pay rate."

According to Daggett, the committee met with the executive secretary for former selectman Diane Sullivan to discuss changing the position to assistant to the town accountant. The employee would be able to sign bills and payroll warrants with selectmen's approval.

But the committee never received a new job description for the position from former town accountant Joanne Whittemore.

Since that time, the personnel committee has not been notified officially as to what position the selectmen wish to fill - either the assistant town accountant, or assistant to the town accountant.

Daggett requested that selectmen notify the personnel committee as to what the proper job description should be.

Housing application

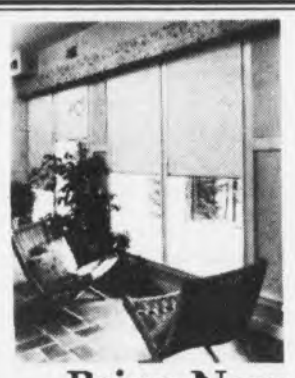
Selectmen this week endorsed the housing authority's application for a state grant to provide congregate housing in Cohasset for the frail elderly.

In a recent letter to the housing authority selectmen Rocco Laugelle said, "We have many residents who would be potential residents there, which would keep them from either leaving the area to live with relatives or enter nursing or retirement homes in a strange surrounding. A local facility will enable a number to remain in town."

Conley retires

Firefighter Richard Conley is retiring this week after 27 years on the force. Conley joined the department in 1960. According to Chief Brock he has been on light duty since 1985 when he injured his back in the line of duty.

Golden office hours



State Senator William B. Golden (D-Weymouth) or his administrative aides, Ann Federico and Joseph Curro, will conduct office hours in local towns at which time constituents are welcome to drop by to discuss issues of concern.

Office hours will be held in the Cohasset Town Hall Friday, Nov. 6 from 10 to 11 a.m.

Police/Fire station squeak by

By Bob Tis
Mariner staff

Every vote counted at Tuesday nights Special Town Meeting. For a short while it looked as if the 1.1 million dollar renovation to the police/fire station would be defeated by a fraction of a vote.

After over an hour of debate, most of which did not even center on the merits of the construction, the article came to a vote. 160 townspeople voted in favor of the project and 81 people voted against. The project needed a two thirds majority vote to be accepted. One more vote for or one more vote against would have clearly shown the winner. Moderator Bill Weeks called for a revote.

This time 243 townspeople voted. 163 of them said yes to the renovations and only 77 said no, and the ball began rolling to provide major renovations to the police fire station.

It looked as if voters might not even get a chance to vote on this article. After a long period of debate Francis Collins made a motion to postpone the article until a later date.

"The fire contract is still in negotiation," said Roy Fitzsimmons. "There is nothing in the plans about central dispatching. We just don't have all the parts to the puzzle."

The vote to postpone the article failed by only 12 votes.

Opposition to the renovation came as a surprise by many. Both the selectmen and the advisory board recommended the article.

"We are supporting the request but we are disapointed with amount of the request," said Ned Tebbets chairman of the capital budget committee.

"A negative vote will not let the problem go away," said Robert Stanzell of the Police/fire renovation committee. "It has to be voted at some time, we think that tonight is a good time."

Architect Joseph Putnam described the process of arriving at the particular design.

"We tried to keep the expenditures as low as possible throughout the design," said Putnam. "The building is in really poor condition," continued Putnam who had a slide show pointing out the deteriorating condition of the building.

"The 25 year old police station is equivalant to a 100 year old house, because of the constant use," said Putnam. "If you were going to buy a comparable facility it would cost you twice as much as what is proposed here," continued Putnam.

The expected construction time for this project is 19 months.

Tom Duggan raised a major topic for debate when he asked, "Who is responsible for the building getting like this."

"When it comes to slings and arrows," said selectman Cliff Mitman, "we might as well look in the mirror. When it comes time to cut back we have tended to do it on buildings. We might have been pennywise but we have been pound foolish."

John O'Toole of the planning board raised a question about the quality of the bricks that would be used. Rev. Ed Atkinson questioned the need for nine bathrooms in the facility. The question of the absence of central dispatching was raised by Jean Cotton. In the end the motion carried and construction will begin as soon as possible.

Marjority of articles approved

Town meeting became quite a bit more generous at the second session held on Tuesday night. After voting down three major articles on Monday, a crowd not quite half as large gave the OK to a majority of the articles.

Along with the police/fire renovations, 13 other articles were passed.

Town meeting approved $19,425 for the continued engineering services of Camp, Dresser and McKee at the Cohasset Heights landfill. Water Commissioner Ron Goodwin updated town meeting that attorney for the town, Michael Leon, has not gone to court yet for an injunction, because he needs testimony from Joe Godzik of the board of health.

Town meeting unanimously passed article 18 to pay attorneys' bills The large amount of $60,000 was for litigation fees involving Cohasset Heights landfill and Cohasset harbor.

The meeting approved $2,500 to provide tuition funds to sponsor a Cohasset resident in the South Shore Association for Retarded Citizens.

The meeting approved $1,475 dollars for the upkeep of veterans' graves . The town also voted unanimously to amend the zoning by-laws so that people proposing to build an addition to a non-conforming house will not have to face the board of appeals when proposed construction does conform to the by-laws.

The town voted to extend the hours and benefits of a

Landfill owner says he will never pollute water

Ltd., the commercial landfill on Crocker Lane, since the spring of 1982. Paul has been a resident of the town for the past four years; his brother resides in Newton.

A member of the local Chamber of Commerce, Barry sees many of the landfill's opponents on a regular basis. As he jogs along the streets near his Atlantic Avenue home, he meets some of the people who have protested loudly and long about his commercial dump site.

"I wave to them and say hi," Barry stated. "I don't have any personal thoughts against anyone. In fact, what they did Monday is all behind me. I understand they feel very emotional about this. But they have to believe me, I will not allow this landfill to pollute my water supply."

When questioned, Barry admitted he drinks Cohasset water - "but it's filtered, like most people do," he said.

"I don't think anyone can be totally at ease in a community when there is strong talk about you ruining their water supply," he continued. "It's a strong issue throughout the nation. But I'm at ease with my conscience because I know I am not doing anything wrong.

"I want to come up with that other $750,000," he said, referring to the second half of a bond payment required as part of a May agreement signed by Barry and the board of health. The board ordered the landfill closed last week because the Barrys had not delivered that second bond payment. Although it has yet to be delivered, Barry said his attorneys are confident they will raise the money.

What is bothering the landfill owner is not the protests sounded by the opponents of Cohasset Heights, but the extraordinary measures he has been obliged to take to ensure the safety of his operation.

"It's a double standard by officials in this town," he stated. "When I receive a cease and desist order because there is a minimal amount of leachate running from my tank, I can turn around see the streams of leachate that are running out of our own landfill. That is a landfill without monitoring wells and no cover. Why are they treating me so different?

"There are private water wells serving 23 people near the town's landfill. They are just downgrade from the dump. I've spent thousands of dollars on monitoring wells, and the town dump doesn't have one. And come to think of it, the water department isn't required to do half the testing on their water as I do on the water that comes from this landfill."

Barry has long believed that one major source of his problems stems from the salt storage sheds owned by the state Department of Public Works, located directly above and behind his property. "I say let's go to the source - the place used to be a Nike site and who knows what is seeping into the ground now. Let's spend the money to take care of the problem at its source instead of me constructing a treatment plant that will have to be manned and operated forever. It will be an unending obligation on my part, and it won't take care of the source of the any problem," he said.

The board of health, as part of the landfill's site assignment, has required the Barrys to construct an on-site leachate treatment plant. This first-of-its- kind, state-of-the-art plant is not expected to be constructed until 1990, Barry said. Until that time, the leachate is trucked out of the landfill each day. A Connecticut trucking firm is handling the transportation procedure.

Barry said his life is now "caught up with this place." He spends most days, including weekends, supervising the operation. "They're coming at us from all angles - so my life has become this landfill," he said.

The volume of business has been reduced because of rising operational costs which Barry blamed on the expensive equipment and engineering rates required by the health board. "I'll survive," he promised, noting that his plans include utilization of 40 of the 48 acres he owns there.

"All I'm looking for is a little justice. I see my landfill and then I see what's happening at the town landfill, yet the town officials continue to put pressure on Cohasset Heights," he added.

Barry explained that two weeks ago, a load of white, wrapped materials was brought into the landfill. His employees, suspicious of the contents, isolated the bags from the remaining refuse and waited until Barry could inspect it. He couldn't identify the materials, and put a call into his engineers at GHR. Although it was a Saturday, Paul's wife drove a sample over to the engineers. They quickly determined it was not asbestos, as some had feared. "Then I asked them to analyze it further to see what it actually was," Barry said. In the meantime, he called the board of health and explained exactly what had occurred.

"Next thing I know I'm handed a cease and desist order and Dr. Godzik (health agent) tells me he saw the asbestos-like material and the leachate flow during an inspection. We told him about the two problems before he ever saw them here," Barry stated.

The landfill owner said he and his brother "could walk away from this," leaving the property in the hands of a bank. "But we made a commitment here," he said. "It's a matter of commitment and standards. We vow this place will never become another Baird and Maguire. We're willing to stick this thing out and to fix whatever has to be fixed, or prove that there isn't a problem that has to be fixed at all. We won't leave."

position in the treasurer-collector's office. Elizabeth Ripley told voters of the increased work load on her office. The meeting also approved $62,000 for reconstruction of a leaky roof at the Water Department. Lot Bates explained that water revenue will eventually pay the interest and the principal revenue of the project.

"A transfer station is going to have to be built at one point," said selectman Jim Gallagher, "so let's get on with it."

Town meeting accepted unanimously to begin work on a transfer station. The warrant article to enter into an agreement with SEMASS was passed the night before.

Town meeting voted to give developers permission to widen Rosano Lane for future housing sites. The meeting also approved $6,500 in funds for a new state of the art concrete pier for Lawrence Wharf in the harbor.

Additional funds amounting to $47,000 were approved for the purpose of retaining Camp, Dresser and McKee to conduct a hydrogeology/water quality investigation relating to the impact of Cohasset Heights landfill on the water supply.

The sum of $500 was also approved for the purpose of entering into a contract with a hazardous materials response unit. Fire Chief Brock explained that the investment would allow us to call on $40,000 worth of equipment. The training to all Cohasset firefighters will be provided at no cost.

Tax rate. . .

Andrew said it took some time to update the revaluations and new construction throughout the town.

Assessor Thomas Duggan noted that Cohasset is the third town on the South Shore to set its tax rate. "I really don't consider that late," he said.

Athletic field repairs rebuked by voters. . .

major expenditures at special town meetings."

Shortly after moderator Bill Weeks called the meeting to order a resolution was passed thanking former Harbormaster Harry Ritter for his many years of service in the harbor. Don Andrew introduced Mary Matthews, the new town accountant and the meeting voted to accept the articles in a random order. The meeting next quickly disposed of article 24, for funds for the landfill, by indefinitely postponing it.

It was then down to the main buisness of the night; debate over article 9, the proposed Lillard field renovations. Selectman Cliff Mitman introduced the article and explained that the selectmen support construction of the new field, but would not support related bills such as an all-weather track and bleachers.

"If we recommend 9 and postpone 10,11 and 12 it is something that we can live with. The rest is too much to chomp off, we would rather approach it in smaller bites," said Mitman.

The advisory board disagreed. Goedecke told the voters, "We agree that the fields need improvement but it is not as high a priority as other big ones. We are not convinced that this plan is the best one for the town .

We don't think that the town can afford such a grand plan. We might suggest a less ambitious plan."

Ed Tebbetts of the capital budget committee reminded voters of priorities held by many public officials and his committee. The priorities included money for sewers, SEMASS and a transfer station, and police/fire renovation. The field renovation project was seventh on the list of priorities.

"We don't think that we should go ahead with the seventh priority unless we are prepared to go ahead with the first six," said Tebbetts.

Ken Ekberg of the Lillard field renovation committee explained details of the article to voters. The committee decided to withdraw article 12, for providing lights for the field. Ekberg explained that the existing surface was run down, and that the present track makes spring sports unsafe. Ekberg also pointed out that the field hockey team lost there home field advantage last fall when league officials said the field was unplayable.

Ekberg also mentioned that they had already been given $64,000 in donations for the upkeep of the field and that the money would would completely take care of capital maintenance.

Dr. Edward Woods appealed to voters to take into consideration recent events on Wall Street before they voted.

"All of these are very worthy projects," said Woods. "In light of recent events a lot of town residents have had their resources considerably diminished. Six months is a short time until the next town meeting. Maybe the financial picture of the nation can then be seen in a much clearer light at that point."

A stirring speech by Francis Collins asked residents to think about the children of our community.

"We have been considering this project for ten years," said Collins. "We always find reasons why we shouldn't. Our posterity deserves the best that we can afford. I think that we should show our children how we feel about them."

Town meeting rejected a decision by moderator Bill Weeks to hold a secret ballot. When the hand votes were counted it was 305 voters in favor of the project and 221 oppossed to the work. The article fell short of the 2/3 majority it needed to pass.

Ken Ekberg called for a controversial vote to reconsider. The motion failed and the field renovation article was put to bed for yet another year.

Article 6 for the rezoning of land on 3A came heavily supported by both the selectmen and the advisory board.

"Traffic is the main issue," said selectmen Burt Pratt. "It is not getting any better. The intended purpose of 3A was to take traffic off the streets. Cohasset is just not viable for light industry."

The article submitted by a citizens group largely located on Fair Oaks Lane was drawn up, according to John Bishop, one of the sponsors, after their fruitless battle to stop the Stop & Shop complex.

Wayne Sawchuk and Glenn Pratt both spoke out against the article. Also a stirring oratory by John Seavey, owner of the Whitney Hill Technology Center, convinced voters to reject the advice of the selectmen and the advisory board.

Seavey told voters that for Cohasset to be a dynamic and productive community it must retain the business district. Seavey said that he did not want Cohasset to turn into a "bedroom community of commuters. The tax base will also be adversely affected," continued Seavey. "It will take away businesses rights by making their property non-conforming." said Seavey.

"As one of these business persons I strongly reject losing my rights to expand or modify my property," said Seavey. " After spending two years proceeding through the very tight and comprehensive site plan and design review processes before the Cohasset boards to erect the Whitney Hill Technology Center and to employ 40 persons in a growing company, I ask that you do not repay my investment of time, money and faith in the town of Cohasset by making me and other business owners second class citizens."

The motion to rezone 3A was defeated by a vote of 274-117.

The King Street committee submitted an amendment to their article that would allow King Street to have two way traffic for residents but vehicles would not be able to enter King Street in a southwesterly direction from 3A.

The addition of the amendment evoked a positive recommendation from the selectmen. The advisory committee also lent their support to the article.

Robert Sturdy of the planning board argued that the new alignment with the Stop & Shop traffic lights might help the situation and that it would be wise to see if the new configuration solved the problem.

"Everyone would like their house to be on a one way street," said Sturdy. "I think that everyone should have a right to get around town."

Nancy Garrison of King Street responded that since King Street was already under heavy construction the present would be the best time to pass the article.

"This is the type of move that we don't want to jump into because it might be precedent - setting," warned Richard Avery.

Wayne Sawchuk who was a font of interesting facts throughout the meeting brought up the fact that it would be nearly impossible for delivery trucks to determine house numbers on King Street if it became one way.

The motion was defeated by a vote of 174 to 132.

The only other article discussed on Monday was asking voters to approve the town to go ahead and enter into a agreement with SEMASS or another waste disposal company. Don DeMichele explained to voters that the long term savings of this project would far outweigh short term expenditures. The SEMASS facility converts trash to steam and electricity.

DeMichele also explained that the project would necessitate the building of a transfer station and would also mandate recycling. The motion to enter into this agreement was adopted overwhelmingly.

Six arrested during peaceful protest. . .

The drama started just before 7 a.m. when the citizens' group began gathering and garnishing signs and banners, and soliciting honks of support from commuters on Rte. 3A. Paul Barry, owner of the landfill, arrived on the scene shortly after 7 a.m. to address the group.

"The dump is open for business today," Barry told representatives of the group and the press.

"Yes, we are ignoring the order," Barry answered to one of the protesting citizens.

"I do a regular businesss of 16 to 20 trucks a day," said Barry. "You can do this peacefully if you want and have this cause. But I own Crocker Lane it is my property.

At approximately 8 a.m., a large refuse truck that had entered the landfill area before the citizens group arrived, was blocked by the protesters from leaving the area. Shortly thereafter, another large refuse truck arrived, intent on entering the landfill area. Citizens succesfully blocked both trucks.

As of Friday ,a cease and desist order from the board of health had been in effect at the landfill. The order was issued, not because of environmental problems, but because the Barry brothers were unable to deliver a $750,000 bond they had previously agreed to supply to the town for the construction of a treatment plant. Barry has appealed the order.

The main problem that the citizens' group have with the landfill, neatly perched at one ofthe highest points in Cohasset, is that it could be leaking hazardous materials into Lily Pond, the town's water supply.

"I can only go by the people twho are educated in the field," said Barry. "They are not saying that it is polluting Lily Pond."

As the morning progressed, local police arrived and determined that the access road did in fact belong to Barry. Police Sgt. Brian Noonan warned protesters that they would be arrested if they did not move. The citizens' group stood their ground.

State Police arrived shortly after 10 a.m. It was determined that the Department of Public Works had an easement to use the access road to get to their maintainence garage. State Police compromised with the citizens' group and the blockaide was moved further up the hill, allowing D.P.W. trucks free clearance to their garage.

"We have no intent of interrupting their normal business," said David Bigley of Greenpeace, refering to the D.P.W.

Meanwhile, tension grew as it was clear the standoff could not continue much longer.

"We are not going to wait until Lily Pond is contaminated to do something about this," said Bigley.

Both state and local police, with the help of selectmen Jim Gallagher, worked to find a compromise between Barry and the citizens group. Barry said that he would allow the citizens to protest on the property as long as the refuse trucks could freely pass. Barry insisted that it would be business as usual until he received a court order to close the dump.

The protesters remained adament that they would not leave until an injunction was delivered or they were arrested. Police told protesters that a lawyer was in court at that moment seeking an injunction.

"We've heard that razzamatazz before," said the protesters.

"If the constable delivers a court order then I'll move," said Bigley.

"We needed to make this point," said Bigley's wife Alix White, also of Cohasset. "They are technically in the wrong. They are just thumbing their nose at the town. It is time somebody stood up and said, no, you are not going to do it anymore."

As it became clear that an injunction was not going to arrive and protesters were not going to relinquish their blockade,police strated to make arrests. Each citizen was given a final chance move to the side of the road, instead of being arrested. The six people gave themselves up to police with full cooperation.

Their main gripe with the landfill is its close proximity to Lily Pond.

"This dump is in our @$%#^& watershed and your pollution is going into Lily Pond, and you know it pal," said protestor Bill Hodgson. "If you had put it 1000 feet to the west it would have been all right."

Mary Lou Clark of Cohasset was on hand wielding a sign on Monday morning.

"I have children and I want them to have good water. It sounds like it has a direct effect," said Clark.

Joan McDonald of Cohasset was also present at Monday's protest.

"I could not believe that it took so long to bring any attention to this," said McDonald.

"There are so many reasons, this is just the straw that broke the camel's back," said protester Robin Lademan. "Cohasset Heights landfill has just completely ignored the cease and desist order. Th contamination is happenning now in the test wells and we are just saying, no more."

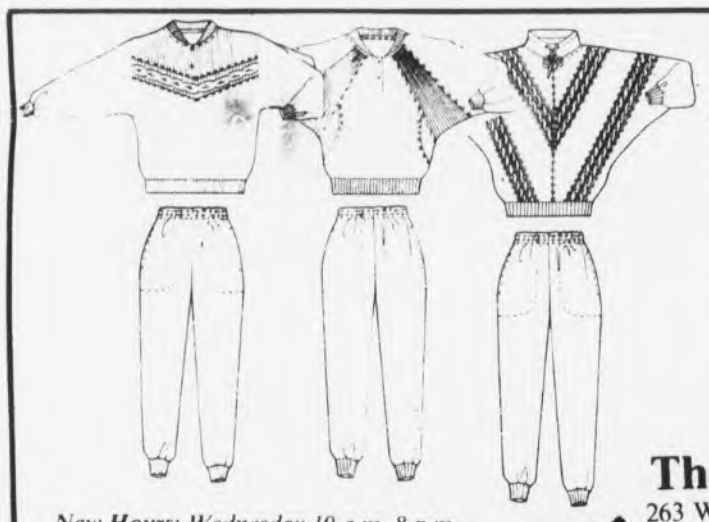
In a spirit of the day's event, selectman Jim Gallagher supported the stance of the protesters.

"I think that it (dump closing) is great. It is long overdue."

Paul Barry told reporters, "Engineers have done boxes of documentation and it shows that there is no contamination of Lily Pond. Firms like Camp, Dresser and McKee have said that Cohasset Heights landfill will never affect Lily Pond. I have a great concern for the environment. I would not go ahead with a project like this if I had doubts. I'm working on facts and they are working on gut feeling."

Presently, Barry is spending thousands of dollars each day to truck leachate from the landfill to a treatment facility in Briston, Conn. A court order forcing Barry to close down is not expected for at least ten days. Until that time, the dump will remain open for business, Barry promised.

Seeing that the landfill was open, Fred Laidlaw of the citizens' group commented on the timeliness of the health board's decision.



"The day before town meeting people will see headlines saying that the dump is closed."

According to Laidlaw, the same thing happened last year before the April town meeting.

"It is manipulation of the press," said Laidlaw. "It is misleading people into believing that the problem has been solved."

Reception planned at Logan home

Polly Logan, Republican National Committee Women for Massachusetts in conjunction with the Republican Town Committees of Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Scituate and Weymouth, is having a reception at her home of 121 Nichols Road, Cohasset. The date and time of the reception is Wednesday, November 4 at 7:30 p.m. The purpose is for the Republicans, Independents and new residents of these five towns to meet and get to know Representative Steve Pierce, the recently elected Minority Leader of the Massachusetts House of Representatives. Steve will address the issues of the state and forthcoming Presidential/ National election and answer questions of your interest.

Elected as House Minority Leader on January 7, 1987 at caucus of Republican Members of the Massachusetts House of Representatives, Steven D. Pierce, Republican State Representative from Westfield, Massachusetts, is currently in his fifth term in the House of Representatives. His election by acclamation as Republican House Leader follows two terms as Republican House Whip and makes him, at age 37, the youngest legislative party leader in recent Massachusetts history.

Pierce was first elected State Representative in 1978 with 62% of the vote in a district in which Democrats outnumber Republicans in registration by a margin of three to one. In his re-election to a fourth term in 1984 he received the nomination of both parties.

Prior to serving in the House Republican Leadership, Pierce was a member of the Joint Committees on the Judiciary, Criminal Justice and Federal Financial Assistance. He has also served on the House Rules Committee, the Special Joint Committee on Uniform Sentencing and Criminal Code Revision and the Special Joint Committee on Redistricting. He has been involved in many issues and House floor debates, including surtax repeal, legislative rules reform, local aid, and drunk driving and sentencing law reform. In 1984 he was named a Legislator of the Year by the Massachusetts Municipal Association.

Rep. Pierce is a graduate of Westfield High School and Union College in Schenectady, New York, where he majored in economics, was named to Phi Beta Kappa, and was class co-valedictorian in 1971. He received his Juris Doctor, with honors, from Duke University School of Law in 1974.

Rep. Steve Pierce

Prior to his election to the Massachusetts House in 1978, Rep. Pierce had practiced law in Hartford, Connecticut and in Westfield.

Steve Pierce, 37, resides in Westfield with his wife, Mary Jane, a registered nurse, and their son, Jeffrey age 6.

Please R.S.V.P. by calling 383-6443 or 383-0304. Mark your calendars, Wednesday, November 4 —7:30 p.m. Polly Logan's home, 121 Nichols Road, Cohasset.

Apple makes computers friendly. PCR supplies the friendly humans.

When you buy an Apple from PCR, 24 friendly people come with the bundle.

Most people are down-right scared when they shop for their first computer. The whole concept of "high tech" is intimidating. And then most salespeople are either ignorant, pushy or both! At PCR you'll find people dealing with people on a very human level. We speak American, not computerese. We pool commissions so that everyone helps each other and, therefore, helps you. And we'll respect your fears and help you get over them.

The Apple IIc™ may be the perfect computer to start you and your family off. It can run over 10,000 of the best written programs for word processing, filing, spreadsheets, educational, personal finance, business, entertainment, ... In fact, almost any thing you might want to do with a personal computer, you can probably do with an Apple IIc. And it's expandable!

around town

☐ Recently, David Shultz, son of Larry and Linda Shultz, received an honor that only one student gets each year!! He was awarded the superintendent's certificate of academic excellence, which is given to the highest ranking senior. It was awarded now, to allow David to include this honor in his college applications. Sure sounds as though David will be able to attend the college of his choice. Congratulations to you for all your efforts, David!

☐ Another Cohasset High student makes the limelight this week, Bryan Edwards. Bryan was named to the Street & Smith basketball All-Americans. It sure is nice to see talent recognized. Everyone will have their eyes on Bryan this basketball season.

☐ If your family uses Campbell Soup, or your dog eats Recipe Dog Food, remember the DAR. They are involved in a most worthwhile project involving these products. They send the labels into the companies, and the companies in turn pay tuition for boys that are "borderline" wayward. These boys get the much-needed chance to be good citizens and students. So, be sure to save those labels. . . See Ann Pompeo for further details.

☐ Happy belated birthday to two very special people, Louis and Helen Watson. Be sure to extend your best wishes to them when you see them. They sure are a great couple who do a lot for everyone and for our town!

☐ The night that everyone looks forward to is almost sold out, so get moving! The PSO Monte Carlo Night will be held on Nov. 14 from 8 p.m. - 1 a.m. at the Cohasset Golf Club, with Carmine doing the catering. Contact Ralph Kidder, 383-6873, Tish Jordan, 383-0195, or Patience Towle, 383-1954 for your ticket. The ticket price is $15 per person.

☐ Thank you to Tom Sheppard for the time that he put in for our town on the Insurance Committee. Tom resigned recently, and Sam Wakeman was appointed by the selectmen to take his place. Ask a busy person. . .

☐ Katherine L. Harris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Harris of Cohasset, MA, is a member of the freshman class at Hartwick College in Oneonta, New York.

Hartwick College is a private, co-educational, liberal arts institution of 1,400 students, located in the Western Catskill Mountain Region of New York State.

☐ For those of you who have extra time on your hands, don't forget the Village Fair is still looking for workers! If you can help on any of the tables, contact your church representatives; or, maybe you have done your fall cleaning and have found some articles that could be sold at the Bargain Bazaar. Do whatever you can to make the day and the fair a success.

☐ Are you anxious to find out how those new disposable cameras work? If so ask Vivian McCormick. Vivian won one at the Cohasset Sixty Plus Club's Harvest Fair that was held recently, it was donated by Noble's Camera Shop.Sure sounds like a super idea.

During September, Peter Breen of Minot, negotiated the most sales and Mary Ellen Neagle of Pond Street, listed the most property through the Cohasset office.

The names of achievement award winners are displayed on a plaque in their office.

☐ The Cohasset Gridiron Club held its Annual Chowder last weekend, at the George H. Mealey Post, under the direction of Peter Whitman (club president). As usual, the chowder was reported to be "yummy," and it certainly gives the parents of the team a chance to meet one another and "compare notes" on their sons. It was also the first time for many to see the newly finished function room at the Post, and it certainly is beautiful! The view of the Harbor is an added bonus, and a super one at that.

☐ That's the news from here. Be sure to phone your newsworthy event in to me. . .make your calls at night, as I am one of those people that is "always home but never there!"

Senior Center news

Did you know that since 1980, older Americans —those 65 and older — have increased far more rapidly than any other age group, according to A Profile of Older Americans: 1986, AARP.

The 65-plus age group increased by 2.8 million or 11% since 1980, compared to an increase of 4% for the under 65 population.

The older population is expected to continue to grow in the future. During the 1990s, this growth will slow because of the relatively small number of babies born during the Great Depression of the 1930s. Growth will pick up again around the turn of the century with much rapid increase expected between the years 2010 & 2030 when the "baby boon" generation reaches age 65. Not too far off!!

In housing, of the 18.2 million households headed by older persons in 1985, 75% were owners & 25% were renters. Older male householders were more likely to be owners 83% than were females 66%.

The housing of older Americans is generally older & less adequate than the balance of the nation's housing. About 36% of homes owned by older persons in '83 were built prior to 1940. The percent of income spent on repairs in '83 was higher for older households than for younger households without a mortgage (15% vs. 10%), & renters (32% vs. 28%).

Speaking of Housing — There is new Congregate Housing being built in Hingham.

The acceptance of the Congregate Housing idea was first seen in this area through the experiment initiated by Protestant Social Services Bureau through a grant from South Shore Elder Services. The goal of congregate living is to assist elders to maintain an independent lifestyle by bringing needed social & health services to them.

Hingham is almost ready with facilities ready to offer for a limited number of elder local residents. Individuals may apply who: 1. Are 62 years of age or older; 2. Have difficulty living independently or are lonely & isolated; 3. Do not require 24 hr. medical attention; 4. Are income eligible for public housing; and are interested in a shared living arrangement. For more information contact the Cohasset Council on Aging, 3 North Main Street, Cohasset, 383-9112.

This could be the best step an older person has ever made!!

H.O.W. HELPING OTHER WIDOWS & WIDOWERS — H.O.W. is a local support group of widows, widowers, & supportive friends who help themselves by reaching out to others. It will meet twice a month (usually on Tuesday evenings) at 7:30 p.m. Nov. 3, 17th, Dec. 1 & 15th at the Old South Union Church, Columbian Street in So. Weymouth (near So. Shore Hospital). This is a non-sectarian group. They offer both education meetings on topics of concern to widows and widowers and mutual support group meetings. Transportation can be arranged. For more information call Mary (335-3862) or Nancy Clapp at (837-9671). Please try to come if you need help or are willing to reach out & help others.

Tuesday, Nov. 3 — Harvest Pot Luck Supper 6:30 p.m.

Tuesday, Nov. 17 — Personal Growth - Relationships & Support Group.

Tuesday, Dec. 1 — Holiday Survival Panel H.O.W. Members.

Tuesday, Dec. 15 — Grief Tailspins at Holiday Time / Support Group.

VOLUNTEERS NEEDED — Have you ever wanted to know how T.V. programs are produced? Well now is your chance — Jeff Ringe & Matt Sullivan are planning a new program for senior issues this fall on Cohasset Cable T.V. You learn how to do everything from host to producer — training will be provided by the Cable T.V. network. All you need is the interest in learning. This is a great chance for Cohasset residents to have their own T.V. show & help plan what kind of show the Cohasset Senior Citizens would be interested in seeing. Randolph has the "Senior Focus," Quincy has "Senior Smarts," and Hull shows a weekly program called "Elder Almanac" — Let's get together and come up with the best T.V. program on the South Shore — call the Council office at 383-9112. You can do it — it's FUN.

FOR YOUR INFORMATION

Fuel Assistance Applications are available at the Council on Aging Office on Wednesday, Nov. 4th, & Nov. 25th. Call now for your appointment between the hours of 9 a.m. and 1 p.m.: 383-9112.

In order to process the applications quickly, applicants must provide proof of income documentation such as: Employment stubs, or copies indicating the gross income for at least 90 days or 13 weeks preceding the application or a signed and dated letter from employer stating gross wages. Unemployment — An official-signed statement from the Div. of Employment Security @ amount of benefits, date of beginning and termination or legible copy of DES claim form. Social Security/SSI. — A copy of a current check or an official S.S. Statement indicating current monthly benefits. Interest, dividends-statement from banks indicating amount of interest received during last 90 days. Dividends, a copy of current check indicating how much/often they are received. Also, if you were a recipient last year and received the "pink" letter from S.S. Community Action Council, please bring this letter with you.

This year's income guidelines based on gross annual income of all members of the households are $9,625 for one and $12,950 for two.

EXERCISE HELPS — You know that exercise tones muscles, helps with weight loss, and strengthens the heart. But, did you know that exercise has other benefits, particularly for people with diabetes: better blood-glucose control. Even brisk walking can bring results as long as you do it regularly.

At the Council on Aging we have planned the following programs to benefit all Cohasset Seniors: Monday and Thursdays at 10:30 a.m., Exercise for Seniors with Karen. Tuesday at 10:30 a.m., "Diet Workshop" with Helen Emmitt. Walking Club for Seniors every Tuesday at 10 a.m. Participants will meet at the Center —there is no fee for walking.

Not a personal war

It's been another week of confrontation between Cohasset Heights Ltd. and an organized group of residents and environmentalists who want nothing less than a complete shutdown of this commercial landfill.

The board of health, faced with a blatant violation of the site assignment agreement signed by the landfill owners and the board, ordered the landfill closed last week. To their credit, they acted not in haste as some would want. They found a violation, notified their attorney and handled it in a professional, proper and prompt manner.

The landfill owners, who for years have been locked in a tenuous situation among their neighbors and friends, admitted they cannot immediately secure another $750,000 bond. That bond is a requirement of the site assignment agreement.

And under the terms of that agreement, either the bond is produced or the landfill is ordered closed. The first $750,000 bond will be used to complete closure of the dump.

For years we have agreed with concerned residents that Cohasset Heights Ltd. is not the proper use of that land which surrounds Lily Pond. That is not the Barrys' fault, nor the previous owner's sin.

Town officials at that time were all too anxious to allow James Tyeryar the necessary permits to operate a commercial landfill. He simply handed over the business and the headaches of the operation to the Barrys.

No one, not even the most vehemently-opposed residents, would say the Barrys are the enemy in this war. Paul Barry is a good, caring resident of this town who cares about his neighbors. The future of this community where he is raising his family, is as important to him as to the people who are trying to shut down his business.

But the Barrys are struggling to survive, just as any businessmen are now. We can't disagree with their goals, but we remain apprehensive. A commercial landfill in the backyard of our reservoir, no matter who owns it, is a bad idea. In fact, we're convinced it would be an even greater danger if the owners were not the Barrys.

This is a fight between residents of this town, and a big, dirty business. It has never been a war between the Barrys and their neighbors. If there is an enemy here, it is BFI which owns filthy landfills across the country - dotting rural landscapes like open sores.

This is a tough fight, and it is far from over. The town must proceed cautiously and with sound legal advice from its environmental attorney. One wrong step and the town will find itself in a costly defeat.

We must not turn our attention away from this issue. It deserves scrutiny by all residents - everyone concerned about the future of our town and its water supply. It's time for everyone, not just a small circle of activists and outside organizers to become involved in this issue.

Without attention and action by all residents, commercial landfills such as this one used by BFI may fail to provide the proper safeguards to protect our ecology and our community.

Tebbetts writes an ode from Bali

(Richard is a resident of Jerusalem Road Drive. He has traveled extensively and is now in Bali. Ed.)

What makes this green, artistic island in the center of Indonesia's 13,000 islands special? Its people, their smiles and the ancient culture. The Balinese children, adolescents and adults are obviously enjoying life. Children in all but the most remote villages greet foreigners with a 'Hello, how are you?' or at least a fleeting 'Hello!' They are stunned when one responds with the Indonesian equivalent, 'Apa Kabar?' Then they laugh.

From the first day when one body surfs Kuta Beach's rollers until the last sunset at a black sand beach days, weeks, or months later, you won't stop enjoying yourself. The massages (pronounced: MAASAAJ) given by the local women on Kuta Beach are clean, enjoyable, and like everything in Bali, a good buy. They use a combination of ever-present coconut oil and sun cream to relax and loosen your tired and aching muscles. The masseuses have wide working-womens' hands as a result of their work at home and on the beach.

The rich Hindu culture a la Balinese makes the people vibrant. They love dancing, religious offerings, ceremonies, artistic craftsmanship and children.

Like the Hindus of India they cremate their dead, believe in reincarnation, and have a caste system (except the untouchables, the lowest caste).

Most of the dancing is led by the gamelan orchestra; brass kettles, gongs, and xylophones. The common thread throughout all of the dances is the fight between good and evil. In a Legong dance, Barong (good) and Rangda (evil) appear. These two mystical creatures do battle for the souls of the villagers. As always in Balinese legend, good triumphs over evil and the village is saved. Even though it is just a dance, many offerings are made to the Gods for protection against the evil spirits present. The offerings consist of a collection of small colorful flowers, grasses, fruits, leaves, vegetables, rice,, and incense sticks placed in a basket of palm leaves.

The Kecak or monkey dance involves the unitive movements of a circle of male chanters who sway back and forth, left to right with a solitary 'leaper-yelper' in the center. With one leap and one yell the yelper changes the chanters rhythm. He makes a gutteral 'braughhh' sound. It's called the monkey dance because good and evil men in monkey masks come to the center of the chanting circle and fight for the body and soul of several Balinese princesses. The primitive chak-a-chak sound of the chanters and the 'braughhh' sound of the yelper are all one hears in this dance without the gamelan orchestra.

Most unbelievable of all Balinese dances is the fire-trance dance. Burning coconut husks share the floor with the fire dancer, who is in a trance, and his wooden hobbyhorse. He 'rides' through the burning pile of shells and proceeds to step upon embers with the full force of his weight. The dance climaxes when he kicks the burning husks toward his audience. Though the open air theatre at Bona didn't burn down that evening, half-burned cinders did reach the height of the rafters, chilling the western throng to the bone. Post performance inspection of the fire dancer's lower limbs revealed normal yet charcoal-blackened feet and quivering legs.

The Balinese have a rich artistic tradition granting that until this century much of the art was in Hindu temples and used only for special ceremonies. Today, painters, wood carvers, clothing makers, and food preparers are creating art with their brushes, chisels, needles, and knives. Some Balinese painters have had international exhibitions in London, Paris, Los Angeles and beyond. Their themes are often related to the lush green countryside where bending bamboo branches hang over the road like green street lights and drooping coconut palms shade the weary passersby. The cultivating of rice, tending of ducks, washing of water buffalos, nesting of exotic birds and picking of fruits round off the painters themes.

Wood carving, important in Balinese architecture, mask-making, and picture-framing, is centered in the small piedmont village of Mas. A well-built Balinese home would have many woodcarvers working the beams, shutters and headboards.

Balinese fashions may not be well known in Paris, Milano, or New York but a surprising number of unique designs are produced on the island. Shirts and dresses, hand-painted with embroidery, beads, metallic circles and animal motifs are a Balinese specialty. You won't find them in Paris, unless you visit Chez Salvadore (Salvadore Dali's surrealistic clothing shop!!!).

The preparation of breakfast at a Balinese Homestay is a work of art. The sliced-papaya, banana, and pineapple fruit salad is always topped with shredded coconut and honey. An omelet, a jaffle (a type of grilled sandwich with ham, egg, cheese, avocado or other niceties inside), glutonous rice or fruit pancakes are served as the main dish. The meal is accompanied by Balinese tea. Every detail is attended to at the daybreak feast.

The green coastal and foothil! areas change to volcanic ash and pumice in the north-central highlands. The land is dry and dusty, the people rough, and the homes are dirty. These mountain-fairing people are more Nepali in their looks (they have wider faces than other Balinese) and Arabic in their disposition than their 'southern' cousins.

Bargaining, commonplace in the Central foothills and the southern coastal areas, is not accepted by the people of Mt. Batur. In dominating Arabic fashion a price is given and that's the last word. Normally everything in Bali except for meals is open for some bargaining. These rugged people, in tune with their volcanic surroundings, lack even the most rudimentary necessities in their homes. Lighting, installed in some rooms, works sporadically. Somehow even tap water runs dry at times. A bizarre occurance since the community is located on a huge fresh-water lake!

Young Balinese men are often seen holding each others arms, legs, hands, shoulders and waists. Kissing, however, is strictly reserved for women and only done behind closes doors. To these hot-blooded people a kiss entails bed and love making. They don't understand how a man and a woman can possibly stay together in a room and not make love.

Women, on the other hand, suffer a fate much like that of other women in the world; hard work for little or no money and husbands who leave them for another woman. At one black sand beach on the north coast of Bali, women were loading straw baskets with sand for transport on their heads to a construction site several

Historical Society has list of collectables

With the onset of the winter holiday gift-giving season approaching, the Cohasset Historical Society would like to remind potential gift shoppers of the several unique and tasteful items the Society offers to buyers interested in Cohasset's history.

The Society offers a selected group of sales items both suitable and appropriate for holiday gift giving.

Written during the 1890s and first issued by the Committee on Town History in 1898, Rev. E. Victor Bigelow's Narrative History of the Town of Cohasset, Massachusetts is the definitive history of the town's first three centuries.

Written in flowing 19th century narrative style, Bigelow's history of Cohasset actually begins its story with a description of the granite ledges which lie just beneath our ground and were formed many millions of years ago. Glacial and post-glacial epochs, which gave the town its topography, are discussed, as is the regrowth of living things following the retreat of the great ice sheets. Later came the American Indians, the early migration tribes who now are believed to have been on Cohasset ground two milennia ago. It was the last of the Indian tribes, those of the Algonquin nation, who named this place Quonahassit, "the long, rocky place," and were met by Capt. John Smith of Virginia during his voyage of exploration in 1614. Then came European settlers, first to Hingham then to its eastern-most vacant land at Conahasset beginning in the 1670s.

From that original community of isolated farms, Cohasset grew into a self-sufficient New England seacoast town, and Bigelow traces its evolution through the next two and a quarter centuries. Cohasset was the 2nd Precinct and Parish of Hingham from 1717 to 1770 when it became a town in its own right. The Narrative History of Cohasset covers the agricultural and sea-faring years of the town, and its transformation in the latter 1800s into first a summer resort for wealthy Bostonians then into the beginnings of a modern suburban community.

This unique book, of 561 pages, contains both illustrations of old Cohasset and several maps, dating from different phases of the town's development. Bigelow's book represents the gathering together of most that was documented or remembered about Cohasset's earliest years in an age when change was beginning to obscure the origins of its existance. It is a unique book, enjoyable to both the casual reader and the serious historian.

A second book offered by the Historical Society is the recent reprint in paperback form of Edmund Pomeroy Collier's Cohasset's Deep Sea Captains. During the 19th century Cohasset was a seafaring town. Many of its sons went to sea at an early age, some spent most of their lifetimes upon the ocean, and several generations of Cohasseters produced master mariners whose vessels spanned the oceans of the world. They were the merchant captains whose stately homes line many of the oldest highways and byways of the town. Edmund Pomeroy Collier was a son of one of the most illustrious of Cohasset deep sea captains, Capt. James Collier Jr.

In the early 1900s, Edmund Collier wrote a compiled history of some dozens of the town's deep sea captains, covering the time from the latter 1700s to the turn of the 20th century. Biographies, some short and others extensive, outline the careers of such Cohasset captains as John Jacob Lothrop, Philip Fox, John Barker, Francis Pratt, Samuel Snow (born Salvador Sabete y Morell in Tarragona, Spain), James Collier, Senior and Junior, Ezra Towle, James Hall, and the sole surviving shipmaster of the older generations still living in Collier's time, Capt. Harrison P. Snow. Collier's Cohasset's Deep Sea Captains originally appeared as a chapter in the Davenport Town Genealogies, in 1909, and has been reprinted by the Historical Society. It is a fascinating glimpse into an age long past, and a part of the history of this town.

Also symbolizing Cohasset's historic link with the sea are the Historical Society's delightful Minot's Light cup plates. Made of glass by the Pairpoint Glass Company of Sandwich, Mass., these cameo artworks replicate a form of small, decorative glass plate used in the early 1800s "when fashion decreed teacups without handles. Hot tea was poured into the saucer to cool, while the cup was placed on a small glass plate to avoid soiling the linen or the polished table." The Cohasset Historical Society Minot's Light cup plates picture the famous 114' high granite lighthouse built in the mid-1800s to warn mariners away from the treacherous "Cohasset rocks" just off the town's shores. In this accurate representation in glass, the light is shown during a storm. Minot's Light cup plates currently are available in three color's; cobalt blue, green and clear, and each has a short descriptive text accompanying.

Recently added to the Historical Society's list of gift-giving items is a limited number of canvas tote bags, printed with the Society's seal. Founded in 1928, the Historical Society soon adopted an official seal or logo, drawn by artist Dorothy Lothrop (Nichols) Wadsworth and her father Edward Nichols, himself among the founders of the Society. The seal portrays Capt. John Smith's visit to Quonahassit Harbor in 1614.

Society tote bags are of heavy canvas, medium size, and were generously donated to the Society by Goodwin Graphics of Cohasset.

Also available on special order are a number of high-grade reproductions of artworks owned by the Society. Most of the works of art in the Society's museum collections are related to Cohasset's history, many painted by local artists. Land and seascapes, an old farmhouse, sailing vessels, the first Minot's Ledge Lighthouse and an Audubon chromolithograph are among the full-size reproductions available by special order. Small proof prints of the actual reproductions may be seen at the Society's Caleb Lothrop House. Orders must be placed about three weeks in advance of time wanted to allow for photographic labratory processing.

Historical Society sales items make excellent gifts for the holiday season, and are appropriate for almost any occasion when thoughtful and significant gifts are wanted. The Bigelow Narrative History of Cohasset and the Pairpoint Minot's Light cup plates are available at Fleming's, Cohasset Center as well as directly through the Society.

For further information please call the Society at 383-6930.

Dramatic Club presents 'Picnic' Nov. 13, 14, 15

Picnic, by William Inge and directed by Joe Graham, will be presented by the Cohasset Dramatic Club Nov. 13, 14, and 15.

This important play portrays major changes in pivotal and traditional American lifestyles, and these changes are brought to focus as Inge portrays a small Kansas town at Fourth of July picnic time.

The automobile, along with the prosperity and mores of post war America, have brought to the usually tranquil town a surprising and perhaps welcome change. An abandonment of the accepted way of life is most evident when the beautiful Madge Owens (Cynthia Basler), engaged to Alan Seymour (Stephen Lee) finds her life totally disrupted by the appearance of Alan's old college fraternity brother, ex-football player and drifter, Hal Carter, played by Jim Pickel. Jim will be remembered for his appearances in numerous South Shore productions, including Best Little Whorehouse in Texas, and Cohasset Dramatic Club's production of The Grammercy Ghost. Cindy Basler's experience is the result of college dramatic education classes, including a Shakespeare workshop directed by Michael Emerson. Stephen Lee has many plays to his credit, as well as musical comedy.

Another story unfolds as Rosemary Sidney (Audrey Abrams) refuses to float peacefully down life's river as an aging spinster schoolteacher, but puts the ultimate pressure on Howard Bevans (played by Jim Leonard) to abandon his bachelor middle-age way of life to get married. Audrey Abrams has appeared in Scenes from American Life, to Cohasset Dramatic Club production, and Jim Leonard has played in 95 productions around the South Shore, including Christo's, Dunfey's Theatre, and Priscilla Beach Theatre.

Millie Owens (Jennifer Plante) is Madge's younger, smarter, plainer, and more adventurous sister. Not one to accept any part of a small-town, pre-determined way of life, this character serves as the playwright's part-time commentator. It is one of the more demanding and entertaining roles, full of sardonic humour.

The cast is rounded out by Betty Miessner as Flo Owens, the somewhat desperate mother of Madge and Millie, who sees life with the benefit of 20/20 hindsight. Nan Hamacher portrays the gentle, bright, understanding Mrs. Potts. Nina Belson plays Irma Kronkite, and Angi Walsh plays Christine Schoenwalder, both schoolteacher friends of Rosemary. Matt Kuhn, grown-up child star of Cohasset Dramatic Club, fills out the cast as Bomber, Millie's gawky, sixteen year old admirer.

Picnic's Broadway success led to a screenplay of the same name, which launched the career of the very lovely Kim Novak, as Madge.

An ode to Bali. . .

hundred yards away. For each 30 pound basket filled, the women received 25 Indonesian Rupiah (1.6 U.S. cents)! The women might fill 20 baskets on a day without too much sun. The feudal mentality of the former nobleman (Bali was a land of eight kingdoms) and the peasants plays into the hands of 'Pa-Pa,' as the central government in Djarkarta, Java is called in Bali. 'Pa-Pa' says to plant a new kind of rice and they do it. 'Pa-Pa' says to use a chemical fertilizer (instead of human and animal excrement) and it is done.

The common people are quite meek in the face of the government. It's in their nature and religion to be yielding, smiling, honest and forgiving. One young Balinese, left unpaid for a guiding service provided to a tourist, was not the least bit upset. He was quite sure his lot would better in his next life. There is also a touch of Buddhism in Balinese belief. They believe that anything bad that happens to them will, in the end, benefit them.

Unlike other islands in Southeast Asia, Bali doesn't have any problems with vandals. The people are very honest. The foreigners who visit Bali often come back again and again. Young travelers build homes in the area of Ubud, an artist's colony, for their future enjoyment. Yet, the Balinese always have something just reserved for themselves; their language. Although Indonesian is spoken by many Balinese and foreigners, the Balinese tongue is spoken by few outsiders.

Balinese take care of their dress wearing clean sarongs, shirts and head-dresses daily. The food preparation is very hygienic. The myth of 'Bali Belly' turned out to be just that.

The people of Bali don't understand why Westerners travel. To them going home to their village from the workplace is as far as one needs to wonder. The people love their island so much most never leave. Why leave Heaven?

Ode to Bali

Your ferns are settled in every valley,
Your wild flowers bless the waterways of the island,
Your villages are so clean, they look like Gardens of Eden,
Your waves of two meters break in my mind,
Come . . . Come . . . all ye fair Bostonians . . .
To Heaven on Earth . . . Bali.

Affordable housing meeting

The next major event on the South Shore Coalition calendar is a conference on affordable housing Jan. 30.

The coalition voted Oct. 22 to allow its officers to prepare a request for proposals in preparation for negotiating a contract, most likely with the MAPC and private consultants, according to Jean Christiansen, executive director for the coalition.

The organization will be forming a housing task force to work with consultants to develop equitable ways of creating affordable housing throughout the region.

A $50,000 grant from the Executive Ofiice of Communities and Development will finance the coalition's housing study.

A large portion of that money, $23,000 will go for public education, Christiansen said, including a video on the current housing situation on the South Shore.

The task force also will be responsible for establishing minimal guidelines in land use planning; the guidelines will cover environmental and design issues.

In addition to establishing a regional impact review process, Christiansen said, the task force will be responsible for developing a standardized permit approval process for coalition towns.

Finally, the task force will seek a "funding mechanism" for its affordable housing program, Christiansen said.

In other business, the coalition appointed Hull Selectman John Silva to the citizen's advisory committee of the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority.

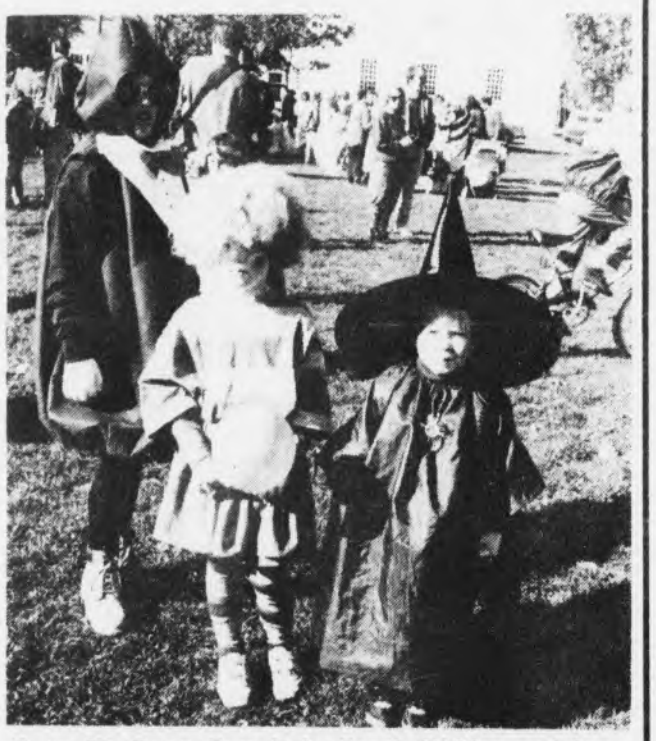
The coalition is still waiting for confirmation that it will be allowed to have a representative on that committee, but appointed Silva in anticipation of a positive response.

The coalition asked for representation at a Aug. 13 hearing on the agency's proposed Boston Harbor cleanup plan.

The coalition said at the hearing it is concerned that an outfall pipe the size of the Callahan Tunnel dumping sludge into Massachusetts Bay would pollute the coastline.

Emily Coyne and Jamie Strebel were beautifully costumed for the annual Halloween parade last weekend.

Chris Pratt portrayed the dastardly Dracula at the Community Center's Halloween celebration.



Little Danielle Fitzgerald wore very large and beautiful fairy wings as she set herself upon her mother's shoulders. Danielle will be 1 next month.

Drew Massa-Williams, 2, looking pretty monstrous, is escorted to the Halloween parade with his sister, Dawn, 7, and mother, Donna Williams.

Second Grade Brownies

The first Brownie Meeting will be on Thursday, Oct. 29 from 3-4:30 p.m. The girls will be walked from the Osgood to the Second Congregation Church after school. Please pick them up at the Church at 4:30 p.m. If you have any questions, please call Olga Nohe (1273) or Priscilla Sullivan (9792).

Cranberry Harvesting

In conjunction with their science and social studies curriculum, the second grade students experienced cranberry harvesting first hand at the Edaville Railroad in Carver, MA. The children and their teachers enjoyed a train ride through the cranberry bogs topped by a relaxing lunch in the picnic grove.

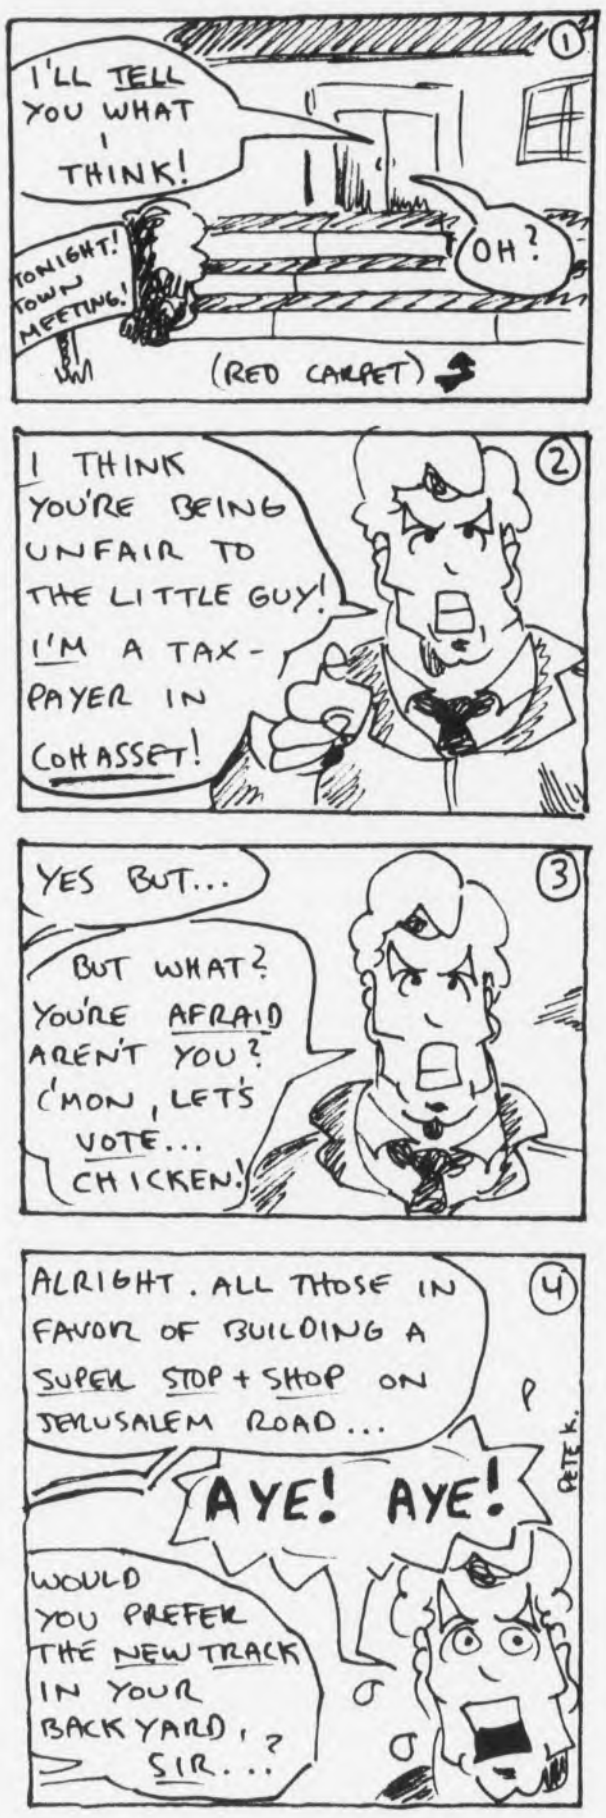
Prince birthday celebration

The Prince birthday celebration is still underway and Deer Hill School is well on its way to earning one of the promotional gifts that Prince is offering. Your support for this program has been most gratifying and we truly appreciate each and every one of the UPC (or bar) codes that you have been saving.

The deadline for all UPC codes to be received by Prince is February, 1988. We are asking that you please continue to use Prince products and save the bar codes from each package. Once again, the homeroom that collects the most number of UPC codes will be rewarded with an ice cream party in February. (The winner of the September contest was Mr. Levine's 5th grade homeroom).

To refresh your memory, the products that qualify are: Prince Sauces, Prince Pasta, Prince Cheese, Prince Dinners, Prince Dutch Maid Noodles, Goodman's Noodles.

Please save your proofs of purchase and send them to school with your children. There is a Prince collection box in each homeroom.



We thank you for your cooperation and support and remember that Wednesday is Prince Spaghetti Day!!

Deer Hill Halloween Happening

Friday, Oct. 30, all the children of the Deer Hill school will participate in the Halloween Happening. Each child should bring a simple costume which must be able to be put on and worn over their school clothing for the Halloween activities.

By Peter Kasperowicz
Special to the Mariner

It was about 8:30 when I approached the Wizard of Oz's castle. I noticed a nice rainbow in the sky (I think it was always there) when I knocked on the door, nervous at the very thought of interviewing The Great Oz.

The Big Guy, who bears a striking resemblance to Cohasset's own Matt Silvia, had at first declined my offer, but after juggling his schedule, he finally agreed to being published.

"So," I began, "what do you think of Dorothy and her friends?"

"Well they were some trouble at first," the Great One breathed, "but it was kind of nice of them to visit. I don't usually get to see many people in my line of work." Amazing. He sounded just like Matt Silvia does.

"Do you have a wife?" I dared.

"Well, no, not yet. But if I ever get back to Omaha I'll start looking."

He caught me totally off guard.

"You mean you're from Earth, too?"

"Of course."

Wow. There was my next question.

"How did you get here?"

"Well, on Earth I was a magician at a circus, and I tried a trick with balloon ascention one day. Ha! The trick backfired on me, and I was sent up into the air for days and days. I fell asleep, and when I woke up, I was landing in Oz."

"So, Oz is a real place?"

"Oh sure. Some people think that it's just a dream-world, but I know it exists. I don't know where, but it does exist."

I was stuttering in shock of this incredible knowledge.

"So, Oz is a place where people just get whisked away to by chance, huh?" I asked, only beginning to understand. "Well, who made you the ruler, and how do you keep tabs on all the people that just float in? Do you have a Border Patrol?"

Oops. I think I hit a nerve.

"Well. . . I guess since I arrived in such a dramatic fashion, the general populace thought I was magical."

"But you're not, are you?"

"Well, no, but people seem to come to me with problems, and all I have to do is make it look like I know what I'm talking about. . ."

"Oh, so you're just taking advantage of all the people to. . ."

"Come now! I wouldn't say that I'm taking advantage of anyone. No, no! I'm just. . .doing business. If you're going to be stuck on a strange world you might as well make the best of it, right?"

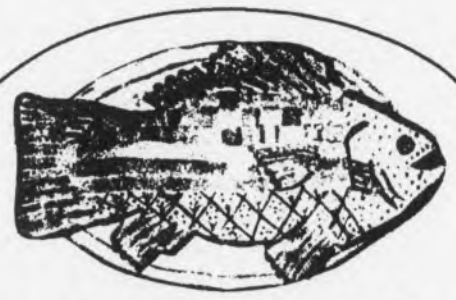
"Well, yeah." I figured that I had pushed that point enough.

"So, Great Oz, tell me about any improvements you've made to the country. Have you created a mailing service? Do you have town meetings every week? What about some kind of Food and Drug Administration?"

"No, we don't work that way here. There really hasn't been any development because everyone here is involved in a power struggle. I mean, we've got witches North, South, East, and, well, we had one in the West. I feel really bad for the Munchkins. They're really small and peaceful."

"Do you think they'll survive?"

"Oh, sure. They're being protected by the Good Witch, remember?"



"Oh, yeah. Well, one last question: do you plan to retire soon?"

"Again, if I could get back to Omaha, I would. I'm working on a new way to get back, but I'd rather not reveal any secrets. If you really want to know, you should see the show on December 4th - 6th at Cohasset High School."

In a puff of smoke he was gone, and I found myself back on Earth. Geez, he really did look like Matt Silvia...

The crowd was enthusiastic and noisy during last Friday's Spirit Week rally at CHS.

Weddings/Engagements

Mr. & Mrs. Stephen Keating

Chase-Keating

Cynthia Anne Chase and Stephen James Keating were married at Bethany Congregational Church in Foxboro on July 11, 1987.

Rev. R. Jack Whitehead and Father John Keohane of Cohasset officiated at the double ring ceremony.

Carl Chase of Morris Plains, NJ, played the processional and recessional on the trumpet accompanied by organist, T. Michael Smith. Ellen Sharpe of Hudson, NY sang several selections accompanied by Susan Schaeffer of Rochester, NY. on the piano.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Chase of Foxboro. She teaches music at Wells Elementary Schools in Wells, ME.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. T. Gerard Keating of Cohasset. He is a sales engineer for U.S. Amada, Ltd.

The bride was accompanied by her father and attended by her sister, Susan Chase of Tulsa, OK as her maid of honor. Her bridesmaids were Ann Myron of Foxboro, Terry Saulsgiver of Westport, NY, and Denise Fournier of Concord, NH. The attendants wore tea length gowns of romance blue lace.

The groom was attended by his brother, Christopher Keating, of Duxbury as his best man. The ushers were his brothers: Laurence Keating of Hull, Brian Keating of Marshfield and Thomas Keating of Duxbury.

The bride wore a white nylon organza gown overlaid with Chantilly lace. It was styled with a Victorian neckline, long fitted sleeves and a cathedral train. She carried a cascading bouquet of white roses, stephanotis and ivy.

A reception was held at Theodore's Landing in Plainville. The couple will reside in York, ME.

MacPherson-Muir

Following their August 1 wedding, Mr. and Mrs. Craig Davidson Muir are now living in Cohasset.

Mrs. Muir is the former Jean Madalyn MacPherson. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Paul MacPherson of Westwood and Palm Beach, Fla.

Mr. Muir is the son of Anne Davidson Muir of Weymouth and the late George E. Muir II.

The couple was married at St. John's Episcopal Church in Westwood. Rev. Michael Corrigan officiated at the ceremony. The bride was given in marriage by her parents.

Matron of honor was the bride's sister, Laurie MacPherson Chalmers of Bridgton, Maine. Bridesmaids included Heather Muir of Weymouth, sister of the bridegroom, Tammi Rodman of Brookline, Pia Centenari Leonard of Edgartown, and Shawni Littlehale of Norwell.

George Muir III of Cohasset, brother of the bridegroom, served as best man. Ushers included Fraser Cameron of Cohasset, Richard Knapp of Hingham, Vincent Nardo of Cohasset, and Wayne Harrington of Scituate.

The bride is a graduate of Dana Hall in Wellesley and the University of New Hampshire. She earned an MPA from Suffolk University, and is currently a consultant with the Department of Personnel Administration in Boston.

Mr. Muir is a graduate of Cohasset High School. He earned a BS/BA and an MBA degree from Boston University, and is presently employed at Bear Stearns in Boston.

After a wedding reception at the Ritz Carlton, the couple traveled to Bermuda. They are now living in Cohasset.

Jean Madalyn MacPherson.

Quinn-Londergan

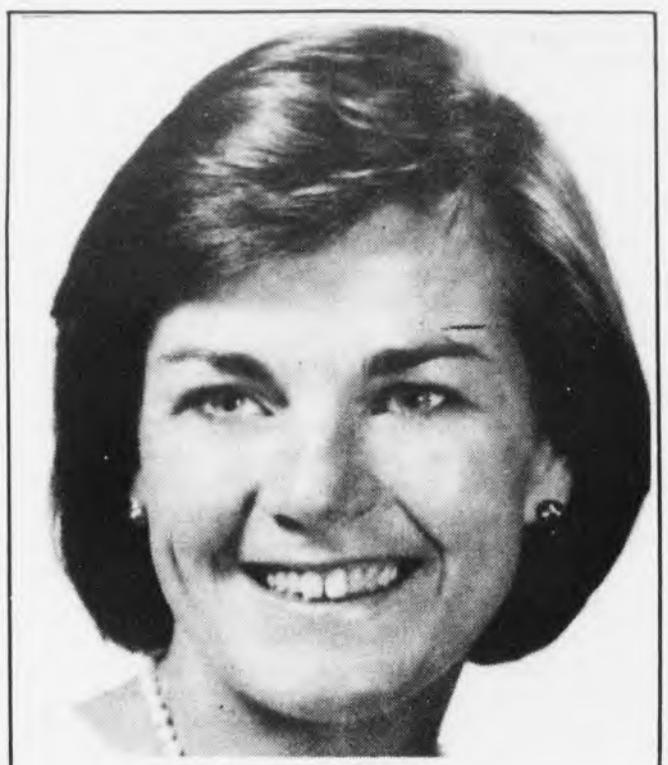
Mr. and Mrs. Michael Joseph Londergan were married Oct. 9 in West Hartford, Conn.

Mrs. Londergan is the former Mary Margaret Quinn of Watertown. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Quinn of West Hartford, Conn.

Mr. Londergan is the son of Mrs. Robert Londergan of Cohasset.

They were married at a Mass celebrated by Rev. O'Keefe in St. Mark's Church. The bride was given in marriage by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Quinn.

The maid of honor was Mrs. Londergan's sister, Susan A. Quinn of West Hartford, Conn. Bridesmaids included her sisters, Colleen Quinn of West Hartford, Conn., and Moria E. Londergan of Evanston, Ill.



The best man was R. David Londergan of Cohasset, brother of the bridegroom. Ushers included Michael Fichtner of Cohasset, Robert Drago of Cohasset, John Farnan of Pittsburgh, Pa., Chris Cowan of Cohasset and David Read of Watertown.

After a reception at the Indian Hill Country Club, the couple traveled to Ireland for their wedding trip.

Mrs. Londergan graduated from Northwest College High School, and from St. Anselm's College in 1984. She is currently a marketing representative for the Lahey Clinic of Blue Cross/Blue Shield of Massachusetts.

Mr. Londergan graduated from Cohasset High School in 1978 and the University of Notre Dame in 1982. He also graduated from Boston College Graduate School of Management in May, 1987 and is now a senior financial operations analyst for Liberty Mutual Insurance Group.

The couple are living in Watertown.

Amy Cifrino

Cifrino-Rooney

Mr. and Mrs. James P. Cifrino of Cohasset announce the engagement of their daughter, Amy Cifrino, to William Anthony Rooney, son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis C. Rooney, Jr. of Greenwich, CT.

Miss Cifrino, a graduate of Dana Hall School and the University of Vermont, is employed by the marketing and advertising services department of Soft Care Apparel, Inc., manufacturers of Curity® baby products. Her father is president of Superior Realty in Boston. The future bride is a granddaughter of the late Paul Cifrino of Dorchester, MA, founder of Supreme Markets, and the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas M. Garvey of Dorchester.

Mr. Rooney, co-owner and vice-president/treasurer of Urban Tropical Plants, Inc., an interior landscaping firm in Boston, is a graduate of the Brunswick School and St. Michael's College. His father is chairman of the executive committee of the Melville Corporation in Harrison, NY, of which he was formerly chairman and chief executive officer. He is a grandson of Ray W. Heffernan of Rye, NY, founder of the H.H. Brown Shoe Company, of Mrs. Dale Hopkins of Sarasota, Fla. and of the late Francis C. Rooney, Sr., chairman of the Quabaug Rubber Company in North Brookfield, MA.

An April wedding is being planned.

Hayden-Canavan

Mr. and Mrs. Gerard Hayden announce the engagement of his daughter, Beverly A. Hayden to David S. Canavan of Newton. They will be married January 2, 1988.

Miss Hayden is the daughter of Gerard M. Hayden of Newton Centre, and Lauretta M. Hayden of Hingham.

Mr. Canavan is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Canavan of Wayland.

Miss Hayden graduated from Scituate High School and Boston College. She is now attending Boston College Graduate School of Education, and is manager of the Boston College Small Business Development Center.

Mr. Canavan is a graduate of Wayland High School and Boston College. He is sales manager at Digital Equipment Corp. in Providence, R.I.

The long pass kills Cohasset's undefeated season

By Bill Modestino
Special to the Mariner

Norwell won the battle of the undefeated league teams on something you least expect—the pass.

As a result, the Norwell Clippers threw three touchdown passes, two by quarterback David Kaslauskas and a halfback-option pass by Corey MacDonald, en route to a 34-7 South Shore Small Schools League victory over Cohasset last Saturday.

With the victory, Norwell improves to 6-0 overall, finds themselves atop of the league standings alone, and becomes the only team unbeaten in the league.

On Homecoming Day at Cohasset, the Skippers surprised everyone in attendance, taking the opening kickoff and driving 78 yards to the Norwell 2 before a Clippers' interception killed the drive.

The key plays in the unsuccessful drive were the running of Peter Sandblom, who was moved from quarterback to halfback. On the second play of drive, he ran 22 yards and on a third-down and 18 from Cohasset's 38, he picked up 32 yards. A 12-yard run moved the ball inside Norwell's 10, which allowed the Clippers to come up with the interception.

With 24 seconds remaining in the first period, Kaslauskas hooked up with split-end Peter Ferraro, streaking down the left sidelines, on a 70-yard touchdown bomb. Todd Chicko ran the conversion, giving the Clippers a 8-0 lead.

On Norwell's next possession, they fumbled, recovered by Skipper's co-captain Adam Whitman, at the Cohasset 19.

Cohasset (3-3) capitalized on the fumble recovery when Sandblom scored on a one-yard plunge with 21 seconds left in the first half. The conversion run by Sandblom was nullified on a holding call and the

Hingham High sports

Skippers settled for a Jim Maguire kick to make it 8-7.

The Clippers dominated the entire second half with Kaslauskas hitting co-captain Bryan Frunkel on a 20-yard scoring pass, then finding Ferraro for the conversion, 16-7, with 57 seconds left in third.

On the ensuing series, Cohasset faced a fourth-down and 18 and would have to punt into a strong wind deep into their own territory when Norwell's head coach Dave Walsh called a timeout.

Simultaneously, a loud moan was heard from the Norwell bleachers in disagreement with Walsh's decision.

However, the skepticism dissipated when Kaslauskas pitched the ball to MacDonald, who stopped to fire a 24-yard scoring pass to co-captain fullback Eric Davies, looking like a wide receiver instead of his familiar position, with six seconds left in third.

"I think we showed everyone that we are a passing team as well," shouted Walsh, as he walked off the field, wearing the imaginary genius cap.

Davies (19 carries, 80 yards) scored his second touchdown early in the final period on a seven-yard run over left tackle, and Robert Miner scored Norwell's final touchdown from 12 yards out.

"Our kids played excellent defense against the run, but we really got burned on those two long passes," said coach Phil Pisano of Cohasset.

Sandblom finished with 126 yards on 17 carries behind linemates Mike Meers, Glen Froio, Chris Froio, Whitman and Woody Carroll. Junior Mark Corkery took over the quarterback duties, while Matt Maloney led Cohasset with 11 tackles.

MacDonald led Norwell in rushing with 105 yards on 17 carries. Kaslauskas ended up with four completions out of eight attempts for 130 passing yards.

We were so close to victory

By Peter Kasperowicz
Mariner Correspondent

They were so close. Close enough to taste it. As far as anyone can remember, Cohasset has never in its history beaten Duxbury in a soccer game. Everyone knows that. I think they even print it in some of Cohasset's history texts.

The team was ready to re-write those books last Tuesday.

"We're a strong team this year; we have to beat them this Tuesday, or it might be a long time before we get a better chance."

Notice that there is no name given after that quote. That's because everyone said it, or at least thought it.

It was suddenly Tuesday, and in the first ten minutes of the game, Todd Fitzpatrick kicked the ball to Jimmy Reidy, who then kicked it in Duxbury's net. Cohasset was ahead 1-0, and after a quick celebration, the team worked to keep that lead.

However, with three minutes left in the half, Duxbury scored on an indirect kick. The score was 1-1, but Cohasset was undaunted.

"Alright you guys," coach Dan Magner started. "Keep the pressure up. This team is not used to being scored on, and when you did score, their whole backfield just panicked. I think they're afraid because their goalie is shaky."

Enough suspense. Although both teams would have loved to leave the field victorious, neither did. The game ended in a tie, 1-1, although that might have changed had Cohasset goalie Joel Reidy not made an incredible save towards the end. It easily ranked as the most exciting game of the year so far, although Cohasset's next game was an exact opposite.

Two days later, Cohasset found themselves on the same field against Hull. Not much can be said. Cohasset won 15-1 after out-playing Hull for 80 minutes. Scorers were David Shultz with four, Matt Beggan and Todd Fitzpatrick with three each, Ian Smart with two, and Jason Cameron, Jay Staunton and Jimmy Reidy with one each. As of now Cohasset is

McKenna named 'Athlete of the Week'

The Manhattanville College Athletic Department has announced Bill McKenna (Cohasset, MA) as their "Athlete of the Week" for Oct. 20-26.

The sophomore goalkeeper led the Manhattanville College Soccer team to a 1-1 tie vs. Dominican College. The Valiants now 6-5-2 on the season, relied on McKenna's 12 saves vs. the top-rated Dominican (8-2), to keep the squad's record one game over .500.

McKenna, through 13 games, has 3 shutouts to his credit, while he has allowed just under two goals per contest. McKenna's statistics have earned him a #3 ranking among goalkeepers in the Metropolitan Suburban Soccer Conference.

"This was by far his best performance in two years," stated Valiant's head coach Paul Moyer. "He has developed into a top level goalkeeper. Our defensive backs can bring the ball out of the backfield with more confidence knowing Bill is doing such an outstanding job in the nets," the second-year coach added.

The Cohasset, MA native attended Cohasset High School where he played soccer for 4 years. He was a two-year all-star, MVP, and Best Defensive Player. His 20 career shutouts during his 2-year stint at the varsity level (in H.S.) is a school record. McKenna has played both soccer and lacrosse at Manhattanville.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William McKenna.

Cohasset suffers season's first loss. . .

Cohasset lost to Norwell at last Saturday's Homecoming game by a score of 34-7. The game was close during the first half, and by halftime the score was a near-even 8-7. A frustrated Adam Whitman explained Norwell's second half explosion.

"We could stop their running, but not their passing. Some had really great games, like Matt Maloney, Glen Froio, and Pete Sandblom, but the team wasn't there."

Perhaps the high point of the game was the crowning of the Homecoming King Jay Marsac and Queen Sarah Hamilton. It was great; Sarah and the three other finalists, Kerry Kirkendall, Liz O'Leary, and Jen McAuliffe, were all dressed up and paraded around the field in neat old cars, and everyone was cheering and happy, and. . .oh, yeah. The game.

Needless to say, Norwell outscored Cohasset 26-0 in the second half.

"There's not much to say. We really took ourselves out of it after they scored on us the second time," Whitman said.

Cohasset will play Hanover next Saturday.

Gallery 360 associates honored

Tom Hamilton, vice-president and marketing director for Gallery 360, congratulated Anne Moore and Ann Courtney for their efforts in a recent sale representing the company's largest real estate transaction in 1987.

Courtney is a sales associate at the Gallery 360 office in Cohasset and Moore is a sales associate at the Gallery 360 Hull office.

Conway to talk to bankers

The Massachusetts League of Community Banks will have Jack Conway of Cohasset as their featured speaker at their banquet meeting set for Oct. 28 at the Marriott Hotel, Newton.

Conway's subject will be "The Pulse of the Real Estate Market" and he will concern his remarks to residential trends in jobs and financing.

Conway was the wrap up speaker at the recent 23rd annual Greater Boston Real Estate Board Mortgage Financing Seminar.

He is chairman of the Jack Conway Company as well as the Northern Mortgage Company. Conway is also a member of the board of the Cooperative Central Bank.

INTRODUCING

Dr. Ronald E. Wuotila Chiropractor

Please allow me to introduce myself to the town of Hanover and it's surrounding communities. I am originally from the South Shore area and graduated from Palmer College of Chiropractic in Davenport, Iowa. I have received extensive pre and post graduate training at the Gonstead Clinic of chiropractic in Mount Horeb, Wisconsin which specializes in the treatment and care of patients with structural problems of the spine. My practical experience includes six years of clinical work treating patients for various spinal related conditions utilizing X-ray analysis and a specific adjusting technique.

Being a licensed Chiropractor in the state of Massachusetts, I did an extensive demographic study of the South Shore region and decided the town of Hanover was centrally located to service patients from many communities. My new office is conveniently located on Route 53, one and one half miles south of the Hanover Mall exit 13. To aquaint you with our newly opened office and all that Chiropractic care has to offer, my staff and I would like to provide to you or another family member, a spinal examination absolutely FREE. This examination (a $35.00 value) will include an orthopedic test, neurological test, blood pressure check, spinal alignment check, examination for restricted or excess motion in the spine, muscle strengthness test, and a private consultation with the Doctor to discuss the results.

First Parish news

Parish News:

Edward J. McMenimon and Marjorie L. Shafer were married at the Meeting House Oct. 17

Semi-annual Meeting of the Parish:

Treasurer Ken Wilcox reported final figures for the 1986-87 fiscal year showing $97,018 in revenues and $96,262 in expenses which provided a surplus of $756. There was a shortfall of over $6,000 in pledge income but several fortunate "windfalls" were received which saved the day. So far pledges for the 1987-88 fiscal year are $13,000 under budget, so Ken emphasized that we must not let the positive results of last year lull us to sleep. Additional pledges are needed as well as the fulfillment of pledges made to the Meeting House Campaign if our excellent financial position is to be maintained. The meeting accepted the Treasurer's report with a resounding vote of thanks to Ken for his excellent and dedicated work in behalf of the First Parish.

VILLAGE FAIR NEWS: Children's Table

As Chairperson of the Children's Table, I am searching for new ways our church can provided items for this table. In an era or working women and over-committed families, we have to find alternatives if our participation in the fair is to continue. My goals are: 1.) For many people to provide a few items instead of a few people providing a mass of items. In our church this means convincing many more men to participate. 2.) Be creative. We could use any item an adult would buy for a child. Besides traditional craft and woodworking items, please consider homemade candy, fancy iced cookies, gingerbread houses. If your children have outgrown a table and chair set or rocker that needs refinishing, consider that type of contribution. Perhaps you have hats, clothing or jewelry that could be used for dress-up. Nurses, waitresses, postman, policeman, soldier and fancy dresses are all outfits that would delight a child.

There are a few of my ideas. Let me hear yours.

Braintree is Coalition member

Braintree is now a part of the South Shore Coalition. By unanimous vote, the town was approved as a provisional member Oct. 22.

Officials from the town attended a Sept. 17 meeting, at which the coalition agreed to back Braintree, Weymouth and Quincy in their opposition to a proposed Clean Harbors incinerator in Braintree.

Following that action, Braintree officially asked to join the coalition. It is the first town to apply for membership since the organization formed two years ago.

The South Shore Coalition is a political body representing the interests of its 10 full members including: Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Norwell, Rockland, Scituate and Weymouth.

Representatives of those towns come together at coalition meetings to address problems on a regional basis.

As a provisional member, Braintree representatives will sit at the table and participate in coalition discussions, but will not vote.

"We decided to follow the example of Metrowest, which had Marlborough sit at the table for a year or so," said Chairman Janet O'Brien, Hanover selectman.

"The decision as to whether Braintree will become a full member will be mutual," she noted. "There will be a vote by the coalition to see if Braintree will be accepted.

"This will also give them time to decide whether they feel comfortable sitting here."

PSO holiday book fair

The PSO of the Cohasset Joseph Osgood School (K-3) is sponsoring its Annual Holiday Book Fair to be held in the Osgood Library on Nov. 4,5, and 6. The Book Fair hours will be 9-3 on Wednesday Nov. 4; 9 - 7, Thursday, Nov. 5; and 9 - 3 Friday, Nov. 6.

This is an excellent opportunity for children to buy books for themselves as well as getting an early start on Christmas shopping for siblings and friends. There are extended hours until 7 p.m. on Thursday, Nov. 5 for the convenience of the interested parents.

Recreation Department offers ski trip

The Cohasset Recreation Department's first ski trip will be Sunday, Dec. 13, to Loon Mt. This first, early bird trip will be done in conjunction with the Massachusetts Ski Club.

The cost for this trip is $33 per person, and $35 per person for the beginner package which includes transportation, novice slopes lift ticket, lesson, equipment rentals.

For the $33 non-beginner package you are provided with transportation and full-mountain, (except gondola) lift ticket. Rentals for non-beginners are $10. You should bring your rental money with you the day of the trip, in cash.

This trip is ideal for those who have never skied before. For seasoned skiers, you will be provided the opportunity to get an early start on the ski season.

Because this trip is being conducted through the Mass. Ski Club, early registration will be required. Arrangements and payments must be made by Friday, Nov. 13.

To register, you may call the Recreation Department office, at 383-6791. However, payment is the confirmation of your reservations, and that must be payed at the recreation office, first floor at town hall between 2:30 and 4:30 p.m., Mondays through Thursdays before Thursday, Nov. 12.

The Recreation Department maintains waiting lists for all trips. If you find that after you have registered, you will be unable to go, let us know as soon as possible and we will fill your spot and return your payment.

Buses are scheduled to leave town hall at 5:30 a.m. Therefore, you should report to the Recreation office by 5:15 a.m. We are scheduled to return to Town Hall at 7:30 p.m. Parents are asked to be at the Town Hall by 7:15 p.m. because exact arrival is difficult to predict.

AEROBIC EXERCISE HOLIDAY SPECIAL

The Cohasset Recreation Department will sponsor a six-week aerobics class to be taught by Sandra Wiggins. There will be a three evenings per week option for this six-week session which will end Dec. 17, before the holiday's.

Beginning on Tuesday evening, Nov. 10, classes will meet Tuesday evening from 5 to 6 p.m.; Wednesday evening from 6 to 7 p.m. and Thursday evening from 5 to 6 p.m. Fees are based on the number of evenings you wish to attend.

The fee for three classes per week for six weeks is $36. If you want to take two classes a week, the fee will be $24 for six weeks; and one class for six weeks is $12. Checks should be payable to the "Town of Cohasset" and may be brought to your first class.

This class schedule is designed to get you in shape for the holiday's. To register, you may see Sandy at the first class you may wish to attend beginning the week of Tuesday, Nov. 10.

DOG OBEDIENCE CLASSES

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations for beginner and intermediate dog training classes to be taught by Laurie Cleveland.

Clases will be held Wednesday evenings at the GAR Hall in Scituate, beginning Nov. 4.

Beginner classes will be from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., and the intermediate/advanced class will be from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. on Wednesday evenings.

The fee for the eight-week program will be $25. Checks, made payable to the Town of Cohasset, may be brought to the first class Wednesday, Nov. 4. Dogs should be a minimum of three months of age.

The purpose of beginner classes will be to teach novice pet owners basic obedience and responsible pet ownership. Subjects to be covered are proper use of voice corrections, stay commands, getting the dog to come, heel, etc. Helpful hints on ownership and responsibility will also be included.

The training will include those exercises beneficial to the pet owner as well as those thinking about eventually showing their dogs in obedience. The intermediate/advanced class is designed for dogs that have completed the Recreation Department Beginner class.

For the classes, owners are required to have their dogs equipped with a humane choke chain. The proper size of the chain is determined by measuring the dog's neck and adding 4 inches. ABSOLUTELY NO SPIKE COLLARS ALLOWED!! It is also strongly suggested that the handlers wear comfortable shoes and clothes for this session. For all classes: the fee is $25. per dog for the eight-week, one-hour per week program.

To register, please call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 383-6791, classes are limited in size, non-residents will be accepted on a space available basis.

Second Congregational Church

Minister: Gary A. Rits, Office Phone: 383-0345; Secretary: Muriel Wheelwright, Parsonage Phone: 383-1422; Office Hours: Monday through Friday 9 - noon.
"THE UPPER ROOM" and "Alive Now" devotional magazines for November/December are available in Bates Hall. Please pick one up for yourself or a friend and leave a small donation to help defray the cost.
NEED HELP RAKING LEAVES or with yard cleanup? Especially for those who have no one to work around the yard, the Junior High Youth Group will be offering their services ("Love in Action") on Sunday, Nov. 15 from 1-3 p.m. Please call the church office if you have a need for this outreach ministry.
VILLAGE FAIR NEWS: Things are moving along smoothly towards our fair date of December 5. The Central Committee has met with the chairpersons of each of the tables to determine where the workers and materials are needed. Some requests are: Children's Activities – workers; Plant table – workers.
We are still looking for someone from our church to coordinate the selling of raffle tickets within our congregation. If you can help us in this capacity, please let us know.
Some items are needed by various tables such as:
1. bags of candy – save your leftover Halloween candy or buy an extra bag
2. felt – all colors
3. fabric – especially Christmas
4. plain stationery
5. potpourri
6. plain headbands
7. decorative bells
8. yarn

Workshops are being held by Anna Abbruzzese, Chairperson of the Children's Table, on Tuesdays at St. Anthony's Rectory at 7:00 p.m. Bring scissors. Please bring a friend.

Bargain Bazaar needs items. If you have any great "junk," please bring it to the basement of St. Anthony's Rectory from 10-2 any day Monday through Saturday. No clothes please.

Book table – Books may be donated by dropping them off at St. Anthony's Rectory any day from 9-5.

Boutique – St. Stephen's, who are chairing the boutique Table, are requesting any pieces of art work (drawings, paintings, etc.) to be donated to the table. They will be having an artist's corner this year. Also small pieces of furniture such as stools or nightstands that could be refinished. Anyone willing to refinish a small piece, please let us know.

In the next couple of weeks, we will be calling everyone in our congregation to determine how you would like to contribute to the fair. Let's have 100% participation. Everyone can contribute in one capacity or another. Linda Campbell 383-0021, Debbie Anderson 383-6345.

St. Anthony's Parish

Cliff Norris of Clean Harbors vacuums oil from Lily Pond after Sunday's spill into the water supply. (Alan Chapman)

Reservoir oil spill cleaned up; officials say tap water is safe

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Just days after diesel oil spilled into the town's reservoir, officials are assuring residents it is safe to drink the water.

Although water department officials are unsure of how much oil leaked into Lily Pond last Sunday, Nov.1, they are "very confident there are no problems" with the water, according to Supt. Ben Curley.

By Tuesday, representatives of Clean Harbors, the firm called in to assist with the cleanup, said the source had been located and the leak was contained. Diesel oil had leaked from a 500-gallon storage tank in the old pump house at Lily Pond. According to Robert Connelly of Clean Harbors, the tank leaked an undetermined amount of oil which seeped into the foundation of the pump house, into the soil and finally to the water.

A trench was dug around the perimeter of the red building which would prohibit any remaining seepage into the soil. "The heaviest concentration of the oil was in the area around the red house," Connelly stated. "We have managed to isolate the leak now, although it's obvious the oil had been migrating from there for quite a while."

Although neighbors reported having smelled or seen a greasy sheen along the edge of Lily Pond for several days, it wasn't until 4 p.m. Nov. 1, when town officials were notified. A fisherman called Supt. Curley, who immediately notified the fire department. Local officials called in the state Department of Quality Engineering (DEQE). Clean Harbors, a Braintree firm which deals in the correction of environmental and hazardous spills, was hired to direct the cleanup procedure.

By Tuesday evening, Connelly said the spill had been contained, and residents should have no qualms about drinking their tap water. "I wouldn't be afraid to drink Cohasset water at all," he said. "We are treating this problem very sensitively. It's not like this was an oil spill on some remote river. Every last drop in Lily Pond has to be more than clean, and it will be."

People shouldn't be afraid to drink their water. They are drawing good, clean water and it's being monitored daily.

Robert Connelly,
Clean Harbors

Connelly refused to estimate how much the cleanup will cost the town, but noted, "it won't be cheap."

Supt. Curley explained that the tank was part of the old pumping station at Lily Pond. "It probably hasn't been used for 50 years," he said. Curley said the tank was empty except for an unknown amount of thick sludge which had settled at the bottom.

"The tank was scheduled to be taken out of there," Curley said, admitting it was something that was not given budget priority. The water department intended to have the tank cut up into smaller pieces for removal from the small wood-frame building. The pieces would be cleaned before being brought to the town's landfill. A firm such as Clean Harbors would be responsible for transporting the tank pieces from the landfill and diposing of them.

The building also contained a few water department meters and some spare equipment. Supt. Curley said department employees go into the shed-type building

South Shore Voke rep. says 'let's move on'

David Chittim, Cohasset's representative to the South Shore Vocational Technical High School school committee, wanted to set a firm course for the future of the school.

"The meeting was called last week to discuss the future of the school. Personnel is of particular interest to me. My main point was that we had been in limbo since we decided not to renew Supt. Clifford Easton's contract. We had never moved on from there," he said, explaining why he offered the motion to retain Easton despite previous votes not to retain him.

The superintendent, Chittim stated, has brought continuity to the vocational high school. "His credentials and confidence are two key things he has brought to this school," he noted.

"I hope now this is the end of it," he added. "I'd like to get onto some other areas. Four months ago we voted not to extend his contract. Nothing happened since then, no search for a replacement. Although a couple of committee members feel strongly about not renewing his contract, I hope this is the end. We will continue to evaluate him annually, and we can discuss the situation again at that time."

Easton's tenure as superintendent has been in question ever since June when the committee voted not to renew his contract next spring, despite a generally favorable evaluation. A motion to reconsider that decision was defeated in July. Last Wednesday over protests from Chairman Robert Molla (Norwell) and Walter Easttey (Abington), Easton's supporters motioned to offer the one-year contract beginning July 1, 1988.

The voting last week found members holding to their previous positions; the difference was that Breida McDonough (Scituate), was no longer on the committee. Unlike McDonough, Stephen Farquahar, Scituate's new representative, voted to offer Easton the contract.

John Doyle (Rockland), Molla and Easttey voted against the motion. Farquahar, Dennis Blackwell

Protester pushes to make point

By Bob Tis
Mariner staff

David Bigley operates under an old American Indian philosophy that holds that every decision that you make you should consider the seventh generation unborn.

Bigley caught the eye of the New England media last week when he was arrested for trespassing along with six other Cohasset residents while protesting the illegal opening of Cohasset Heights Landfill.

"We knew from our experience that Barry would ignore the closure order," said Bigley in an interview at his home this week. "We also knew from past experience that the board of health were not going to do anything to enforce their closure. This was a good oppurtunity for us to stand in a positive position."

"It was not a random day," continued Bigley. "This was an oppurtunity to make our point to people in town. The health board needed an extra push. The thing that I think is signifficant is that Dr. Godzik, the chairman of the health board. never showed up at the dump on Monday."

"One thing that is frustrating and annoying to me is that while we were blocking the refuse trucks, selectmen Jim Gallagher and the police chief were telling all of us that the town was in court at that very moment trying to get an injunction. Someone was lying."

According to Bigley the town did not take the issue to court until later that week.

"I have dealt with Mr. Gallager and Chief Kealy before and I think that they are straight shooters. I don't think that they would make it up. But we almost left at that point. We almost said, well that is enough for us. It is still very aggravating."

Bigley is not a stranger to controversy.

"I have been arrested before, but all for things that I believe in," said Bigley.

Presently Bigley is in charge of direct fundraising in the northeast part of the country for Greenpeace. Bigley has been with Greenpeace for ten years and has worked coordinating action on the Rainbow Warrior, the Greenpeace ship that roams international waters trying to stop inhumanities.

"The town is fortunate that it doesn't have to import

Children plead for better fields

Hundreds of school children are asking the town to reconsider its refusal to improve the athletic fields.

Petitions have been circulated throughout the three schools, requesting that the town rethink its vote at last week's special town meeting. At that time, a proposal to renovate Lillard Field was defeated because a two-thirds majority failed to approve the project.

The Milliken Field Improvement Committee was scheduled to discuss their future at a meeting this week. At that session, the members were scheduled to decide whether to pursue the project once again at the April annual town meeting.

Chairman Ken Ekberg said the childrens' letters "were comforting, but politically I'm not sure how they will be viewed."

Ekberg surmised that the special town meeting article was defeated as a combination

Cheese and butter distribution

Government Surplus Cheese and Butter will be distributed by the Social Service League of Cohasset in NOVEMBER, to Cohasset residents.

Recipients are eligible if they participate in one of the following means tested programs: AFDC, Welfare, WIC, Fuel Assistance, Food Stamps, Medicaid, Supplemental Security Income, Head Start or Veteran's Aid.

If they do not participate in any of the above programs, they may self declare that they are income eligible under the current Fuel Assistance guidelines, (1 person=$8,250; for 2 = $11,000; for 3 = $13,950; for 4 = $16,800; for 5 = $19,650; for 6 = $22,500; for 7 = $25,350.)

If you qualify, please call the League office (8:30 a.m. to 3:00 p.m.) to request the food items and arrange for pick up. Tel.: 383-0821 or 383-0771. Please call before Nov. 15.

School committee news

The School committee set the date of Nov. 30 for a education forum at this Monday's meeting.

"This is something new," said superintendent Steve Hart. The purpose of the gathering will be to generate ideas and to talk about existing policies.

"We can deal with whatever people might be interested in," said Hart.

The program will take place in the cafeteria. Members of the teaching staff will be present.

In other business the school committee approved a request from Sharon Cermak an associate proffesor at Boston University to perform tests on students. Cermak is an occupational therapist and with parental permission will test student's motor skills.

The committee also unanimously accepted $3,180 in the form of a drug education grant. A major part of the money from the Govenor's alliance against drugs will fund an outside consultant that will work with parents and students.

"This is a terrific example of the impact of the P.S.O," said Hart.

The committee also approved the request for a transfer of an additional $3,265 for school buses. According to Hart the school department found it necessary to purchase one van with a chair lift for wheel chair access. The committee also approved a transfer of $1,265 for the testing of underground storage tanks.

Housing official visits

A state housing official told the town's fair housing committee last week that a fair housing partnership should be established in Cohasset, with a goal toward developing scattered affordable housing sites throughout the town.

As part of that procedure, the town should apply for a state grant to finance a consultant who would negotiate with developers to construct units of affordable housing within their plans.

Peter Gagliari, state director of technical assistance for affordable housing, told the fair housing members that those housing plans supported by the town have the best chance of obtaining state financing. The town could offer town-owned land to developers, in return for a certain number of affordable units within that development, he said.

Gagliarti urged the town to form a housing partnership, a committee which would be a catalyst for the development of affordable housing here. They would be the people who would propose these developments and would work alongside developers to bring affordable units into the town.

He noted that as soon as town officials sign the affordable housing agreement with the state, Cohasset will once again be eligible for state financial assistance, including a grant for the housing consultant.

Housing agreement signed

Selectmen this week signed the third version of an affordable housing agreement with the state Executive Office of Communities and Development (EOCD).

There will be one further change in the document which had already been signed by the planning board, according to Executive Secretary Donald Andrew. Within the agreement, he said, selectmen must report periodically on the progress of the housing authority's Chapter 705 housing grant application. Although it originally was thought that the housing authority had to report directly to selectmen, Andrew said it was clarified that he would solicite an update from the authority. "It's my responsibility to request the updates," Andrew explained.

There will also be a change in the reporting dates, Andrew explained, because of the delay in signing the contract. Selectman Martha Gjesteby also requested that it be made explicite in the agreement that some of the town-owned land listed as possible housing sites are under the control of certain town departments and they may need the land for other uses.

The board then signed the document which will be brought once again to the planning board for its signature, and to the housing authority for its approval.

Cleanup efforts praised

Selectmen Chairman Rocco Laugelle praised the efforts of town board members and firefighters involved in the response to an oil spill at Lily Pond.

"I had a meeting with the board of health, the fire department, the water commissioners and Clean Harbors, and I want to say that all departments worked well together," he said Monday night. "They found the problem and went right at it - they went all out. Capt. (Mark) Trask did a great job."

Selectman Clifford Mitman questioned what damage was done by the spill, and wondered who is responsible to insure this does not reoccurr.

Selectman Laugelle answered that Clean Harbors would be at the site until the cleanup is completed. "It's going to be expensive, since the town will have to pay for it." He also noted that selectmen will receive a full report "on what the problem was and how it happened. Until then, we don't know ."

political/economic issue. "Everyone agreed we need to do something about the fields. We thought this plan was a good one - the advisory committee and the capital budget committee did not agree."

Regarding the opposition voiced by some members of the recreation commission, he noted, "we have letters dating from two years ago, saying they were in favor of the project. All our meetings have been open to the public and posted. They were welcome to attend to voice any concerns they had and we would have been happy to work with them. But we thought we had their initial support."

The committee spent $35,000 in architectural plans for the project. "Was it wasted money?" he asked. "We've got plans and we got the bids. That was what the town told us to do."

The committee chairman said those bids are valid for 30 working days after they are accepted. Given the wide range of bids submitted to the committee, Ekberg stated, "I can't imagine we will be able to hold onto the low bid for six months. The next guy was $80,000 higher - so I can't imagine the low bidder will stay at that price because we're such a great town. It looks like we'll have to go out to bid again.

"But as far as April is concerned, I think we'll be in a worse fiscal position than we were last week. We have just accrued another $1.1 million in debt and I'll bet the bid prices we get later won't be half as good as we received this time," he added.

Ekberg said the goal of the appointed committee was to achieve a quality plan for the renovation of the town's athletic fields. "There could be questions, such as do we need a fence - but what about the problem of vehicles getting onto the field? How about no water - sure, if you want dead grass. How about no drainage - sure, if you want the field to look like Milliken does now. And we could have a dirt access road, rather than paved. Putting a track in later is foolhardy if you have to dig up the field later to put it in. There are a lot of things we could have done to keep the costs way down. But they didn't make sense, or we would end up with the same situation we have right now," he explained.

Committee member Clark Chatterton said he was disappointed, but last week's vote, "was just one of those things.

"I partly blame myself because I don't think we explained everything we needed to explain to the public," he added. "Even though we weren't going to spend a nickel on Milliken Field, it opened up six acres of practice fields. We're using three and a-half now. If we decided to keep Milliken Field as our main varsity field, we'd lose our practice site,and baseball and track would have nowhere to go. We couldn't put a track around Milliken."

Chatterton said some people were concerned that the track facility would be used only by the schools. Although a gate to the track would be under lock and key after school hours, there would be a path leading into the facility for public use, he said.

And for the first time, these plans included use of the school bathroom facilities for persons attending athletic events. "That was a great aspect of the plan," he explained. "I can't tell you how many people have commented in the past about Cohasset having no bathroom facilities. Visiting spectators sometimes had to go into the woods."

The athletic director continued, "I've heard a lot of positive feedback, but I'm sort of discouraged. It would be different if this plan was for our own personal gain. I really feel that if these people had questions, they should have come to us before town meeting."

Health board gets bond, presses for Heights fine

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

The health board got what it wanted last week, but the status of Cohasset Heights Ltd. landfill remains clouded for at least a few more days.

The landfill owners, John and Paul Barry, gave the board a $750,000 bond last week - their assurance that a leachate and groundwater treatment facility will be built at the commercial landfill. As a condition of accepting this bond, the board voted last week that the treatment plant must be "substantially complete by Nov. 15, 1988." The landfill owners and the bond company must agree to that condition by the end of this week, or the town will proceed with a lawsuit to shutdown the dump.

"We are asking Cohasset Heights Ltd. to sign this agreement before Thursday, Nov. 5," the board's special counsel, Michael Leon, said this week. "And if they do not sign it within ten days we will go to court for injunctive relief against the landfill."

Meanwhile, the town will be proceeding with a request to fine Cohasset Heights Ltd. $25,000 a day for each day they violated the cease and desist order issued by the board Oct.22. Atty. Leon said the fine would apply to at least five days the landfill was in operation despite the cease and desist vote by the health board Oct. 19.

The board voted to closedown the landfill based on a report by the landfill owners and a subsequent inspection by the health agent showing that a small amount of leachate flowed from the landfill into a nearby swamp that day.

"That case is still on-going," Atty. Leon said, referring to the daily fine. "We are still filing that in court, and hope it can be resolved in a couple of months.

"If the landfill owners and the bond company do not sign this agreement with the board of health," he continued, "the landfill will still be in violation of the May, 1986 agreement and we will go into court on Thursday and pursue the lawsuit to closedown the landfill. Plain and simple."

At an emergency meeting of the health board Friday evening, Oct. 29, Chairman John Burns said the $750,000 bond had been received Oct. 28. That brings the treatment facility bond total to $1.5 million. Burns suggested the bond be accepted, with the condition that the treatment facility be substantially completed by Nov. 15, 1988, noting that the bond will expire Jan. 1, 1989.

"I don't want to see them walk in in 1988 with their plans and say construction will be in two years. Because this bond expires Jan. 1, 1989, there'll be no bond as the site assignment requires."

He also requested that a definite construction timetable be established. Member Sharon Becker agreed, noting that by Nov. 15, 1988, "the plant should not have to be operational, but physically something has to be there."

Resident Peter Whittemore suggested that by requiring a cutoff date within one year, it could forfeit time to design an even more sophisticated treatment facility. Health Agent Joseph Godzik noted that right now the plans are merely in the " theory stage." It is currently estimated that construction will take about 44 weeks, and then extensive equipment testing will take place.

Dr. Burns explained that if necessary, the board could vote to extend the timetable, as long as people "are moved in the right direction."

Pond Street resident Ron Goodwin suggested the board take 30 to 60 days to review the bond, but Dr. Burns replied that it had already been reviewed by legal counsel. Former selectman Frank England, a bond expert, has also volunteered to review the document.

There was also some discussion at the meeting about the timing of landfill inspections by the board. Dr. Burns noted that in order to verify leachate breakout, it must be inspected by the health agent or the three board members. One resident suggested that the most significant time to view leachate breakout is after a heavy rain, but the health agent can't always be there at that time.

"We'll try to be on it," Dr. Burns replied. "We concerned as much as you are."

Goodwin told the board members that in addition to the other recent problems at the landfill, "the smell has seemed to return."

The health agent said the health department has received no formal complaints about the odor which has been investigated several times during the past year. There are complaint forms for residents to file at the health office on Elm Street and at the fire station during non office hours.

Local officials enjoy smooth ride on MBTA train

According to area transit planning officials the MBTA has taken the clickety-clack out of the railroad travel.

The MBTA recently treated local officials and members of the citizens advisory council to a field trip. The point of the trip from North Station to Rockport with a side trip to Needham was to show local officials the progress made in technology and comfort since the days when the Old Colony Line was still operating.

The MBTA also arranged meetings with mayors, selectmen, planners and business representatives along the way to address problems such as grade crossings, noise, impact on the community and property values.

Thirty-five grade crossings exist on the trip to Rockport. In this respect, project manager Steve Polechronis said it was similar to that of the Greenbush line.

Members of the Citizens Advisory Council gave high marks to the MBTA .

"Looking at the new and old diesels side by side was impressive," said Elain Cusker of the committee. "There was a lack of vibration and noise on the single welded rail line."

"People are becoming much more interested in my area," said Maria White of Plymouth.

Pam Wolfe of Sverdrup Corporation is setting up some more trips for local people interested in learning more about what the proposed rail line might be like.

Hingham officials were unable to attend this first field trip. Martha Gjesteby, a Cohasset selectman, was impressed with the rail line.

"From Lynn to Rockport was a very smooth ride," said Gjesteby. "It was very good, I have never had such an interesting train ride."

Gjesteby said there are many improvements over the former Old Colony line including cement staging instead of wood as well as brand new trains.

"It was a marvelous ride, the clickety-clack that you expect on a train is not there," she said.

Gjesteby was also impressed with the opinions of the North Shore officials who were available for questions.

"They felt that they really needed the trains. The people had problems not having the trains, they really depend on them," said Gjesteby. "All of the opinions were very positive."

"It was beautiful scenery," continued Gjesteby. "Much more spectacular than the Greenbush line would be. Long stretches of track go by the ocean, the harbors and the wetlands. The track didn't seem to effect them at all."

Gjesteby said that although the train made quite a few stops, they were very brief.

"We stopped for about two minutes once and while we watched only seven or eight cars piled up."

"I believe that we need a system like this. We need various modes of transportation beyond the boat and more dependable than the bus," said Gjesteby. "The red line is not the way to go. The boat is very popular but it is not enough to take care of everyone."

"I think that determining the statistics of the percentage of people that would be using Boston is very important. I would also like to see a reverse track," said Gjesteby.

Presently a single rail line is planned with one train running into Boston in the morning and returning in the evening.

At last week's meeting of the citizens advisory committee, Terry Fancher pointed out that a one way ticket on the Greenbush line would probably cost $2.50.

"Fairs can change, especially with the length of this project," said Polechronis.

Stockbridge group buys Mariner building

The Stockbridge Realty Group of Quincy, has purchased the Mariner Building in Marshfield.

The converted, early-19th century mansion located at 58 Main Street, presently houses the main offices of the Mariner Newspapers.

Charles Stockbridge, President of the firm and Jim Hayden of The Stockbridge Group, the coordinator of the acquisition, explained their future plans for the building; said Stockbridge, "The attraction of this building is its preserved antiquity, and it's ideal location in Marshfield. We will rehabilitate the building retaining its original style, and rent space out as Executive Suites".

The firm specializes in assisting clients acquire investment properties for individual ownership. "This Acquisition Program has been very successful", reported Stockbridge.

Officials say the water is still safe to drink . . .

"maybe once or twice a year.

"With all the other things the water department had been concentrating on lately, this is the last thing we would think about," he stated.

The fire department and Clean Harbors began working on the spill about 4 p.m. By 10:30 that night, Clean Harbors officials were still at the scene. They placed absorbent booms in the water near the red building and at the area where the water enters the treatment plant.

The treatment plant was shut down for one, eight-hour shift. According to Supt. Curley, the treatment plant automatically shuts off each day around 2:30 or 3 p.m. The water storage tank is then filled with the treated water. The tank was already filled with the treated water when the incident occurred, and thus no storage water was contaminated.

The treatment plant was turned on again Monday night, with more tests being conducted on a daily basis by Clean Harbors and engineers, Camp, Dresser and McKee. "We had a meeting Monday with the board of health and Clean Harbors and they said the water was very safe. We're very confident there'll be no problems with the drinking water," Curley said, adding that tests of the water will be conducted daily for at least the next ten days.

The superintendent emphasized there will be no ban on the useage of town water. "If anything unforeseen was found in the water, we always have our backup wells to rely on," he noted.

Meanwhile, Clean Harbors will be testing daily for any traces of petroleum hydrocarbon, benezene, sylene or tolulene in the reservoir water.

A final resolution as to how long Clean Harbor will remain at the scene and direct cleanup procedures will be made by selectmen and DEQE. The Braintree firm has placed the absorbent booms in the contaminated areas and cleaned the pipes leading into the water treatment plant.

"People shouldn't be afraid to drink their water," Connelly repeated. "They are drawing good, clean water and it's being monitored daily."

Eddie Waple of Clean Harbors inspects the absorbent booms which are containing the oil spill from entering the water treatment plant. (Photos by Alan Chapman)

Clean Harbor's Billy Giffith carries a hose through the Lily Pond oil spill in an effort to clean up the damage.

Bigley to document problems . . .

outside agitators," Bigley joked. "This is not an official Greenpeace activity. If we jumped on every landfill that endangered a community we would be totally preoccupied.

"It is still annoying to me," continued Bigley, "that they chose to use a financial matter to close the landfill. It is another indication that the health board is not dealing with this aggressively. There are some definite problems, 1500 tons of undocumented trash go in there each month."

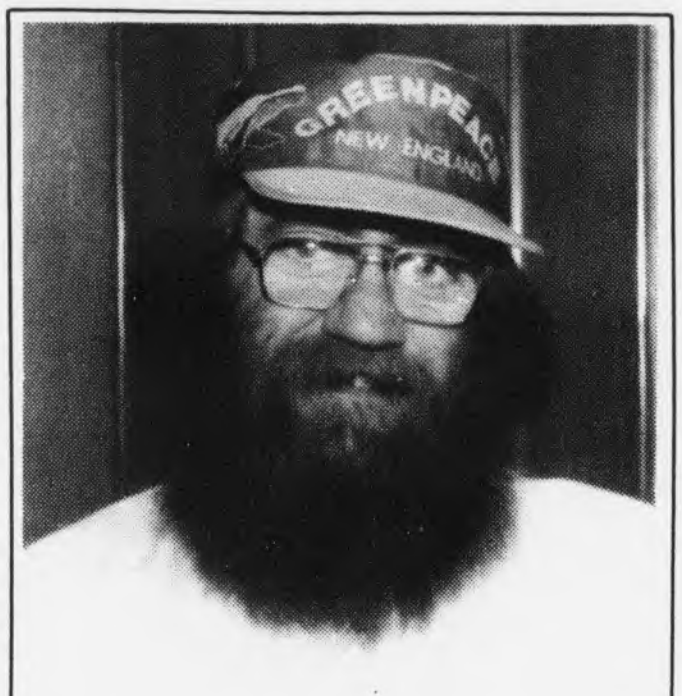
Bigley, a Somerville native, has lived in Cohasset for the last three years. He is married and has two children and another due any minute. Bigley is a graduate of Boston University with a major in public communications. He has lived in New York and California and has worked as a talk show host on cable television, a disc jockey and a radio newscaster and program director.

"It is so predictable it is pathetic," said Bigley. "The health board has spent hundreds of thousands over the last couple of years. The Barrys will do whatever they want until they are threatened with closure. Then at the last minute, almost magically, they will show up with whatever they need to stay open. The town ends up looking like a fool.

Bigley and his cohorts plan on emphasizing more of the environmental issues now that the Barry brothers have come up with the necessary bond and will be allowed to stay open.

"We want to push for documentation of the environmental problems," said Bigley. "We also want to look into the legal ramifications of taking recouse as individual citizens."

It seems absolutely ludicrous to Bigley that the town would allow a dump that receives heavily toxic materials at the highest point in town within a mile of the water supply.



"It is only a matter of time," said Bigley. "No experts have ever been able to give us assurance that it wouldn't get into the water supply. I feel sorry for the Barrys but on the other hand they are businessmen and went into the whole operation with their eyes open."

"BFI wants the dump to stay open," said Bigley, referring to reports that about 90 percent of the dump's business comes from them. "We sat in the parking lot across the street and monitored all of the trucks that go in and out," said Bigley. "That is more than the town has ever done."

"I think that the ultimate answer is source reduction and recycling," said Bigley. "Styrofoam is poison. Just the creation of it is ruining the ozone layer. It is just an all around poison. I thought it was ironic to see the Boy Scouts selling products using styrofoam at the town meeting."

Bigley was unhappy to see the town enter into an agreement with SEMASS at the recent town meeting.

"In theory it is just an incinerator. Also when you sign up you have to gaurantee a certain tonnage of trash. That inhibits the recycling process. The solution is people starting to pay a little more attention."

David Bigley

Bigley cites small examples like a halloween candy bar wrapped in paper, tinfoil and then plastic or the disposable pens and razors that so many people use.

"It is important to think about the little things in your home. Most everything that Bic makes is disposable; this generates an amazing amount of trash."

"The board of health told everyone to wrap their garbage in a bag. We are certainly not going to put garbage in plastic just to throw it away. A sealed paper bag is fine," said Bigley.

Bigley is genuinely concerned about the competence of the board of health. "There are a lot of issues that we have to take seriously and look at exactly where this town is going."

Bigley realizes that his very tall thin bearded stature is not a norm in Cohasset.

"People should be more scared about what is happening to their environment than worrying about what I look like," said Bigley when asked about his appearence. "Far more people stop me around town and say thank you for what you are doing to try and save our water than anything else. I am a resident. This is my water supply. This is my family. I plan on living in Cohasset for a long time. Honestly, for all of the protesters, the vast majority of comments have been thank-yous. I am encouraged."

Bigley added, "If people want to get involved it is easy. You don't have to get arrested. The important thing is to keep the pressure on the board of health.

around town

☐ Okay, you guys, the team is growing . . . that is the team of the 1960's CHS grads that are scheduled to play touch football against the Hull grads the Saturday before Thanksgiving. The roster is growing, so far it consists of the following: Dan O'Connell, Danny Young, Sandy Rose, Bobby Devin, Jim Gallagher, Dean Harold, John Morgan, Bruce Mac Donald, Doug MacDonald and Roger Pompeo. Any one else out there that wants to relive the old rivalry, call Clark Chatterton at 383-6103 and he'll be sure to sign you up! Should be a grand day for players and spectators alike!

☐ Congratulations go to Cindy Spooner, Jackie Lydon, Heather Stonge and Debbie Hartley. They were all announced as having made the South Shore League All-Star field hockey team last weekend. The rest of the fall sports All-stars will be chosen after "Around Town" goes to press, so look elsewhere in the paper for them.

☐ Floyd Hardwick was at the football game last Saturday, he sure looks super. As most people know, Floyd is a star at B.U. and doing well. He is injured this week, but is sure to bounce back soon. Floyd sure was impressed with the present CHS teams . . . especially with their terrific win over Hanover! Everyone played a great game, although it must have been hard on Coach Pisano . . . his son, Matt, plays for Hanover!!

☐ A special salute to Dick Conley, who has retired from the Firemen's force after 27 years of service to our town. Dick is a fine man who certainly has done more for the town than can be listed here, and we sure hope his retirement is a long and happy one!

Members of the Community Garden Club met this week to discuss plans for the Dec. 10 house tour. Committee chairmen include: (l to r) Donna O'Connor, co-chairman; Jeanne Replogle, boutique; Jane Goff, hostess; Carmen Schram, tea; Rita Strong, tickets; Judy Volungis, publicity; Irene Lord, boutique; Denise Desmond, Tickets; and Arlene Ferreira, tour. (Dave Sullivan)

☐ Eric Carlson has been selected to portray Bob Stein in the Thayer Academy production of And Miss Reardon Drinks a Little. The play will be presented at the school's Frothingham Hall, Nov. 20 and 21.

☐ Hats off to MaryBeth McNamara who is a semifinalist in the competition for Merit Scholarships to be offered in 1988. Scott Caristo, Adam Durant, Sarah Hamilton and Charles Sturdy all receive Letters of Commendation. When you consider that over one million students entered the Merit program by taking their PSAT/NMSQT's, that certainly is an outstanding feat! Commended students placed in the top five percent of all participants, while the finalists include the top half of one percent of the state's high school finalists. MaryBeth will find out in April whether or not she will be a Merit Scholarship winner...in our book, she already is one! Good work MaryBeth.

☐ Happy Be-lated anniversary to Herman and Joanne Fictner, who celebrated their 30th last weekend. They are surely a fine couple! And, guess what their kiddos (Lisa and Mike) gave them for a gift? A trip to Bermuda! To be taken at a later date of course, Joanne is so wrapped up in the Senior Class musical, she could only go if they could be back in time for rehearsal! Happy anniversary you two, and many more.

☐ Congratulations go to our CHS Soccer Team. They are State Championship bound, and we sure hope they win it all this year. They deserve it.

☐ Congratulations go to our CHS Soccer Team. They are State Championship bound, and we sure hope they win it all this year. They deserve it.

Floral Designs by DiNatale

OPEN HOUSE SAT. & SUN., NOV. 7 & 8 • 10-5 P.M.

527 B Nantasket Avenue, Hull – 925-3187

Patty DiNatale, formerly of Westport, Connecticut, and a graduate of the Fashion Institute of Technology in New York, used to design sets for T.V. commercials.

Now, she designs flower arrangements, and has a collection of giftware and gourmet baskets in her shop that will delight your palate and your home fashion senses.

You're best bet is to attend her "feast of samples" this upcoming weekend, Saturday and Sunday (all day, both days) where you'll experience interesting jams and jellies, mustards, vinegars, and other goodies.

Known as one of Hull's foremost florists, Patty has now expanded into some additonal gift lines you'll love. You'll love the DiNatale label on door baskets, hats, accessories and wooden welcome signs.

Scented lilac drawer liners, dried Holland bouquets, and other natural food selections (beautiful pastas, for instance) are perfect basket fillers... and very inexpensive.

Simmering potpourri pots and Yankee candles, lovely Victorian frames, and pre-washed, shrunk dish towels with the design woven right into the fabric (the kind your mother used to use) are all perfect gifts by themselves.

Ceramic cookie molds with their own recipe book are yet another giftable...

Best of all, you can order your Thanksgiving or Christmas centerpiece at the same time you experience DiNatale's Open House this weekend... DiNatale's is a full-service florist, affiliated with Balloons for all Reasons (send balloons or fresh flowers, you decide!)

Create your own basket... or let Patty DiNatale conjure up something special, and very different, for you.

Editorial

A double standard

No matter how you view it, last Sunday's oil spill into Lily Pond is an environmental embarassment for the town. We can only hope it is no more serious than that.

In the wake of the town's battle during the past three years to guard its water supply against the nearby commercial landfill, it seems mighty peculiar that town officials allowed this storage tank to sit alongside our precious reservoir.

Who's kidding whom? We are both the victim and the criminal. While we stand self-righteous, postulating how important this resource is to our future, we ignore an obvious violation of our own codes by our own hand.

Removal of the diesel oil tank had been on the water department's list of "things to do." It was not a priority item; considered non essential in comparison to other big budget items such as roof repairs to the department headquarters.

The red pump house in which the tank was stored is seldom entered by town employees. A spare meter or two and other department equipment is sometimes stored within the building which 50 years ago served as the main pump for the treatment plant.

But according to tests conducted by Clean Harbors, the environmental firm called in to direct the cleanup, this leak from the bottom of the near-empty tank had been oozing for "quite a while." We suspect it may have taken more than just a day or two for the sludge to leak from the tank, into the building's foundation, into the soil and finally to the water.

But the tank was forgotten just like the little red building which encased it.

Now that the incident has been brought to public attention, many more questions must be answered.

The residents of this town must know exactly why this tank was never removed. Even the most unenlightened person would concede that storing an oil storage tank near the water supply isn't the best use of that land.

The public must know exactly what damage was caused by Sunday's spill. We were told the water is safe to drink, but there are more questions that need to be answered. Has the soil around Lily Pond been damaged by the spill? Will the water be affected days or weeks from now, and will someone be monitoring the supply daily? For how long?

And, what will be the costs to the town? Assistance from Clean Harbors is not inexpensive.

We're fairly sure that the costs of the cleanup will far outweigh the costs had the tank been removed prior to the spill.

Mistakes will be made, but we must all earnestly try to avoid them. Sunday' spill will be a costly error for the town, but perhaps we have learned our lesson.

We can't on the one hand distrust the actions of big business, while we are destroying the environment all by ourselves.

The finger is pointed inward now. Excuses for our actions or inactions must stop. We must work to see that we are not caught in this serious and sensitive situation again.

Why we need nuclear energy

Letters

To the Editor:

The Cohasset Electric Company started up a small steam engine driven generating plant in 1890, in the building on North Main Street now used by Eastern Edison as a garage, with Amos A. Lawrence as President and E. F. Ripley as Treasurer. The property was purchased in 1909 by the Electric Light and Power Company of Abington and Rockland, which later developed into Eastern Edison, a unit of Eastern Utility Associates. The generating equipment was removed in 1913. Other officers of Cohasset Electric or its successor company were Daniel Tower, Edgar W. Bates and Harry R. Pratt.

The first central electric generating station in New England was built in Brockton in 1883 by Thomas Edison, only 13 months after the first central station in the country was started up in New York.

From such small beginnings, the nation's generating capacity has grown to about 655,000 megawatts in just over 100 years. Coal still generates 55 percent of the nation's electricity, hydro 12 percent, geothermal and renewables 0.5 percent, oil and gas 15.5 percent, and nuclear 17 percent (30 percent in New England). Between 1940 and 1985, the electricity generated in New England increased from about 8 billion kilowatt hours to about 82 billion kilowatt hours in 1985 - and the demand for electricity is increasing at about 4 percent per year.

That may help understand why we need Pilgrim and Seabrook and why Eastern Utilities Associates, the outgrowth of that tiny plant in 1883, has purchased 17 percent of Seabrook. Nuclear energy has saved consumers across the nation about 60 billion dollars, and together with coal has greatly reduced the use of foreign oil. The potential hazards of nuclear power that we hear so much about have been successfully contained (except at Chernobyl) because of the concept and careful design of U.S. style water reactors with full containment, since the first New England nuclear plant started up 27 years ago. We will have to continue to accept the environmental effects of burning fossil fuels such as coal for some time to come, but eventually we will follow the lead of France which generates nearly 75 percent of its electricity from the peaceful atom, and aims for 100 percent.

Educational institutions should teach about the energy-societal relationship, about the realities of energy use and of the potentials and limitations of various sources of supply. The anti-nuclear yelping would soon be washed away by proper information, and we could continue to improve the quality of life for an ever broader sector of the population. This process began with the transfer from the Dark Ages to the Age of Reason and through the Industrial Revolution to such milestones as the 1883 Brockton electric station. Another milestone was the realization that the peaceful atom could begin to replace and preserve fossil fuels for recyclable non-fuel uses, rather than having left our descendants the legacy of having burned them irrevocably. The legacy of nuclear waste is manageable but a legacy of exhausted fossil fuels is inexusable.

To the Editor:

Your editorial in the Cohasset Mariner of October 29 was a commendable assessment of the problems with the Cohasset Heights BFI landfill. The convenience of total waste removal offered by haulers such as BFI to towns and businesses allows people to deceive themselves and that deception is the real hidden enemy behind the Kids 'feel bad' about dangerous fields

Letters

To the editor:

A lot of us little kids at the Joseph Osgood School like to play soccor an baseball. It is dangerous playing on the fields we have because they aren't any good any more. It makes us all feel bad when the people in our town don't care about us. Can't you all please find a way to help us?

Sincerely

Kids thank parents for support

To the editor:

We would like to thank all the parents who tried to help us get a better chance at life. Improvements in our athletic fields would have helped us all a lot. It is too bad that so many residents of our town don't feel it is necessary to help the kids.

Sincerely,

Students urge solution to field problems

To the editor:

We the students at the Cohasset High School are feeling quite sad today. We feel that the residents of our town don't feel us worthy of their support. Last night at our Town Meeting the renovations of our athletic field were once again voted down.

Cohasset is a very small school with a very big heart. We all give 100% to the athletic teams that we participte on and are proud of our efforts. We try our best to represent our town in the best possible way. Many excellent athletes have been a product of our system.

If the students, the next generation of voters in our town, are giving a 100% effort why is it that the voters don't see fit to support these efforts with appropriate playing fields. We aren't asking that they provide us with a lot of extravagant sports equipment . . . simply good playing conditions.

We feel that many of the adults in our town don't feel that things for the children or the schools are worthy of their consideration or financing. It is very hard for us to understand this thinking. We are, however, grateful to the adults who continually do back us and show their approval of our efforts.

Even though we are embarrassed by the image we present to our opponents, we will continue to give the 100% effort and strive to win under these difficult and dangerous conditions. For we do not want to give up any of our teams. We are proud of our accomplishments. Please ask your readers to review their reasoning, reassess their values of children and education, and try to come up with a solution to this very urgent and overdue problem within our town.

Village Fair gears up for Dec. 5 celebration

With the end of Daylight Saving as a reminder that the winter holidays are fast approaching, chairmen of the various committees for Cohasset's big Village Fair have set up schedules of workshops.

They have signaled an appeal for additional workers and donations of materials for their handiwork. The Fair this year will be held Saturday, Dec. 5, centered on the Cohasset Common.

The Village Fair is an annual joint fund-raising effort of five Cohasset churches, observing its 47th edition this year. It brings together parishioners from St. Anthony's Roman Catholic, St. Stephen's Episcopal, Second Congregational, First Parish Unitarian, and Panagia Greek Orthodox churches in what is believed to be a unique ecumenical effort.

Under the system of rotating leadership, St. Anthony's has the top management responsibility this year with Kathy Pratt, Lou Simeone and Kathy Brennock co-chairing the Central Committee that plans and organizes the big event.

All chairmen echo the same appeal: "Come one, come all. No special talent needed, though it could help. We can find a job for everyone!"

Among the workshops currently scheduled and operating are these:

Children's Corner, chaired by Anna Abbruzzese and producing articles of interest to and for children, meeting Tuesday evenings at 7 p.m. at St. Anthony's.

Wreaths, chaired by Jean Manganaro, currently making decorations, bows and pine cone adornments for wreaths, meeting Monday mornings, 9:30 to noon at Glenn Pratt's garage, 482 King Street. During the week before the Fair the group will work daily at the Second Congregational Church.

Secret Room, making items for sale to children as gifts to their parents and families, meeting at several homes at various times. For further information call June Simeone at 383-1545.

"All-Table Workshop", making items for several of the features of the Fair, including Boutique, Food Table, Children's Corner, etc., meeting under the leadership of Marsha Silvia, Carol Sandblom and Linda Campbell, at the Second Congregational Church Monday evenings at 8 p.m.

In addition to the specific workshops, other committees assembling articles for sale at the Fair have issued appeals and instructions for delivering donations.

Boutique, chaired by Sheila Wallingford and Donna Blain, is in need of small furniture, i.e. footstools, chairs, which can be refinished, also all types of artwork such as paintings, prints, sketches, etc. Art work will be matted by Ernie Martel. For information call 383-1089 or 383-6897.

Bargain Bazaar, chaired by Gail Bell, has made arrangements to receive donations at the rear of St. Anthony's Rectory on Wednesdays and Saturdays, 10-12 noon, when a member of the committee will be on hand to accept them. Donations of any attic treasure or basement bargain will be gratefully received.

Books, chaired by Alice Daunt, is also appealing for books in good condition which can be dropped off also at St. Anthony's Rectory Monday through Friday from 9 to 5.

Disappointing vote

To the Editor:

This letter is to advise you of how the young people in our town feel after this last Town Meeting here in Cohasset. The day after the meeting the mood in the three schools was one of disappointment and the children asked what they could do about it. They wanted to express their feelings, so it was suggested that they get together and write a letter to you.

These are letters written by the children in the schools and signed by them. They wish to make their feelings known. It is their hope that by letting these feelings be known, perhaps the residents of our town will be able to get their heads together and figure out a way to fund this sort of a monumental project in a manner that can meet with the voters approval.

It is their way of asking the town adults to help them out.

Trash problems keep growing . . .

Heights. Once one mixes all the recoverable rubbish with liquid wastes such as garbage, cleaning fluids, paint cans etc. and has it compacted into a ten ton truck, the recoverable materials are spoiled and can't be reused. The real job of recycling has to begin with separating things at the kitchen wastebasket and the dumpster. Plastics, paper, metals, glass, and hazards like flashlight batteries and paint cans – those five categories are the minimum needed to turn landfillers like BFI into recyclers. If all state and town financed buildings and housing had mandatory separation and the contracted hauler had to have separate trucks for the five separate dumpsters and had to hold the recyclables for resale, then we'd have an 80%-85% reduction in the need for landfills and no need for incinerators at all.

Locally speaking, the problems Cohasset has with its own municipal landfill are the very reason why we're unwilling to deal with the equivalent of ten imported dumps from other towns such as Norwell, Abington, Weymouth and Quincy. We have enough trouble and expense with our own trash and we have the foresight not to dump into our municipal water supply. Additionally, the recent oil spill into Lily Pond appears to be an unfortunate case of the Water Department management shooting itself in the foot, but it also illustrates the fact that Cohasset has enough trouble protecting its resources from the dangers of its own doings, let alone coping with the dangers of ten other towns trashing the water supply too. As trash grows more hazardous, these dumps grow more hazardous.

Finally, as an operating landfill the Cohasset Heights site is an open twenty-two acre sieve to rainfall. This contributes to the spread of off-site contamination to such an extent that the regrading and capping of the Heights to end the infusion of rainfall is the first most obvious step to take. That is the simple reason why the complete shutdown of dumping at the Cohasset Heights is necessary. Once regraded and capped, then the needs and capacity of the proposed leachate treatment plant can be accurately assessed. There's a lot of groundwater that flows directly under and around the Heights and that's where our long range problems lie.

Until we stop the influx of garbage and waste into that landfill and the percolation of rainfall down through it we won't have any control over and won't know what this proposed treatment plant is going to be required to handle.

Chittim says 'let's move on' . . .

(Hanover), David Chittim (Cohasset) and Lloyd Patriquin (Whitman) were in favor.

Chittim described the school's leadership as being in a state of limbo for the past four months. He urged the committee to act on the question and asked members to consider the importance of stable leadership as the school moves into a three-year, $10 million expansion project.

Molla agreed it was time to act and offered to appoint a search committee to find candidates for the superintendent's job.

Patriquin argued that Easton has worked to improve communication with the committee and staff over the last few months and that the staff has responded favorably to his efforts.

"I fail to understand the people who say 'I cannot communicate with the superintendent'. He has made every effort to communicate, in person, over the phone, and in memoranda. If you don't agree with him, that's one thing, but I think that's different from not communicating." Patriquin said.

"You're trying to keep us in limbo," Easttey protested after the motion was made. "Are we going to take another vote next month? We already voted on this." after the vote he exclaimed "We don't have rules according to these guys. They make their own rules."

After the meeting, Easton said he felt McDonough's absence was not necessarily the deciding factor. "I felt he (Farquahar) was possibly changing his opinion," Easton commented.

With the prospect of working with a divided and partially hostile committee, will he accept the contract?

"Of course I am," Easton responded. "I love this place."

Asked if the uncertainty about leadership has had an impact on the staff, teacher Russ DeCoste replied, "It hasn't affected the day-to-day operation of the school. You wouldn't know it if you walked around and saw teachers doing their jobs. But that's because we haven't got into the budget process yet, when teachers work more closely with the administration."

In other business, the committee discussed VoTech's declining enrollment and its impact on the school's proposed expansion. The Abington campus may be closed in 1991, and plans are underway to move that operation to the Hanover campus. An addition to the Hanover building is being planned, and the committee is hammering out a contract with architects Walter Eric Kluz and Associates.

"I can't see where there's any need for expansion where enrollment is declining. We should close out the Abington campus and reduce areas where there is no student interest," commented Doyle.

"We have so many classes with just one student in them. These issues have got to be brought up before we go before town meetings with this expansion and get hit over the head with them," he added.

In response, Chittim argued that the VoTech has become an integral part of the economy of the eight towns it serves.

"To go back to where we were six years ago would be breaking the contract we have with the citizens of those towns," he said.

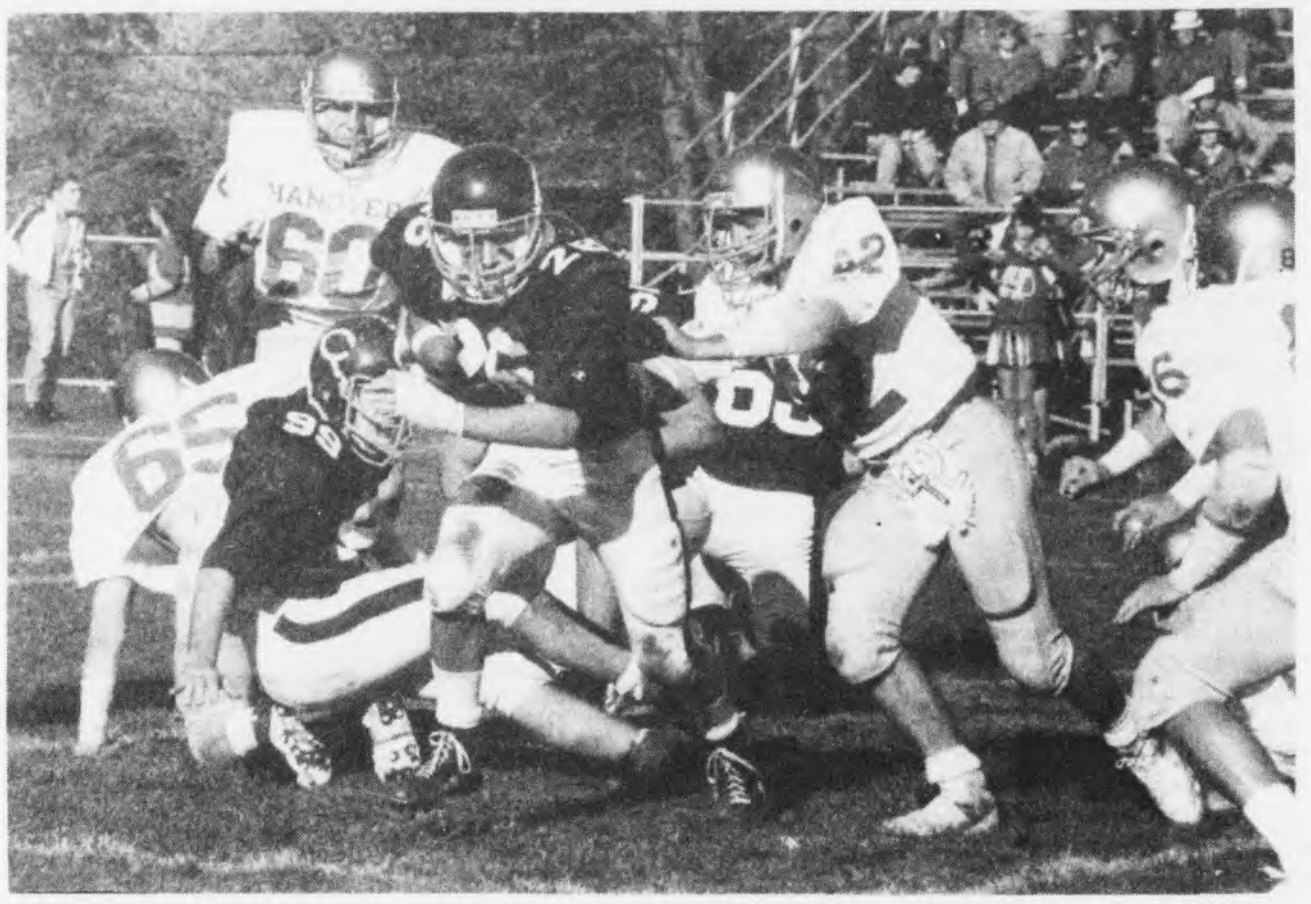
Boys' soccer clinches state final berth with 3-1 win

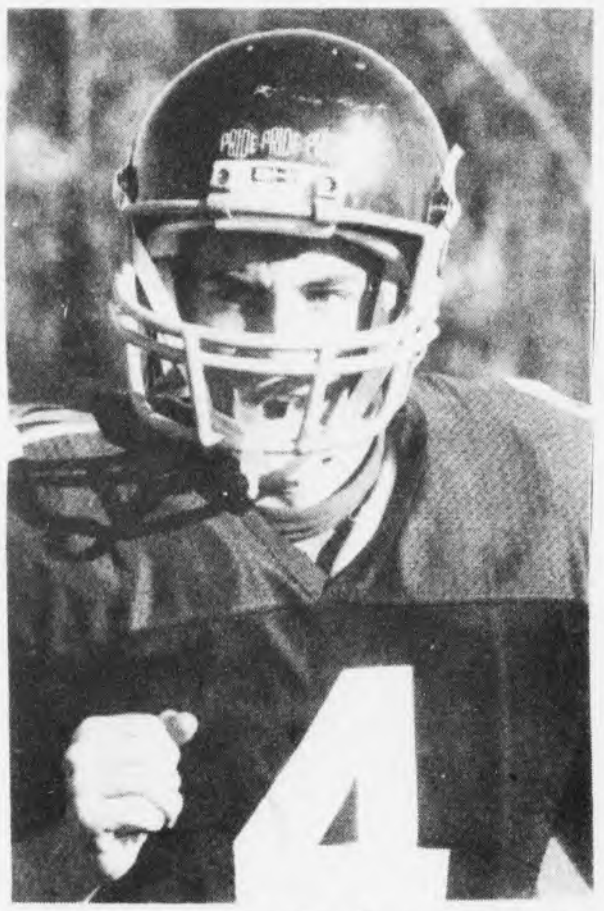
Peter Kasperowicz
Mariner correspondent

They've done it. After defeating Abington 7-1 Monday, Oct. 26th, and Norwell 4-1 on the 28th, the boys' varsity soccer team clinched both the South Shore League Small School title and a spot in the state finals by defeating their arch-nemesis, Sandwich, 3-1.



Although Cohasset hadn't the opportunity to defeat Sandwich in quite a long time, the team was confident, expecially with the home field advantage.

Cohasset High sports



"We're going to eat Sandwich for lunch," senior Dave Shultz quipped.

Earlier this year, the two teams tied in Sandwich 0-0, but after twenty minutes of play, Tod Fitzpatrick made sure that the same thing didn't happen in Cohasset. His goal, with help from Jimmy Reidy, was the first step in Sandwich's downfall. Ten minutes later, Kostas Roukaunkis brought the score to 2-0, and Cohasset left the field at the half with smiles on their faces. Even Dan Magner was pleased.

Paul Froio (26) runs from Hanover's Capt. Darron Henn during Saturday's football game.

Craig Mulcahy (4) exults after completing the run for a touchdown against Hanover.

"These guys are unused to being scored on; you can tell by how discouraged they are. I really like what I'm seeing, and if you score once more, it will be the final nail in the coffin," Magner said.

Before Cohasset could hammer in the final nail, Sandwich scored, making it 2-1. However, before Sandwich could get rolling, Dave Shultz scored, giving the final score of 3-1. Cohasset was pleased.

"Sandwich was definitely our most satisfying win," senior Adam Durant sighed. "It was about time we beat them."

Before the team could celebrate, they had to face two more tough games: one on Sunday against B.C. High, and one on Monday against East Bridgewater. In spite of how hard it is to play two games in two days, Cohasset shut both teams out; defeating B.C. High 3-0, and East Bridgewater 1-0. Now, hindsight is 20/20: Cohasset didn't think that they would shut B.C. out for a minute.

"They'll be out to get us," goalie Joel Reidy said. "They've only lost one game this year, and it was to us."

And in fact, B.C. played as hard as they could, even when Ned Chase scored his first career goal against them.

"You'll notice how they don't give up," coach Magner said. "So far you guys have been outstanding, but you can't let down just because you're ahead."

They didn't let down in the least. In the first five minutes of the second half, John Linsley followed in the footsteps of Ned Chase, as he too scored his first ever career goal, bringing to 2-0 in favor of Cohasset. Needless to say, both Ned and John were pretty psyched by the end of the game.

The final goal came from veteran scorer Jimmy Reidy, and so the game ended 3-0.

The team shut out East Bridgewater too, although not so easily: the score was 1-0, again thanks to Todd Fitzpatrick. Cohasset pulled that win out of thin air, as only eight players manned the field for Cohasset during the last 15 minutes or so, instead of the usual 11. The reason for this was the referee's willingness to hand out yellow cards on his slightest fancy. Oh well.

The team now patiently waits for its first opponent in the State Finals, which should start this coming weekend. Check the school for information, and be sure to show your support at these important games!

Girls' soccer brutalize Oliver Ames, 9-1

By Jen Plante
Mariner correspondent

Last Saturday, Oct. 31, the girls' varsity soccer team defeated the division 2 Oliver Ames by a score of 9-1.

In this somewhat brutal game, the Skippers attacked with strategy and used their heads. Coach Kennan Startzell was very pleased with the final outcome of the game.

Goals were scored by senior forward, Jen Coley, who had one in the first half and one in the second half, junior halfback, Katie Lord, and sophomore halfback, Madlyn McDonald. Others who helped out offensively were: seniors Liz O'Leary, and Ken Kirkendahl and juniors Kristin Ellinger and Katie Ryan. Defensively, juniors Katie Murphy and Cindi Dormer along with freshman, Anna Sandell, kept the ball clear of the net. Also, senior stopper Vicki Kelley and junior goalkeeper, Nancy Riley played an excellent game for Cohasset.

This upcoming week the girls will face Sandwich at home on Monday. Even though this team of great players had the second best record in Cohasset's history, they were not fortunate enough to qualify for the state tournament. They were close, though, only one game away! We wish you all better luck next season and we'd like to bid the seniors a farewell also. Jen Coley, Kerri Kirkendahl, Liz O'Leary, Debbie Dormer, and Vicki Kelley will always be legends on the soccer field.

Art Show

An art show featuring the work of Roz Farbush will take place Sunday, Nov. 8, 1 to 5 p.m. at 190 South Main St., Cohasset.

There will be a total of ten South Shore artists on exhibit with paintings and crafts for sale.

Free and open to the public.

Recreation basketball registration

The Cohasset Recreation/Boosters Basketball League registration for girls and boys in grades 2 through 9 will be held at the Recreation office, Town Hall on Saturday morning, Nov. 7, from 9 to 10:30 a.m.

The fee for the program will be $10, with a 50 percent discount offered to subsequent children registering from the same family. Checks for the fee should be payable to the Town of Cohasset.

There will also be a $4 or $5 team shirt charge per player. Please come to registration prepared to pay by either cash or check payable to the "Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club." The exact amount of the shirt is not yet available but should be in the $4 to $5 range.

Registration is essential as there will be an evaluation session on Saturday, Nov. 21. Details will be available at the time of registration on Nov. 7. Coaches will draft balanced teams based upon the individual evaluations. Your son/daughter will then be notified before the first game, scheduled for Saturday, Dec. 5.

Games will not be played during vacation periods to avoid conflicts. Including playoffs and finals, a total of eight games are scheduled, and the season will conclude on Saturday, Feb. 6, 1988, prior to the start of school winter vacation.

Exhibit winners

Nearly 100 artists submitted works to the South Shore Art Center's annual all member blue Ribbon Exhibit, this year held for the first time in the Center's new members' and invitational galleries.

Blue ribbons and honorable mention designations were awarded in six categories—oil/acrylic, watercolor, mixed media/collage, drawing/pastel, 3D/sculpture and photography. The Blue Ribbon exhibit, in the Center's galleries, 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset, runs through November 17.

Jurying the exhibit was Russ Doucette, retired undergraduate dean at Massachusetts College of Art, who saw a distinct improvement in the quality of work being created by South Shore artists. He was favorably impressed with the work hung in the exhibit which is open to all members of the Center. Certain of the works selected for honorable mention designation were selected to encourage the artists to expand further on an original idea but may not be the best executed in the category.

In oil/acrylic, Wellesley Hills artist Janet Hugenberger won a first place ribbon for her oil "Busy Gloucester Wharf." Honorable mentions in this category went to John Arapoff of Marshfield for his arylic "The Darby"; to Virginia Allen, Scituate, for her oil "Mirror Image #2"; and to Peter Spataro, Hanover, for his oil "Hometown."

Doucette selected two works, equally deserving, for first prize ribbons in the watercolor category. The works selected were Eugene Conlon of Braintree for his piece "1750 Farmhouse" and Pat McCarthy of Cohasset for her piece "Motif #1." Honorable mention ribbons went to Chet Warren of Scituate for "First Frost," to Phyliss Levine of Duxbury for "Neighbors," and to Madelyn Carney of Dorchester for "McMillan Wharf, Afternoon."

In the mixed media/collage category Berj Kailian of Weymouth won a first place ribbon for her piece "Waterfalls No More," the honorable mention in this category went to Brooks Kelly of Pembroke for his collage "The Candidate."

Michael McWade of Weymouth won the first place honor in the drawing and pastel category for his pencil drawing "Fred's Barn, Norwell." Honorable mentions went to Katherine Smit of Duxbury for her pastel portrait, "Maegan," and Merylie-Lee Thompson for her pastel portrait, "Lady in a Beret."

In the 3/D sculpture category a first place ribbon was awarded to Robert St. Pierre of Hanover for his wood sculpture "#854 – Padouk Vessel." An honorable mention ribbon was awarded to Judy Rossman of Scituate for her clay piece "Large Coil Floor Planter."

Hull photographer Kim DeNunzio won first place ribbon for her photograph "Departure." Honorable mention were given to Jeanne Armin of Cohasset for her photograph "Perpetual Care," to J. Neal Gray of Scituate for his color photograph "Coming Home," and to Peggy Roth Major of Scituate for her photograph "Subtle Grace."

Annual Antique show & sale

The eleventh antique show and sale will be held on Saturday Nov. 7, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Deer Hill School, just before the Music Circus, 206 Sohier Street, Cohasset, MA.

Admission to the show with a card or ad for one or two persons is $1.50, regular admission is $2.00. Admission cards are available from dealers and members of the Beechwood Congregational Church. Antiques such as glass, silver, jewelry, primitives and other collectibles will be on display and for sale. A public snack bar will be held in the school cafeteria with sandwiches, hot dogs, homemade squares, coffee, tea and cold drinks. Homemade baked goods will be on sale at the ticket area.

There is ample parking.

Chairwoman Cheryl Kristiansen, announces the following dealers in this year's show:

Christmas House Tour

At the November Board of Directors meeting of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset, Chairman Arlene Ferreira announced the committee chairmen for this year's Christmas house tour. Committee chairmen will be: co-chairman, Donna O'Connor; chairmen in charge of the tea, Carmen Schramm and Marge Libby; Publicity, Polly Logan and Judy Volungis; Hostesses, Jane Goff and Betsy Good; Tickets, Denise Desmond and Rita Strong; Gifts, Cynthia Wessling; Boutique, Jeanne Replogle and Irene Lord.

The theme of the tour will be "reflecting the joy of Christmas."

The tour will take place Thursday, Dec. 10. This tour will consist of a visit to seven lovely homes to see their Christmas decorations and a stop at the newly renovated Community Center for tea and the beautiful Christmas boutique.

Series of young artists classes

A new fall session of young artists classes begins the first week of November at the South Shore Art center and its satellite locations in Scituate, Norwell and Hingham.

The "Holiday Sampler," new to the Center's schedule gives young artists a chance to experiment with new ideas for holiday cards and ornaments and the opportunity to work with the Center's six young artist instructors. The first session of this workshop meets in Norwell's Town Hall, on Mondays starting Novemer 2 from 3:30-5 p.m. and will run for six weeks.

The Scituate course will meet in the Trinitarian Church on Tuesdays beginning November 3 from 3:30 to 5 p.m. and the Hingham class will meet in the Community Center on Fridays starting November 6 from 3:30-5 p.m. A section of this workshop will be taught in Cohasset at 119 Ripley Road on Wednesdays beginning November 4 from 3:30-5 p.m.

Young artist instructor Judy Rossman will run a two-day Clay Jewelry for Teens workshop on Saturdays, November 14 and 21 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. During the two-day workshop she will work with students on the design and creation of jewelry in contemporary themes and colors. The first session will be used to create a piece from durable white clay and the second Saturday will concentrate on painting with acrylics and finishing with polyurethane.

Imagination and Observation for ages six to eight, taught by Lizbeth Wyman will meet in Norwell on Tuesdays beginning November 3 from 3:30-5 p.m. Students will work with different techniques – craypas, china and ink markers, printing ink and paint—to illustrate their creative ideas.

Lynn Rizzotto will teach a section of Adventures in Art for nine to twelve year olds in Scituate on Thursdays beginning November 5 from 3:30-5 p.m. Designed for intermediate students, the course will cover the essentials of design using various art materials.

Playful Picture Making for ages six to ten will be taught in Hingham by Susan Rodgerson on Mondays starting November 2 from 3:30-5 p.m. and in Cohasset by Wyman on Fridays, starting November 6 from 3:30-5 p.m. Using a variety of materials such as paint, craypas and cardboard to create imaginative pictures students will explore color, light, texture, shape and form.

Nancy Connolly will teach Structures –Natural & Fantastic –in Cohasset on Mondays starting November 2 from 3:30 to 5 p.m. Designed for ages ten to twelve, students will learn to build abstract forms in sculpture. Observations, articulated in drawings, will begin the sculptural process which will be completed through the use of clay, wire and found objects.

These courses all offer a creative experience for the young artists and a chance to stretch their artistic ability. All courses require advanced registation and may be made by calling the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548. The Center is supported in part by a grant from the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities, a state agency.

Nancy Connolly will teach Moms and Tots on Fridays beginning Nov. 6 from 10-11 a.m. in Cohasset. This course is for 3 1/2 to 6 year olds and a parent. Connelly will demonstrate art techniques and craft projects to try again at home

LDS Missionaries visit town

Jeff Morgan and Mike Petersen decided a year ago when they were 19, to serve a mission for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (the Mormons). They do so voluntarily and at their own expense.

Serving a mission meant giving up things like "going hunting," a favorite pastime for Elder Petersen who comes from Alpine, Utah, and leaving friends and family behind for the next two years. Elder Morgan was enjoying life at Ricks College in Idaho where he was on a baseball scholarship.

And now, these young men find themselves "companions" here on the South Shore. Their days are full as they travel about meeting people in Hingham, Cohasset, Norwell, Scituate and Hanover. They are happy to chat, answer questions, and teach about the gospel of Jesus Christ, and to invite people out to the meetings at the local LDS Church on Gardner Street in So. Hingham.

Ask the elders how they like missionary work and you'll get a resounding, "Great!. . .It is the greatest thing in the world when you see people accept the gospel and see how it strengthens their lives!" says Elder Morgan.

The elders may be reached for an appointment by calling them at 337-8874 evenings or early mornings.

CONSCIOUSNESS RAISING ON ECONOMICS & FAITH BEGUN!

About 20 members of our church stayed after the morning worship service last Sunday to hear Rev. Fred Pease bring us insight and background on the "Preliminary Report" of the Commission on Economics and Faith of our Massachusetts UCC Conference. This report was presented at the Annual Conference last May. Rev. Pease emphasized that the Conference is now urging all of its 450 UCC (Congregational) churches to study the report and record their reactions to it. These reactions will be considered by the Commission in developing a final draft of the report for consideration at the annual meeting of the Conference next May. Rev. Pease urged our church to participate in this study process, hopefully starting this November. To aid us he is sending us a three session study guide. Copies of the two page summary of the preliminary report were distributed to the members present at our meeting. Copies of the complete 16 page preliminary report are available in the church office. Our Deacons had this project on their agenda for consideration at their meeting this week.

"THE UPPER ROOM" and "ALIVE NOW" — devotional magazines for November/December are available in Bates Hall. Please pick one up for yourself or a friend and leave a small donation to help defray the cost.

INSTALLATION OF OUR "NEW PASTOR" draws near after an uplifting and encouraging "engagement" period. On the afternoon of Sunday, Nov. 8 the procedures for the installation of Gary Ritts to the pastorate of the Second Congregational Church will commence at 2:30 p.m. with an "ecclesiastical council" involving the pastors and lay representatives of the churches of the Pilgrim Association.

The council, following examination and discussion of the particulars will be asked to recommend installation. At 4 p.m. there will be a worship service of word and installation. Local clergy, church officers, Rev. John Benbow, association officers, our own Adult Choir and a professional "Story Teller" will be among the participants. At 5:30 we will complete the celebration with our annual ham and bean supper. Join us for a truly enjoyable and inspiring "family" gathering!

NEED HELP RAKING LEAVES — or with yard cleanup? Especially for those who have no one to work around the yard, the Junior High Youth Group will be offering their services (no charge - "Love in Action") on Sunday, Nov. 15 from 1 - 3 p.m. Please call the church office if you have a need for this outreach ministry.

Also, for this Sunday our Junior Highers will be assisting in worship and serving at coffee hour.

FOR THE COMING WEEK:

Sunday, Nov. 8: 10 a.m., Worship, Children in Church; 2:30 p.m., Ecclesiastical Council; 4:00 p.m., Worship & Installation; 5:30 p.m., Ham & Bean Supper.

Mormon film presented Nov. 8

A special fireside Nov. 8 at the LDS chapel, 379 Gardner St., in Hingham will feature the premiere of the Church's motion picture, "How Rare a Possession — The Book of Mormon".

The film is being transmitted over satellite to stake centers throughout the country from Salt Lake City.

The Prophet, Ezra Taft Benson will introduce the film. The film introduces the 1988 gospel doctrine course of study which will be given each Sunday morning in local LDS chapels.

As the film appeals to all age groups church families are invited to attend this showing together.

The public is welcome.

First Parish news

Rev. Edward T. Atkinson, Minister, Parish House (617) 383-1100, 23 North Main Street.

From the Community Outreach Committee:

As reported previously in the newsletter, work with South Shore Habitat for Humanity, a non-profit housing ministry, is the Committee's main project this fall. Plans are underway for service projects and financial assistance; Habitat will be the subject of the November 12 service.

In addition to this project, the Outreach Committee stands ready to respond to emergency needs for assistance of whatever type, as resources permit. These needs could be due to fire or flood, illness, housing crisis, and the like.

The Committee is pleased to report its first such emergency donation has been provided to the Russian immigrant family of Tanya Lebedeva. This 'Refusnik' family includes Tanya, formerly a researcher at the Soviet Academy of Sciences; her husband, a mathematician; his mother; and a three-year old daughter. The family was permitted to leave Russia after years of effort and arrived in the U.S. about a month ago. Most of their money and possessions had been stolen en route. The family is living in an apartment in Lynn with assistance from a Jewish service agency, but lacks even basic furnishings. While they have already begun looking for work, it will be awhile before they become self sufficient. The Committee hopes its gift will help the family become settled in their new country.

More From the Community Outreach Committee

Members of the Community Outreach Committee will join a work crew at the Christians for Urban Justice (Boston branch of Habitat) townhouse project in Dorchester on Saturday, November 7. This 10-unit project for low income families is nearing completion but needs volunteers (skilled and unskilled) for insulation, sheet rock installation, clean up, etc. Everyone at First Parish is welcome to join in for the day. Call Jack Martin 383-6577 or Bobbi Leary 383-1735.

Newsletter Deadline:

Please have items for the newsletter in by Monday, November 9 inasmuch as the Post Office will be closed Wednesday, November 11. The deadline any other week is Tuesday morning no later than 10 a.m.

Youth Group News:

Our next outing will be to a Thai restaurant in Boston on Friday, Nov. 6. The time will be announced.

Selectmen to seek funds for Tupelo Road shut-off

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Selectmen promised a Tupelo Road resident they would try to find $650 in the town's budget to pay the cost of closing that road at Rte. 3A.

Last April, town meeting approved the project to seal off Tupelo Road from the Rte. 3A exit. Executive Secretary Donald Andrew and Highway Surveyor Harold Litchfield gave the project the go-ahead this fall, despite the lack of funding. The highway department has been doing the road work which is now substantially complete.

Arthur Rasmussen told selectmen that through the efforts of residents and the cooperation of town officials, the project cost has been reduced from $4,000 to $650. But because the advisory committee refused to finance the project, there is not enough money to pay for concrete curbing which is required by the state.

He reminded selectmen that despite the advisory committee's financial rejection, town meeting voted two-to-one in favor of the proposal. "It was mentioned that five to seven members of the advisory committee used Tupelo Road daily (to Rte. 3A). It makes me suspect that there's a personal reason they denied the funds," Rasmussen suggested. "We've been more than willing to do the best we can to grass and plant in the area. I'll write out a check now for $650 to close the street, but that's not the point," he continued. "An important responsibility was negated by the advisory committee to deny those funds."

The resident said if necessary, he would solicit the money door to door in the Tupelo Road neighborhood, but he requested that selectmen first try to help.

Rasmussen explained the $650 is needed for concrete curbing which is required by the state.

Selectman James Gallagher recalled that when residents petitioned for the road closing, "you said the neighbors would raise the money for the landscaping," he stated.

"I said we initiated the petition to close the road and we would do everything in our power to close it," the resident said. "But can't we beg, borrow or buy anything to close this road?"

Selectmen assured the resident they would attempt to find the money within the town's budget to pay for the closing.

In other business Monday night, selectmen said they would attempt to have a lease prepared by Wednesday night for Atty. Noel Collins so he may move into the Independence Building. Collins is attempting to purchase the building from the town. But the sale is being held up because of a Superior Court complaint filed by Mary Klein against the recent decision by the zoning board to grant the variances necessary to sell the property.

Mary Klein, who has suggested a more proper use of the building would be for low and moderate income housing, told selectmen Monday night she would file an injunction against any attempt they made to lease the property.

As Atty. Collins explained, it has been 21 months since he made the highest bid to purchase the former gown museum property. After several months, the deed was finally researched, and the planning board and zoning board have given their approval of the sale.Because the sale is now being held up by the court complaint, Atty. Collins has asked to lease the property for an office. Selectmen have agreed, but they decided to have the building appraised in order to come up with a correct leasing price.

"I don't have time to wait," the attorney stated. "Declare a time limit on the survey for appraisals. Let this be the last week for appraisals." Selectmen believe only one appraisal has been completed.

Klein, who attended the meeting, said she objected to the request to rush the lease arrangement. She emphasized the property can't be leased or sold, and said she would seek injunctive relief to stop the signing of a lease. "The costs of rushing this will be significant, much more than the legal costs of knowing this property is unsaleable," she said. "There is no deadline that you have to meet. The property he bid on is a much smaller piece of property. This is not a valid agreement and you're making things worse."

Selectman Rocco Laugelle said the selectmen will not act under any time constraints, but he told Atty. Collins a lease should be prepared within days. Atty. Collins told selectmen he could have three appraisals in 24 hours, and questioned why it was taking so long.

Selectman Laugelle said they may be able to sign a lease as early as Wednesday, Nov. 4 or by Monday, Nov. 9.

In other business, selectmen approved the consolidation of the Cohasset cable studio with Scituate's studio in a North Scituate location.

Under the terms of the contract signed four years ago by selectmen, they must approve any changes. According to American Cablesystems General Manager Stephen Farquhar, there will be increased office hours at the new location, and increased personnel because of the consolidation. "I can't point to any disadvantages for Cohasset," he said, noting the distance will be the only problem associated with the change.

The new cable studio will be open four nights a week, as opposed to the two nights in Cohasset. There will be more staff members available, and the management will also have their offices there. The new cable studio will be located on Gannett Road, next to the North Scituate Post Office.

Selectman Gallagher, a former member of the local cable advisory committee, said he was disappointed with the lack of community programming in Cohasset. Farquhar explained that in a smaller community, there are likely to be less volunteers to produce the programs. Community television, he said, is mainly an organization of volunteers supported by a cable staff member. He said the studio still provides regularly-scheduled workshops to train residents in cable production.

Selectmen approved the move, adding that it was contingent on "the facilities being at least as extensive as those in Cohasset now."

In other business, selectmen will ask that a dangerous intersection sign be installed at the corner of Pleasant Street and Cushing Road, and that two crosswalks are painted at the intersection to warn drivers about the precarious corner. Selectman Laugelle said he will talk to property owners about cutting back hedges that obscure the drivers' vision at that corner. Also,

- selectmen voted to abate nine ambulance bills that totaled $217. There is one bill they will still attempt to collect;

- selectmen decided to accept a donation from the sale of lottery tickets during the week of Nov. 15-21 from Tedeschi's Food Shops. The proceeds will be used to sponsor the recreation department's annual Easter egg hunt.

-selectmen did not take any action on a request from Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray's office to reduce the driving speed on a section of Rte. 3A near Jonathan Livingston Square. Local traffic accident reports do not support the contention that more accidents occur there.

INTRODUCING

Dr. Ronald E. Wuotila
Chiropractor

Please allow me to introduce myself to the town of Hanover and it's surrounding communities. I am originally from the South Shore area and graduated from Palmer College of Chiropractic in Davenport, Iowa. I have received extensive pre and post graduate training at the Gonstead Clinic of chiropractic in Mount Horeb, Wisconsin which specializes in the treatment and care of patients with structural problems of the spine. My practical experience includes six years of clinical work treating patients for various spinal related conditions utilizing X-ray analysis and a specific adjusting technique.

Being a licensed Chiropractor in the state of Massachusetts, I did an extensive demographic study of the South Shore region and decided the town of Hanover was centrally located to service patients from many communities. My new office is conveniently located on Route 53, one and one half miles south of the Hanover Mall exit 13. To aquaint you with our newly opened office and all that Chiropractic care has to offer, my staff and I would like to provide to you or another family member, a spinal examination absolutely FREE. This examination (a $35.00 value) will include an orthopedic test, neurological test, blood pressure check, spinal alignment check, examination for restricted or excess motion in the spine, muscle strengthness test, and a private consultation with the Doctor to discuss the results.

Historical Society annual meeting Nov. 19

The Cohasset Historical Society's Annual Meeting with catered dinner and special evening program will be held Thursday, Nov. 19 at the Unitarian Parish House.

A social hour will start at 6 p.m. catered dinner at 6:45 p.m., then, following a short business meeting there will be a special program featuring a diversity of examples from the Society's museum collection.

Returning to Cohasset where she worked this past summer is the Society's gown and fabrics consultant, Madelyn Shaw. Madelyn will talk about the extensive and unique gown collection owned by the Society, and examples of some of the gowns, mostly from the 19th century will be displayed. The Society's collection of fine gowns, childrens' clothing and accessories is unusually extensive and forms one of the important historical assets of the community.

Following Madelyn's presentation, Society Senior Curator David Wadsworth will present some of the unique artworks and artifacts the true identity of which has but recently come to light in the Society's museums. Extensive inventories and accompanying research, including visits to Cohasset by persons having specialized knowledge of various fields of historical collecting, has turned up some surprising results with the identifying of a number of museum items the true significance of which had not been recorded.

This special evening devoted to the Society's own collections promises to give an unusual, and informative, glimpse at some of the Society's most significant holdings.

The fall catered dinner features catering by Jessica, and the menu includes sherried beef and wild rice, vegetables, and lemon delight dessert. Reservations for the dinner and evening program are $10, payable in advance only, to the Cohasset Historial Society, 14 Summer Street, Cohasset Ma 02025. Members and friends of the Society should find this unusual evening program to be both informative and entertaining.

Obituary

Scott Gilmore

A concelebrated funeral Mass was held Thursday, Nov. 5 at St. Anthony's Church for Scott W. Gilmore, 28, who died Friday, Oct. 29 of a heart attack. He was in Mexico City where he was serving a six-month internship.

Burial was in Gloucester Hill Cemetery in New Gloucester, Maine.

Mr. Gilmore was a graduate student in international administration and was a former member of the Peace Corps. He was a student at the School for International Training, the Experiment in International Living in Brattleboro, Vt. He was an English teacher for the Berlitz Language Center Inc. in Mexico City.

From 1982 to 1984, he served in the Peace Corps in Sierra Leone, West Africa. He spent another year in the village of Kabala where he served as an agricultural office and regional director for ACRE, a State Department agency which sends agricultural advisers to developing countries.

A lifelong Cohasset resident, Mr. Gilmore was a graduate of Cohasset High School. He spent many summers in Pemaquid and Wayne, Maine.

Mr. Gilmore received a degree in political science from the University of Maine at Orono, where he played football and was a member of the Kappa Sigma Fraternity.

He leaves his parents, Albert Field Gilmore Jr. and Nancy (Millis) Gilmore of Cohasset; two sisters, Alison Field Marchese of Saco, Maine and Lindsay Alden Gilmore of Portland, Maine; his grandmother, Mae (Blake) Gilmore of East Walpole; his fiance, Mireya Salazar of Mexico City; an aunt, uncle and several cousins.

He was the grandson of the late George William and Doris (Savage) Millis and Albert Field Gilmore Sr.

Memorial donations may be made to Oxfam-America Inc., African Famine Relief, 115 Broadway, Boston.

Finding the right financing for your new home can be like a chess game—sorting out the options, studying the competition, taking risks. Unfortunately, many home buyers are treated like pawns by their bank or mortgage company. Moved around, with limited range and little choice about their fate.

At Braintree Savings Bank, we know that buying a home is not a game. You'll have a personal mortgage representative at your side from application to closing. A variety of fixed or adjustable rate mortgages to consider. And we won't play games with our competitive rates. We'll work with you to arrange the best financing for your needs, both now and in the future.

Avoid a mortgage checkmate. Call Braintree Savings Bank today at 843-9100 or toll-free at 1-800-634-0103. We'll be glad to meet with you at a convenient time and place. And make you feel like a king. Offices: 865 Washington Street, South Shore Plaza, Quintree Mall, Granite Plaza.

'ARE YOU BETTER OFF NOW THAN . . . ?'

Candidate Ronald Reagan used a very effective campaign statement in 1980 when he repeated the question, "Are you better off now than you were four years ago?"

A similar question was used in a recent Wall St. Journal/ NBC News poll.

The Journal ran stories about the "splintering" of the middle class and the "general anxiety" about the nation's economic future. In conjunction with the stories, the newspaper ran a chart based on the question, "compared with 5 yrs. ago, do you think it is now more or less difficult for middle-class people to maintain their standard of living?"

The surprising answer: 65% of those interviewed replied, "more difficult." Those replying "less difficult" total 22%.

OPTIMISM AND ILLNESS:

A recent study at Harvard University suggests optimism in thinking and speaking may help protect the body and mind from harm. Research has also found that pessimistic thinking may actually harm your immune system. Such studies add more credence to the old addage about the power of positive thinking.

Pessimists develop an attitude of "I surrender" and appear less likely to take care of themselves properly. This can lead to poor health. Evidence from different studies also tend to show that people tend to stick to one style of thinking throughout their lives. The good news is that whatever may be the cause of pessimistic thinking can be changed. Altering pessimistic thinking about events can change one's pattern to a more optimistic view.

PSO Teacher Grants Awards

PSO (Parent School Organization) President Letitia Jordan is pleased to announce this is the second year the PSO has been able to bring the Teacher Grant Program to Cohasset teachers.

Learning is enhanced and enriched by the use of supplementary materials and aids in the classroom. The purpose of the Teacher Grant Program is to purchase such items. Due to the enthusiastic response, the number of teacher requests was greater than our funds will allow this year.

"We are proud of this program and feel that this is an excellent way to use funds donated by Cohasset parents." said PSO President, Jordan.

President Jordan congratulates the following teachers on being awarded grants for their particular projects which will be funded from the PSO treasury.

School news

Kindergarten 'C' words

Class cuties brought in "C" words to Marie Price's Kindergarten. Jessica Niessink brought in pictures, recipes and real cranberries from Ocean Spray Cranberry World. We had a visit from a small leather camel brought in by Sean Ian O'Hara. Our science tote has a chirping cricket caught by Ethan Begley. The class is waiting to see David Michael's cut carrot top grow. All are having a great experience using Matthew Pilczak's computer tapes.

Last Week, sparkly "B's" were made and worn by Brianne McKenney and Benjamin Peterson. This week Caitlin Donovan and Caitlin Stansell were spotted proudly wearing their glittering "C's."

Upcoming dates:

Sat. Nov. 7 - Sat/Ach Coh. High School Cafe,
Wed. Nov. 11 - Holiday/Veterans Day;
Thurs. Nov. 19 - Release Day - 12:40 Dismissal;
Wed. Nov. 25 - Thanksgiving Recess/Early Dismissal.

Natural Science Center activities

Enjoy the wonders of autumn in New England by participating in a natural history program at South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell.

LUDDUM'S FORD

Bring the family for a Sunday stroll along the North River. This beautiful site is home to many unusual plants and animals. Join naturalist Barbara Devine for this walk on Sunday, Nov. 8 from 1 to 3 p.m. Meet at the Natural Science Center and wear good walking shoes. Pre-paid registration required (members/$3; non-members/$4). Call 659-2559 for registration information.

WHITNEY WOODS WALK

Catch the last of autumn's color in Whitney Woods. Sheltered from the elements, the foliage colors last a little long here. Enjoy a morning of beauty as you learn a little of the geology and ecology of the area. Barbara Devine leads this adult/family walk on Monday, Nov. 9 from 9 a.m. to noon. Pre-paid registration required (members/$4; non-members/$5). Call 659-2559.

After long hours, tired committee members quit

By Bob Tis
Mariner staff

"Maybe we didn't explain it well enough."

Charlie DeSantis, a member of the athletic field renovation committee, offered that as a reason the town rejected their plans to improve Lillard and Milliken fields.

"But we would have been opening up between three and six acres without spending a penny. We also would have a new game sight at Milliken field," he noted.

The athletic field renovation committee formally voted to disband last Wednesday, Nov. 4, in the wake of town meeting's to revamp the field behind the high school.

"It hurts to be hit from both sides," said Peter Laugelle of the committee. Board members were disappointed that they did not receive more support from the recreation department and the conservation committee.

"The thing that I don't understand," said Ken Ekberg, chairman of the former committee, "is that everbody supports it. I don't think people understand how expensive it is to build a field."

Board members agreed to make the $40,000 worth of plans available to a new board if selectmen choose to create one.

"As far as being an active member, I don't think that we are interested, but we will be able to participate and assist in any way possible," said Laugelle.

"It definitely hurts," said Ekberg. "I don't believe it was a matter of opposition. I think the reasons people voted against it was more political and fiscal."

Town meeting voted 305 in favor of the renovation to 221 against, 45 votes short of a needed two-thirds majority.

"The timing was right," said Clark Chatterton. "All of the fall sports teams have been doing very well. People have been very enthusiastic."

Moderator stands by his decision

By Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

Despite protests sounded by some selectmen and a number of residents, Town Moderator William Weeks stands by his decision to issue a revote at the Oct. 26 special town meeting.

The issue at question is Moderator Weeks' decision to order a second vote regarding a proposal to renovate the police and fire station. A two-thirds majority was necessary for approval of the $1.1 million appropriation. But when a hand vote indicated 160 residents were in favor of the article and 81 were against, the moderator held an impromptu discussion with town counsel and selectmen.

Following the five-minute huddle, Moderator Weeks called for a second vote. This time, the proposal was approved by a 166-77 vote; the two-thirds margin necessary to pass the article.

"I know there has been some question about that vote," Moderator Weeks said, adding he had not been contacted by selectmen Martha Gjesteby and Burtram Pratt, the two town officials who have publicly stated their opposition to Weeks' decision. "But there were some questions that night when we completed the first vote. Technically, we needed 160.667 votes for passage

Officials say rail still on track

Although an environmental review has been delayed a few months, the general manager of the Old Colony Railroad project is confident the train's revival will move forward.

"It hasn't been a simple two years," Stephen Polechronis said this week, referring to the lengthy studies conducted by the MBTA and the Citizens' Advisory Committee (CAC). "But so many people on the South Shore have been involved in a constructive way. The CAC is making sure this project will be done in a responsible fashion. They haven't given us a blank check for anything. I don't expect it will be simple from here, either."

In an interview with the Mariner this week, Polechronis explained that an environmental impact draft report on the three proposed Old Colony routes will be delayed until this winter in an attempt to synchronize both the state and federal permit process.

A recent top-level change at the Urban Mass Transportation Administration (UMTA) also spelled a change in the enthusiastic support given to the Old Colony project by former UMTA chief Ralph Stanley. The new federal administrator must be convinced, as Stanley was before him, that the Old Colony project is vital to the communities of this region, Polechronis stated. A good sign that the feds will continue their support, he added, is a provision within the Service Transportation Act which requires periodic reports on all "major projects" of national proportion - the Old Colony plan is among those.

Notice to the Taxpayers

The fiscal 1988 real estate tax bills were mailed Nov. 6. The first-half payment is due in the collector's office at or before 4:30 p.m., Monday, Dec. 7, 1987. For any payments received after Dec. 7, interest will be computed at 14 percent from Nov. 6.

Any property owner who has not received a tax bill should contact the collector's office at the town hall, 383-0611. Failure to receive a tax bill does not waive payment of the tax and does not excuse the homeowner from interest charges on payments received after the due date.

This is the second year that the town has liened delinquent water and sewer charges. The amount of the lien is added to the first-half tax and is subject to the same penalties if not paid by the due date.

The treasure-collector's office now has a post office box, No. 296, to be used for the payment of all taxes and water charges due the town.

Town hall hours: Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.; Thursday, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and 5:30 p.m. to 8 p.m.; Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Salvador pay recommended

The personnel board has recommended that former sewer treatment plant supervisor Manuel Salvador be reimbursed by the town for accrued vacation days and sick leave.

The personnel board members present at the Oct. 6 grievance hearing also recommended that Salvador be granted $150 in longevity pay "because his sick leave, if granted, would extend his status as a paid employee beyond July 1, 1987 and therefore he is entitled to one halfa year longevity pay."

The board voted that Salvador was entitled to 19 days of accrued sick leave which he had not taken prior to his termination of employment. The board wote, "this decision was based upon the fact that Mr. Salvador was on sick leave at the time the job was eliminated and continued unable to work due to illness for at least the number of days to which he would have been entitled had the position not been eliminated."

Salvador's position as treatment plant supervisor was eliminated by the sewer commission last winter. Since that time, the town's sewer treatment plant has been operated by York Water Consultants.

Studds in Cohasset Nov. 14

Rep. Gerry Studds will meet with his constituents Saturday, Nov. 14 from 3 to 4 p.m. at the town hall. Residents are invited to attend this informal meeting with the Congressman.

He will meet with selectmen following that meeting, from 4 to 4:30 p.m. at the town hall.

Earlier that day, at 10:30 a.m., selectmen and members of the town hall study committee, will participate in an official groundbreaking ceremony for the town hall addition.

Parking ban begins Nov. 15

Police Chief Joseph Kealey reminds all motorists there is an all night parking ban in effect beginning Nov. 15.

According to town bylaw, it is unlawful for any driver, other than those in an emergency, to park a vehicle on any street for more than one hour between 2 a.m. and 6 a.m. The ban goes into effect Nov. 15 and is lifted March 15.

Fill must be removed

The conservation commission has warned a Beach Street resident to remove all fill on his property, and to file a notice of intent regarding his plans for the land. The commission members warned Neil Kaplan in a second letter written Oct. 31, that if action is not immediately undertaken, they will seek fines against him.

The commission letter stated that in a previous letter written in April, they issued an order of conditions for a "free form gunite swimming pool." But Nov. 18, the commission cited Kaplan for "improper protection of the marshland, excessive filling, and impervious material used near the marsh in violation of our Order of Conditions issued Aug. 8, 1986."

In addition, the commission noted that fines may be charged to violators of the wetlands protection act, and court action may be sought against those persons.

The commission stated that if a letter of intent to comply with the wetlands regulations is not immediately forwarded, and if the fill is not removed from the property before it is sold, legal action will be sought against the property owner.

Industrial park proposal

There is a proposal to develop an industrial park on 57 acres of land off Crocker Lane and Rte. 3A.

Whitney Park includes land now owned by four different parties, and includes a portion of the commercial landfill, Cohasset Heights Ltd. The land owners include John and Paul Barry, and Crocker II Realty Trust, William F. Coyne and Herbert S. Alexander, trustees, and Steven and Judith Ward.

According to plans filed with the town, the industrial park would be divided into five lots, with sizes from two acres to 47 acres. Entrance to the park would be gained from Rte. 3A to Crocker Lane. That road would be relocated so the entrance is opposite the redesigned King Street intersection.

Questions on town meeting vote . .

of the article. That is two-thirds of 241 - the number of voters in attendance.

"I discussed the vote with town counsel and selectmen. We concluded that for a matter as important as this, it would be unfair to all concerned to have this issue decided by a fraction of a vote. So I decided to have a second vote on the matter."

The town official, who explained that the moderator has broad powers within the bylaws to govern town meeting, noted, "I wouldn't have made my choice if it was not within my power to do that."

Monday night, selectmen tabled the appointment of the police/fire building committee until a full board is present at a future meeting. Martha Gjesteby and Burt Pratt voted not to approve the committee because of the question over the legitimacy of the vote at town meeting.

"There is no doubt in my mind that the vote failed," said Pratt. "I am not going to sign an agreement until that is cleared up."

"You are wrong," replied selectmen Rocco Laugelle. "Town counsel said it was legal and that the moderator had all the right in the world to call for another vote."

"He told me that he thought that the motion had been defeated," said Martha Gjesteby.

"I called him to make it official," said Laugelle referring to town counsel Richard Henderson. "He said everything was legal and he recommended we go forward. Also the bond counsel had no problem certifying bonds for the way it was and they really look into things. I don't think that they would have given the go-ahead if they were not sure."

The board decided to wait until a full board was present to break the tie vote. They also instructed executive secretary Don Andrew to have a written statement from town counsel concerning the matter for Monday's meeting.

"I would would reconsider if I thought that the community voted for it, which I sincerely doubt," said Burt Pratt.

Roy Fitzsimmons of Doane Street posed several questions to town meeting about the renovation plan. He is equally disturbed with the procedure used by the moderator to order a second vote on the matter.

"That vote was outrageous," he said, referring to the revote. "The first vote clearly indicated it was not a two-thirds majority and the article should have failed. The moderator seemed to be confused by the first vote, and then we had to take a second vote.

"Previously I had asked for a reconsideration of the vote to appropriate money for the athletic fields. It was denied. I thought this was a democracy - a right we have."

Fitzsimmons, a former member of the ambulance study committee, said he wanted to delay the article until the annual town meeting in April. "I thought we should wait until the fire department contract was settled. There's a question about central dispatching for the two departments, and there's some doubt about whether we should abolish sleeping at the fire station and maintaining eight-hour shifts. There are still too many questions and not enough information to be spending $1.1 million on this project," he said.

Simple mathematics, Fitzsimmons said, would clearly demonstrate that the first vote, 160-81, is not a two-thirds majority. "It lost," he said, "and I just don't think you can order a second vote when it lost the first time."

The longtime Cohasset resident said he "doesn't know what can be done" to protest the vote. "Maybe the Attorney General's office can investigate the matter, or maybe it's the town's bylaws that need to be challenged.

"It bothers me because I don't know where the town stands," he added. "The town's attorney should study this. I'm quite upset - where do the people of this town stand - in left field?"

Henry O'Connell, an attorney in the state Attorney General's office, was not available for comment until the end of the week.

Moderator Weeks, an attorney, said no one in town has discussed the possibility of bringing the controversy before the attorney general. "This is news to me," he said, when he learned of Selectman Gjesteby's proposal to have the state review the Oct. 26 vote. "Bear in mind that action on all articles at any town meeting is subject to the Attorney Genreal's review. I think he does not review the procedure, however, but rather he reviews the legality of an article.

"Were my actions proper at town meeting? Absolutely. I would not have made the decision to take a second vote if it wasn't the proper thing to do. I only made that decision after discussing the situation with town counsel and selectmen," Moderator Weeks noted.

Republican Club to meet

The South Shore Republican Club will meet Monday, Nov. 16, at the Norwell Grange Hall on Route 123, Main Street at South Street.

Pembroke members will be hostesses at a noon luncheon, followed by a business meeting. At 1 p.m., Mary Knapp, a member of the Pairpoint Cup Plate Collectors' Society of America, will give a talk on her collection.

Public invited to comment on state park plan

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

A ten-year projection plan for Wompatuck State Park will be discussed at a public meeting Thursday, Nov. 19.

Public comment regarding the plan will be solicited from the state Department of Environmental Management (DEM) at that meeting. The plan caps off 18 months of study by DEM officials and community members of the Wompatuck advisory council.

"The purpose of the meeting is to let residents of the surrounding communities know what our recommendations are for the future management of the park," DEM spokesman Andrew Backman said. "This study is the result of what DEM and the advisory council has decided during the past year and a-half.

The management plan, according to Backman, addresses the issues of land management, including the 604 acres recently obtained from the federal government; additional recreational opportunities; maintenance of trails; natural resource management; and Mt. Blue Spring.

The plan does not address the issue of a secondary vehicle access road into the park. "That was incorporated into this plan," Backman noted, "because that is an on-going study. We have hired traffic consultants who are presently assessing the conditions at the park, and determining future conditions. That issue will be addressed after this plan has been finalized."

According to the park spokesman, the traffic plan will be completed within a year and a-half. A report will be issued, based on the traffic consultants' findings. A second public hearing will follow that report.

Wompatuck Park includes 3,500 acres of state-owned property situated within the towns of Hingham, Cohasset, Norwell and Scituate.

As a result of a previous public hearing, and meetings of the park's advisory council, several issues were listed as priorities within the ten-year plan. Among those issues were: management of former GSA land. Recently the state park acquired 604 acres of former federally-owned property. Eventually, the park management would like to link existing trails in the park to roads and paths within the 604 acres. This will require demolition of vandalized structures and removal of debris.

Another focus of the management plan will be to increase recreation opportunities. A diversity of outdoor recreation opportunities is needed at Wompatuck, officials stated. They also determined that water-based activities at the campground and the reservoir are particularly lacking. More open areas for play and picnicking are needed, and more could be done with environmental education programs within the visitor center.

According to park officials, forestry, fisheries management, wildlife management and watershed management have been minimal or nonexistent. Active, ongoing management programs will enhance the appearance of the park and protect those sites within Wompatuck considered unique.

Regarding trails at the park, officials noted that signs must be upgraded and standardized marking and blazing must be undertaken along the trails.

The Mount Blue Spring attracts more visitors to the park than any other feature. Therefore, officials noted, the spring and the adjacent parking lot are often overcrowded. Long waiting lines and parking congestion need control and responsive management. Site attendants, increased parking, and monitoring quantities extracted from the spring have been recommended.

A suggested fee for the spring water needs further study, officials stated.

Park officials have listed several recommendations for the future management of the state facility. Among those recommendations are: to reduce the hazards at former structures by removal of debris, demolition of unwanted buildings and salvage operations.

Among the suggested improvements is to upgrade the access for fishing only to the west portion of the reservoir, and to monitor each of the reservoir activities with staff increases and regular patrols.

They also recommend developing a swimming area between electric and non-electric areas and providing a picnic area for group use, with a pavilon and adequate parking.

Among the programs planned for the park is a recommendation to hire a year-round naturalist to design, conduct and publicize programs for the public. Park officials also would like to hire a seasonal naturalist to conduct programs during peak user months.

Regarding watershed management, officials have recommended that the Mount Hope and Prospect Hill areas should be closely monitored during the spring, and after periods of rain. Other areas with possible erosion problems should also be monitored, they suggested.

Maintenance of the southeast portion of the camping area should be monitored to limit or minimize runoff or erosion to the Mount Blue Spring.

Park officials determined that if parcels of land adjacent to Wompatuck become available, they should be pursued for possible purchase. There are several parcels, including 126 acres of federal GSA land, that would enhance opportunities for outdoor recreation and resource management, if purchased by the park.

Tired members quit . . .

"I don't know that this group can do any better," said Ekberg. The members felt that the fact the town will possibly be facing a Proposition two and a-half override might affect a future vote.

"I don't think we can get another bid this low," said Chatterton.

A bid from Doherty Construction came in $80,000 less than any of the other bids. Committe members' research found Doherty to be a highly-praised company.

The committee has until the end of this month to ask the construction company to keep the bid alive for another six months. It is still unresolved as to whether or not anyone will choose to tackle this project for the annual town meeting in April.

It was the consensus of the board that a broader-based committee might be more successful.

In a letter to selectmen, Ekberg explained that the group was disappointed they could not generate enough community support. The committee asked selectmen, to "either by acting on its own or by appointing another replacement committee to examine the need; review the existing plans, specs, bid documents and the selected bid proposal; and either modify, create a new plan, or utilize our proposal as is for adoption by the community at a subsequent town meeting."

"I would like to see them stay on for another shot in the spring," said selectman Jim Gallagher at Monday night's meeting.

"I would like to see each member resign individually," said selectman Martha Gjesteby.

Gallagher suggested that a new committee might have some more representation from the recreation commission, as well as any members of the present board that might be interested in remaining.

"If they want to resign, it might be better to get a fresh look," said selectman Burt Pratt.

Rail officials say Old Colony on track . . .

"Now that we have the feds studying this project again, we have to slow down on our state permitting process," he explained, "so the state permits and the federal aid can all come together."

In the meantime, he said, MBTA officials and their consultants will keep in close contact with the affected communities through the CAC, planning boards, selectmen and conservation commissions. "We'll still be reporting to them about proposed station siting," he said, "so we know what's going on within the communities and they will have the opportunity to tell us what they are thinking."

At this moment, according to the project manager, the MBTA is pushing forward on several fronts. Two-thirds of the station sites have been selected, he said, although some original sites were abandoned or changed following comments and recommendations from local residents and officials.

"Working with the communities, local businesspeople and officials, we saw an impact each station site would have within that particular community,' Polechronis noted. "One such instance was our original plan to put a station in historic Hingham Square. With input from the planning board, businesspeople and selectmen, we hunted for a new site."

Two station sites are proposed for Hingham, including one near Hingham Lumber Co. on Rte. 3A near Summer and Kilby streets, and a second smaller station in West Hingham off of Beal Street.

In East Weymouth, project consultants are still still searching for a suitable site. A proposed station on Commercial Street across from Mass. Electric has received less than enthusiastic support from residents and local officials. "Our studies have shown this will be a reasonably good site, although many people fear a station there may exacerbate the traffic problem. We have more work to do there," he commented.

> "The transportation situation on the South Shore cries out for additional choices. There are a number of environmental issues involved with this project, but on the whole the pluses far outweigh anything we can come up with against this plan."
> Stephen Polechronis
> Old Colony Railroad, project manager

The Plymouth and Middleboro lines are still in the research stages also, the project manager said. According to Polechronis, the Hanson to Plymouth line could begin in 1990 and end in 1993, with a park and ride station site constructed in Kingston during the second phase of that project. The Braintree route should near construction completion by the end of 1991. Construction of the Greenbush branch and the Braintree to Boston extension of the Old Colony network should start in mid-1990, with completion about 1993.

Service on all three branches of the Old Colony line to South Station in Boston could be available by the end of 1993.

The ideal service, according to the project manager, would be five trains on the half-hour from 6:30 to 8 a.m. each weekday, and again from 5:30 to 7 p.m. In between those hours, the diesel-powered commuter trains would be available every one and a-half to two hours.

"We are not planning to locate the Red Line down here," he said, noting that new technology is designed with an ear toward quieter transportation. Air quality will not suffer with the arrival of the commuter rail, he promised, noting that the exhaust from an entire length of a train is not comparable to the carbon monoxide emitted from a single car.

"Our biggest hurdle, " he stated, "is clearly that this is an area (Greenbush) more densely developed - more than Middleboro or Plymouth. I believe the environmental studies will show that we can do this project. For people unfamiliar with rail service, we can demonstrate that this will be a positive feature. But it takes time to get that message across."

Once the environmental impact report is drafted and public comment is solicited, members of the CAC will have 30 days to review the document. They will add their comments to the statement and the draft report will be made available to the local conservation commissions, selectmen, town clerks and libraries. There will be an additional 30 days for public comment.

James Hoyte, secretary of the Department of Environmental Affairs, will review the document and all public comments, and will instruct the MBTA and its consultants to answer all suggestions and comments. More work may have to be added to the report before the document is finalized. Once the final report is accepted by Secretary Hoyte, all necessary permits to begin constrction will be in place, "hopefully, along with the federal money," Polechronis said.

"The transportation situation on the South Shore cries out for additional choices," he stated. "There are a number of environmental issues involved with this project, but on the whole, the pluses far outweigh anything we can come up with against this plan."

Straight talk—Jane Goedecke

By Bob Tis
Mariner staff

What is the most important role of the advisory committee?

I think that the most important thing that we do is help the town departments plan their budgets and oversee the overall budget process.

Are you worried about facing a Proposition 2 1/2 overide?

I am not at all concerned about approaching a general override. A general override is an override which covers the operating expenses of a town. It is an override of the entire operating budget for a year. That generally means you are going to override every subsequent year because operating budgets never go down. That is a more drastic move, one that very few towns in this state have passed. Cohasset is not at all in danger of having to face that. I think that we will need to seriously consider whether or not we want to overide to exclude debt in the future.

What is the biggest issue facing us now?

I still think the biggest issues are our sewer and our solid waste transfer station. I think that because they are not so exciting that people don't want to think about them. It is like having to replace your septic field. People talk about digging a hole in a field and throwing money in and covering it with dirt. That is exactly what we would be doing. But we have to do it.

Do you think the board is, as Rocky Laugelle has said, close to the belt?

Close to the belt or tightwads? I'm not sure what he meant, maybe both. I think that the role of an advisory commission is to be conservative. The emotions of people at a town meeting get the better of their more conservative common sense. The advisory commission has to weigh all of the needs of the town and try to weigh them objectively. Townspeople don't always do that and I am not saying they should. Everyone should vote on what is important to them. The advisory commission has to put aside their desires and look at what is best for the whole town and I think therefore it must take a conservative approach.

At town meeting some people pointed the finger at the advisory board for the deterioration of some of the town buildings. How do you feel about this?

I almost spoke, but I didn't want it to become a confrontation at town meeting. I can't speak for past boards. What I would have said if I did speak is that while I can't defend any previous boards before Proposition two and a-half came in I certainly know what has happened since, in a time where every year, salaries and wages increase by contract or by our own personnel system. They increase 5 or 6 percent each year and the town's budget can only increase 2 1/2 percent or so. The difference has to come from somewhere. It is a fact.

Jane Goedecke is chairman of the advisory board in Cohasset. She lives in a beautiful house, on Nichols Road, like the one in the movie Garp, with her husband, Peter, and her two children. Jane has lived in town for twelve years and is an alumnia of Wellesley College.

People deserve salary increases. Inflation is continuing. I would not say that those raises were not correct. It is interesting that a lot of the people that spoke at town meeting were town employees who benefit from the raises. The money has to come from somewhere to pay these raises and the easiest place, unfortunately, for the money to come from is building maintenance, because it doesn't hurt anyone immediately.

What is your favorite part about living in Cohasset, and working on the boards?

Well, my favorite part of living in Cohasset is the physical beauty, but also the people. For a suburban town it has more diversity than a lot of places and I appreciate that.

My favorite part of participating on the boards is that I am not working. I have small children. But at the same time I want to be challenged and I want to contribute. It is a perfect way for me to do that, without having a regular job. The advisory committee takes so much time and commitment that it is very difficult for people with full time jobs to serve. I feel that because I don't have to work right now I am a good person for the job. I get a lot from the advisory committee because I find it challenging and rewarding. I also enjoy all the people that it allows me to meet.

What measures did you take to regulate the new Stop & Shop?

The advisory committee is not a proactive body. It can only act on measures presented to it. The board reacts in one of two ways. It can transfer money from the reserve fund or as an article at town meeting. We can take a position on zoning articles. We did not take a position on Stop & Shop, that is not our role. We could take a position, for instance, on whether or not 3A should be rezoned.

So you are more of a policy-oriented board?

Yes, we can advise the town on how we think they should vote on zoning articles. We are sometimes called upon to pay the legal fees for positions that other boards have taken.

What is the situation with Tupelo road?

One of our members who spoke at town meeting said, "We don't want to see it closed because we use the road every day." Then there was a hearty laugh in the crowd and everybody knew it was a joke. I am sorry if Mr. Rassmussen didn't take it that way. In fact the committee didn't vote to recommend the article because it would set an unfortunate precident in the town for closing roads, simply because residents do not like to see too many cars driving on their streets. Almost every street in this town is a residential street with children. We cannot protect every street from traffic. To close Tupelo road will put additional traffic on Pond Street which has a school and many houses. That is the reason we voted against it. One of our members thought that if this passed his street might be next. We thought that it might create a snowball effect.

The reason that we did not approve the transfer request was because it was presented to the town as a no-cost article, with absolutely no cost to the town. We believe that the town voted for it on that basis. For them to come back and ask for money changes the intent of the article. Also we don't think that it goes along with the think that the advisory committee will approve any money for the closing of Tupelo Road.

desire of town meeting. Our feeling was that we would be acting beyond the wishes of the town. Also the transfer fund is for extraordinary and emergency items. We did not think that it fit into that category. I do not

Do you think that the board should be appointed or elected?

That is a big question and it has come up before. I know that in Connecticut where my husband and I are from all of the financial boards are elected. It is inconceivable to them that this board is appointed. I much prefer it this way. First of all I don't know if I would ever run for office. It takes a different sort of a person, a different sort of motivation in some respect, to run for an elected office, than to agree to serve on an appointed board. We are free to vote our minds. We are not free to vote our hearts though. We feel a great responsibility. We can vote what we feel is best for the town. We don't have to worry about how people will react and if we will be re-elected.

Do you see any major issue facing the board in the future?

Well I certainly hope that the Milliken field isssue is not a dead issue. We all hope that it wil come back. Cohasset Heights is going to take a lot of time and a lot of money. The scary thing is that we don't know what is coming.

Men of Harmony to install officers Nov. 21

Massachusetts' largest barbershop chorus, the South Shore Men of Harmony, under the direction of Phil Carter, Hingham, will install their newly elected officers Saturday, Nov. 21, at 8 p.m., at the Lantana, Randolph for the barbershopers' 50th anniversary year, 1988.

Ernest Johansen, Northeastern District President of the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quartet Singing in America, Inc., (S.P.E.B.S.Q.S.A.), will be the installing officer.

Elected officers are president, Jerry Diegel of Scituate; vice president, Bob Lewis of Hingham; program vice president, John Brennan of Bryantville; member-at-large, Bob Schmitt of Holbrook, Clayton Stone, past president in 1966 and 1969, will be music vice president.

Outgoing president Al Willis of Randolph served while the membership swelled to more than 100, and the chorus regained the Division IV Championship they first won in 1984.

A social hour will be at 7:30 p.m. with a roast beef dinner at 8 p.m. followed by dancing to the popular group, "Pleasure Principle."

The South Shore Men of Harmony was formed in 1951 by Len Linnehan of Scituate, and he received the charter from national for the 20 men in November, first known as the "Scituate Harbormen."

☐ Corey DeSantis seems to be carrying on the DeSantis tradition in soccer...she is doing a good job for the CHS soccer team, and she's only a freshman! Keep up your good work Corey!

☐ The Winterland Rink ISAA first team competition was held recently, and we sure can be proud of the Cohasset contingent! Kim Ward won a 4th for freestyle 3 and a second for spotlight 3; Michelle Ward won 6th for freestyle 1; Michelle Buckley won a 1st in freestyle 1, a first in spotlight, and a first in footwork; Marisol Perry won 4th in freestyle 4; Kara Protulis on a second in freestyle 4, first in spotlight 4 and second in footwork 4; and, Lauren Wood won 2nd in freestyle 4, second in spotlight 4, third in footwork 4, and 2nd in couples 3. Excellent job, girls!

☐ When you are looking through this month's Town and Country Magazine, be sure to look at the beautiful wedding picture of Mr. and Mrs. Craig C. Ostranders. It's super (even though they did spell Cohasset wrong!!).

☐ A little update on the D.A.R. project, sending boys to Hillside School. It will work for any Campbell product, from soup, to Swanson Meat Pies to Franco American Sphaghetti. Just save the front portion of the labels from all the canned food products, the "Swanson Triangles" on the front of the dinner, and the Purchase Confirmation Seals on Recipe Dog Food Treats and Dinner Rounds. Save what you can and send them to Ann Pompeo, Box E, Cohasset Mass. The boys that she and the DAR are helping will certainly thank you.

☐ Nicole Y. Prisble, daughter of Daniel and Yvonne Prisble, has enrolled as a freshman at Northwestern University for the 1987-88 academic year.

She is enrolled in the College of Arts and Sciences.

A graduate of Cohasset High School, she was a member of the National Honor Society, and was yearbook advertising editor.

Selectman Burt Pratt was honored last week by the Massachusetts Republican Committee for his 40 years of service to the Cohasset Republican Town Committee. Presenting the award were Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray and Julie Guild. Hostess of the event is Republican Party Chairman, Polly Logan, (rear).

☐ It sounds like Mrs. Moody's kindergarten class is in for a lot of fun this year, and you can help. They are to learn a lot about "cooking through senses" and need measuring cups, cooking trays, spoons, 9" by 13" baking pans, bowls to mix with, etc. They are even planning a cookbook, to be "Printed" in the Spring. If your response is half of the donations that Mrs. Davis' egg carton plea received, it will be greatly appreciated!

☐ Looks as though Fall will continue for a while at CHS, the soccer team surely did an outstanding job last Sunday in their first round of Tournament competition. Keep up the good work boys!

☐ Speaking of soccer, former coach Jon Anderson was at the game to watch his boys last week. As most of you know, Jon is the soccer coach at Babson College now, and he had a unique experience happen to him a few weeks ago. Babson played Bowdoin College, and just guess who was on the Bowdoin team? Yes, Bobby Shultz . . . and, guess who scored a goal and had an assist for Bowdoin? Right again, Bobby Shultz! The two shook hands at the end of the game, a nice sight to see . . . just like the good old days at Cohasset!!

☐ Here's hoping that Mercie Nichols is recovering nicely after her recent stroke. It was a minor one, and Mercie is at home, under good care. We'll bet she'd love a card or a letter from you.

☐ This is a weekend that all have been waiting for; the Dramatic Club's production of Picnic. It will be held at the Town Hall, at 8:00 on the 13th and 14th, with a matinee on the 15th. (the senior citizens are invited at no charge to this performance). The tickets are only $4.00 (best buy in town) and may be purchased at the door or at Flemings. Among those in the cast are Jennifer Plante, who plays Millie Owens. She is a student at CHS, and is supposed to do a fabulous job in her part (which certainly is a large one). Jennifer will portray a college bound gal in a demanding and entertaining role, full of humor. Matthew Kuhn will play the role of Bomber, Millie's admirer. (Matthew comes by his acting ability honestly, his Dad always does an admirable job for the Dramatic Club.) Angi Walsh also appears in the play, as a school teacher. Should be great fun, don't miss it.

☐ Another Cohasset businessman honored recently is Bob Beggan, who was awarded a second consecutive performance in the Amtrol Co. This award is given to Amtrol's suppliers that continuously achieve a 98% performance in on-time delivery, service by salesman, quality and service by inside sales.

Cheers to the football team on their big win last Saturday. It was so cold one found it hard to watch attentively, much less play a consistant game! They did it, they won it, and they should be proud! Do your part in supporting them. Go to the game next Saturday against Bourne at 11:00 a.m. Give them a loud cheer to let them know you appreciate their time and efforts!

That's the news from here. Be sure to let us know about your latest event!

Selectmen's briefs . . .

Housing agreement okayed

Selectmen voted to sign and execute a new affordable housing agreement with the state on Monday.

"It is really not that different from the original document," said Executive Secretary Don Andrew.

Andrew explained that all of the dates have been moved up three months and minor changes have been made. The agreement requires signatures from the selectmen, the planning board and the housing authority. The planning board refused to sign the original agreement in August, citing various discrepencies in the contract. The delay made the town ineligible for state aid for local projects.

"The planning board is satisfied," said Andrew. "Over the phone the EOCD felt that the agreement was fine. It still has to be presented to them, though."

One of the changes, apparently insisted upon by the planning board, is that the title to proposed low and moderate income housing on government island remain in the town's name as opposed to the state's.

"Personally, I feel that the same thing should happen with the Bates Building," said Andrew. Selectmen agreed that keeping the Bates title to that building should be investigated.

The three boards have been trying to come to an agreement with the state for over six months.

"It has been like pulling a wisdom tooth," said Jim Gallagher, relieved that the document is finally on the way to the state.

Selectmen save tree

After a healthy debate, selectmen Rocco Laugelle and Burt Pratt were succesful in saving a fifty foot flowering arborvitae tree that is presently standing proudly beside the town hall. Impending renovation to the structure makes it necessary that the tree be either cut down or transplanted.

"I think it is one of the most beautiful trees in town," said Laugelle.

According to Pratt the tree was probably planted by a summer theatre group in the 1930's.

"Moving it will be tough. It is my opinion that it is not worth saving," said Peter Laugelle of the Tree and Park Department.

"It is a one in thousand chance that the tree will survive," said Bob Davenport of a local arboretum.

It was determined that the wood from the arborvitae, a member of the cedar family, was soft and not suitable for firewood.

After a vote to destroy the tree tied, selectman Gallagher changed position and suggested they save the tree. Gallager's new motion passed, and provided in that motion, a new arborvitae will be purchased if the present one does not live through the transplanting process.

A new site for the 50 foot arborvitae has not yet been determined.

Fire truck to be refurbished

Selectmen awarded E.J. Murphy the contract for the refurbishing and equipping of fire engine number 3, for the low bid of $39,997.

The truck, which is one of Cohasset's two best, will be out of commision for two months.

The fire truck is having work done on the engine and the transmission. An overhaul is also being done on the pump, which had been used to pump salt water. Body work is being done on the cab as well as structural work on the bumper. A foam system is also being moved onto the main control panel to make it more efficient.

Employees go home early

Selectmen voted unanimously to let town employees go home at 1 p.m. on Christmas Eve.

"I don't believe that much gets done," said Executive Secretary Don Andrew. "I think that it applies everywhere except in the retail business. I think that it is a reasonable request."

Selectmen did not approve a request from town employees to work late on Monday and Tuesday and receive the Friday after Thanksgiving off.

"A lot of people might be coming home from college and want to register to vote or conduct other business," said Martha Gjesteby.

Selectmen also did not approve a request from town employees to work a half day on New Years' Eve. Town employees will be required to work until 4:30 p.m.

Spill cleanup $30,000

Selectman Rocco Laugelle reported that as of Thursday Nov. 5 the bill for the cleanup of the recent Lily Pond oil spill is up to $30,000.

"This could double and possibly triple," said Laugelle.

The building that housed the oil was demolished and carted away this week. A substance other than oil was detected, a grease type substance. Water commissioner Ron Goodwin told the board that the oil spill has not affected the water quality going through the plant.

"I am still shocked that it was there as long as it was," said Goodwin.

Selectmen agreed to notify all departments to be watchful of stored material. Department of Environmental Quality Engineering standards have changed drastically over the past ten years. In the past, many companies would not think twice about storing a few gallons of fuel. Present regulations impose stiff fines for such activities.

Executive Secretary Don Andrew is presently looking into funding for the cleanup through possible grants from the DEQE, town insurance and other state funds.

Selectmen approve funding

Selectmen voted to approve up to $5,000 in legal funding in opposition to the Massachusetts Water Resources Agency's proposed sewage pipeline off the shores of Hull. Legal action is being organized through Hull's town counsel. Hingham and Scituate have entered into the agreement and according to Executive Secretary Don Andrew, Pembroke, Weymouth and Duxbury will also be entering into the legal opposition in the near future.

Veterans Day

Some of us are lucky; we had husbands or wives, mothers or fathers, sisters or brothers, sons or daughters, who served their country in the military service and came home.

Others were not so lucky.

Those who remember Vietnam, could not forget the agony on the faces of those who lost their kin. Those who remember World War I and World War II, cannot forget the hardships and tragedies of those long days and nights.

Today, Nov. 11, has been set aside to honor this country's veterans from all wars and from all the services. The theme for this year's observance is, "Veterans, You Are America."

There are now some 27 million living veterans who have served in uniform. And, veterans' administration records show that more than one million died during wartime service.

The figures, provided by the Veterans Administration, are startling:

• American Revolution - 290,000 participants and 4,000 deaths in service;

• War of 1812 - 287,000 participants and 2,000 deaths in service;

• Mexican War (1846 - 1848) - 79,000 participants and 13,000 deaths in service;

• Indian Wars (about 1817 to 1898) - 106,000 participants and 1,000 deaths in service;

• Civil War - 2,213,000 participants and 364,000 Union deaths and an estimated 133,821 Confederate deaths in service;

• Spanish - American War (1898 - 1902) - 392,000 participants and 11,000 deaths in service, six living veterans;

• World War I (1917 -1918) - 4,744,000 participants, 116,000 deaths in service and 171,000 living veterans;

• World War II (1940 - 1947) - 16,535,000 participants, 406,000 deaths in service and 10,076,000 living veterans;

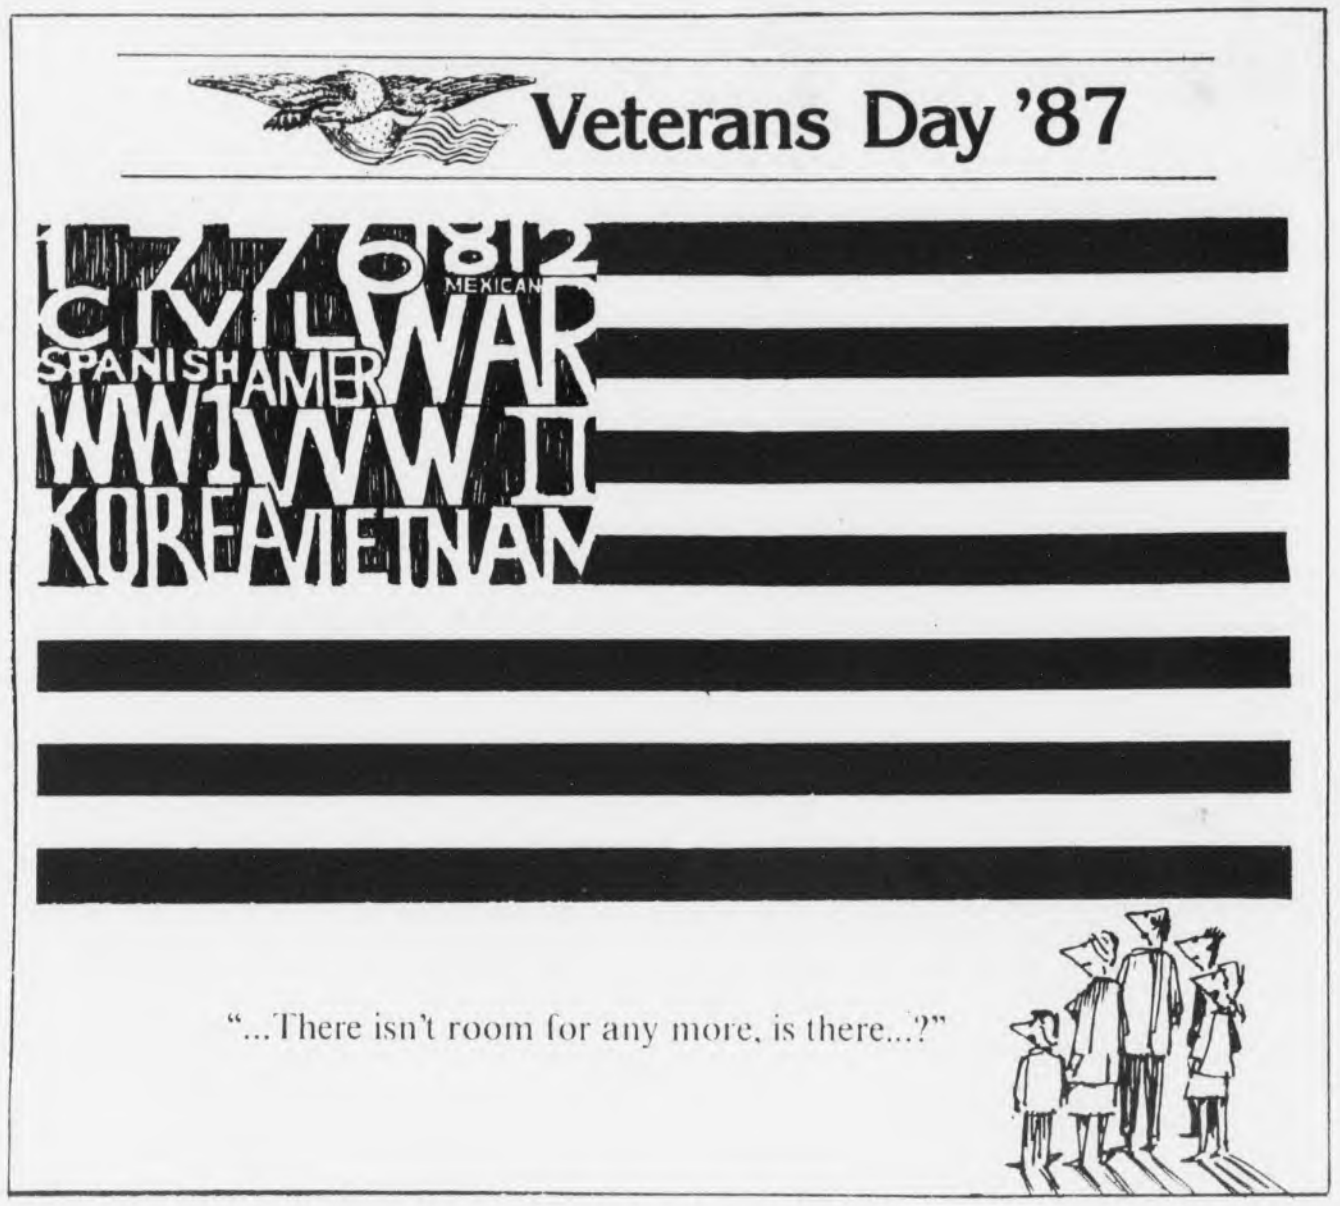
• Korean conflict (1950 - 1955) - 6,807,000 participants, 55,000 deaths in service and 5,105,000 living veterans;

• Vietnam era (1964 to 1975) - 9,200,000 participants, 109,000 deaths in service and 8,264,000 living veterans.

The observance of this holiday, that we know as Veterans' Day, began back on Nov. 11, 1921, when an American soldier from World War I, his name "known but to God," was buried in Arlington National Cemetery. Similar ceremonies took place earlier at Westminster Abbey in England and at l'Arc de Triomphe in Paris, the highest place of honor in those countries.

All the memorial observances took place on Nov. 11, giving universal recognition to the formal end of World War I on Nov. 11, 1918, at 11 a.m., which was the eleventh hour of the eleventh day of the eleventh month.

Armistice Day, the Veterans Administration advises us, officially received its official name in America in 1926 through a Congressional resolution. It became a national holiday in 1938 and might still be called Armistice Day except that World War II broke out shortly after the holiday was proclaimed and shattered the hope that World War I was "the war to end all wars."



After World War II, Americans sought a way to honor veterans of all wars. Kansas Congressman Edwin K. Reese introduced legislation to change Armistice Day to Veterans Day.

Then, in 1954, President Dwight D. Eisenhower signed a bill proclaiming Nov. 11 as Veterans Day. He called on all Americans to dedicate themselves to the cause of peace.

From 1971 to 1975, Veterans Day was celebrated on the fourth Monday in October, in compliance with a 1968 law that changed most national holidays to Mondays.

Believing, however, that Nov. 11 held great significance for many Americans, Congress returned the holiday to Nov. 11 in 1975. The law became effective in 1978, which was the 60th anniversary of the World War I armistice.

We join veterans and their families and friends everywhere today in honoring those who served in our armed forces then and now and have so valiantly defended our freedoms.

Wow! Kim Hunt is in Turkey

(This letter was sent by Kim Hunt, a 1987 graduate of Cohasset High School. She is an AFS exchange student who is spending the year in Turkey. She will return in July, and will attend the University of Vermont in Sept., 1988. Ed.)

To the editor:

Hello! Here I am in Turkey. Wow! This is my third day with my family and wow! I don't know where to begin, but things sure are different here in Turkey. Everything, I mean everything is different.

My family is all fascinated with me, especially my three sisters. They went through my luggage and were amazed by make-up, a curling iron and high heeled shoes. My 18-year-old sister just looked at me and said something. I smiled, nodded and have no idea what she's saying. If my family is going somewhere, they tell me in Turkish and then when I don't understand, they take my hand and drag me out the door.

My mother and sister both cover their heads with a scarf outside and my mother has a different scarf for inside the house. When my father or brother want something, one of my sisters has to run and get it and only the women get up to answer the door. I thought that anybody that treated women like this would be a complete jerk. However, my mother and older sister take pride in taking care of their home and their men; and I'm realizing that the men don't truly expect anything. Although they almost never say thank you, it is known that they are. I try to get things for my father and brother also, but it's very confusing as I'm not exactly sure what to do. I help make every meal and help clean up after every meal. Different shoes are worn in the house and in the bathroom.

Guess what? I love Turkish food! It's sooo good and very different. My family makes me eat too much though. We have three family meals and two family snacks a day.

Letters

Women hold hands with women here and men hold hands with men. I'm never supposed to touch my brother or father, except to handshake hello or goodbye. My mother and sisters always hold hands with me. And girls can only be friends with girls, and boys with boys.

I had my first day of school. Wow! The school is for all girls and speaks all Turkish. I have a uniform of a blue jumper and white blouse. I can't wear jewelry. I can't wear make-up, and no one wears stockings; so I don't think they are allowed either. All long hair must be worn up in a pony tail. When speaking to teachers, you must stand up and never put your hands in your pockets. Every type of class is taken every year. So instead of 1 year of chemistry, every day; they have four years of chemistry, but only once a week. Thus I take algerbra, geometry, calculus, chemistry, physics, Turkish history, religion, gym, French or English, etc., etc., —14 classes in all.

The students are very fascinated with me and I am somewhat of an oddity. The girls ask me many, many questions and want to know everything about me. When I walked into the class and was introduced, the class oooed and ahhhed. It's unusual for an exchange student to be in this school because there are no English speaking classes. The teachers are not accustomed to it either and several have asked me how I am going to understand if I don't speak Turkish. I told them, I just wouldn't.

My family is very endearing, kind, caring, giving, helpful and patient. I love the friendly, hospitable people of Turkey very much. It's exciting over here in Turkey.

A town's tribute paid to Gilmore

To the editor:

Nov. 5, the flag on the town common was lowered in honorable remembrance of Scott Winfield Gilmore, 34 Summer Street, Cohasset.

Scott served in the Peace Corps in Sierra Leone, West Africa, from 1982 to 1984, and spent another year in the village of Kabala as an agricultural officer and regional director for ACRE, a State Department agency which sends agricultural advisers to developing countries.

Scott served his country by serving mankind. His family and friends would like to express their gratitude for the sincere gesture of sympathy.

Officials await report in case of Lily Pond spill

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

The clean-up of last week's oil spill into Lily Pond is almost complete, as town officials await a report on how the leak occurred.

Robert Connelly of Clean Harbors, the firm contracted to supervise the extensive clean-up, said the company should be finished at the site by Friday, Nov. 13.

"Right now," he commented, "we have about 98 percent of the oil out of the water. It should be all out by Friday."

According to tests conducted by the Braintree firm, an undetermined amount of diesel oil leaked from the bottom of a storage tank inside an old pump house on the edge of Lily Pond. The oil leached through the tank, into the foundation of the small storage building, into the soil and to the water supply. Connelly estimated the spill must have taken years to reach the water.

Water commissioner Ronald Goodwin,who was away when the spill was reported last week, said he and other commissioners weren't aware the tank was stored inside the abandoned pump house. "I didn't know it was there," he said this week. "I assumed everything in the pump house was gone. I never knew a tank was still inside."

After meeting with officials from the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE), Goodwin said he will take a walk around the water department property and make an inventory.

In the meantime, the commissioner will await a report on the incident from water department officials. "After everything is cleaned up," Goodwin said, "the commissioners will expect a report on this."

In the meantime, Goodwin continued to assure residents that the quality of the water has not been affected by last week's spill. "We have tests conducted on the water every day - by our engineers and Camp, Dresser and McKee and Clean Harbors.The water is as fine as it was prior to the spill," he stated.

Clean Harbors official Connelly said the oil was caught early enough to enable workers to isolate it before it contaminated the water supply. "Because it was reported early to town officials, who in turn notified the proper agencies, we caught this in time. Thanks to quick action by the fire department and the water department, who got us involved and the DEQE, we contained it early. If the spill occurred when no one was around there, who knows what might have happened," he said.

Clean Harbors' excavator crushes the red pump house which contained an unused oil storage tank. The contaminated debris will be transported out of state. (Wayne Sawchuk photo)

No oil leached into the actual water supply, he explained. Clean Harbors used booms to absorb any spreading oil from reaching the treatment plant. The remaining oil, which rises to the top of the water, was skimmed by special vacuum trucks.

This week, crews were sent in to demolish the old pump house, a building which has not been actively used by the water department for more than 50 years. Clean Harbors excavated any contaminated soil surrounding the pump house. That load is awaiting transfer from the Lily Pond property to an out-of-state disposal area.

"By Friday," Connelly predicted, "everything should be removed. Because this was a problem within a reservoir and involved drinking water, we had to be very thorough. The work was a lot more involved than if this was isolated pond somewhere."

Pieces of the old pump house along with the storage tank which was cleaned out and broken up were taken to the town landfill for disposal.

Goodwin agreed Clean Harbors has completed a thorough job this week.

Regarding the cost, the water commissioner noted the town has "no choice" but to pay the total.

"It's strange to say this, but maybe it was good this came to light now instead of later. There's no telling how far it could have leached or how much it could have leached if it hadn't been caught last week," he stated. "It would have shown up later and it probably would have been a lot worse."

Goodwin said the diesel oil probably started leaching from the tank as far back as 1914 when it was in use. "When the pump house was in operation, oil was delivered in carts. Spilling it was not a concern then, so I'm sure people could have been careless."

In addition, the commissioner noted, the worry that the water supply could become contaminated has resulted in a number of extensive engineering tests on the town's water supply. "Normally, we don't always test all volatile organics," he explained. "But because of the spill, we have been conducting one exhaustive series of tests on the water after another. In a normal course of events, we may do these types of tests once a year."

He explained that because oil spreads quickly once it is spilled onto water, "it's almost impossible to determine how much was spilled last week.

"The highest figure I heard was 20 gallons. But I think it was probably more like two to five gallons of diesel fuel. It just becomes a thin layer on top of the water and it expands. It tends to stay on top and increase in size."

Boston Musicales to begin 60th season

Mrs. N. Frank Neer, chairman of the Boston Morning Musicales, announces that the concert series will begin the 60th season Wednesday, Nov. 18.

The concert will feature Anthony and Joseph Paratore, outstanding duo pianists. Considered by many to be today's finest piano duo, their 1987-1988 season includes several tours of Europe and recitals and appearances with orchestras in the United States, as well as the world premiere of a new concerto by Michael Schelle, with the Indianapolis Symphony.

A gala luncheon, to celebrate the 60th anniversary of these mid-morning concerts, will be held in the Oval Room of the Copley Plaza, following the Nov. 18 concert.

Strutters meet Walkers for stroll through woods

By Bob Tis

Basketweaving is just one of the courses taught each week at the Council on Aging Senior Center. Here, director Kathy Bryanton (center) works alongside (l) Karen Corcoran, an outreach worker at the center, and (r) Toni Trudell, basketweaving instructor. (Dave Sullivan photos)

It was a meeting between the Cohasset Strutters and the Hingham Walkers last Friday, Nov. 6. No, it wasn't an athletic contest, just a stroll through the woods with a lot of magnificent company.

"This has been the most succesful group organized under the Council on Aging," said director Kathy Bryanton.

The Strutters meet Tuesday through Friday at nine in the morning at the community center and proceed on an approximately 45-minute walk. Friday the Strutters met up with their Hingham counterparts for a brisk two mile stroll through a woodsy section of Wompatuck State Park.

The two groups arrived early at the Doane Street entrance for some stretching exercises. Tony Finegan of the Cohasset group led the two mile stroll, commenting on the flora and fauna along the way.

After each morning walk, coffee is served at the Cohasset senior center in the community center. Friday was no exception. Both groups enjoyed a large selection of cakes, cookies and delicious blueberry muffins.

Both groups were organized as part of Governor Mike Dukakis's "keep moving" program. The culmination of this program was September's Govenors Cup.

"It was amazing to watch a sea of 23,000 seniors out there having fun," said Bryanton, who organized a bus to take the Cohasset group to the festivities.

The Strutters have a leader for each walking day. Jane Tilden, who was responsible for the founding of this group over two years ago, leads the group on Tuesdays. Lillian Lincoln and Shirley Laidlaw take charge on Wednesday and Thursday. Ann Leonard coordinates the group on Fridays.

The group walks in Cohasset as well as World's End, Bear Cove, Webb Park, Pleasant and Nantasket Beach, Norris Reservation as well as other local sites.

Cohasset Savings Bank provided the walkers with some smart blue t-shirts bearing their name. The Strutters often invite other towns to join them on Fridays. Large groups from Weymouth and Quincy have been very impressed with their visits to Cohasset.

"I think it is wonderful," said Bryanton. It is good for the towns to get together. They all have something special to offer."

Don Strong of the Quincy group recently showed highlights of the over-60 Olympics which featured gold medal perfomances from Cohasset's own Ann Leonard.

"The more you walk the warmer you get," Leonard told her gang at the Wompatuck entrance. Both groups followed Leonard's advice on the brisk Friday morning.

"Everyone goes at their own pace," explained Leonard. "You do what is comfortable for you. You can try and increase your pace as you become more comfortable with walking or go further at the same pace."

"I think it is important to just try," said Leonard. "Compete with yourself. You will be surprised and you will always come out a winner."

For Bryanton, the fitness aspect of the walking is paramount.

"There are complete changes in the body as one starts to age," said Bryanton. "Inactivity changes muscles. Walking can help you come back to full muscle tone."

According to Bryanton one of her walkers lost 28 pounds since beginning with the club.

"That's a benefit," said Bryanton, "and you are not doing it alone."

Bryanton said that the approximately 20 members of the Strutters range in age from 60 to the mid-eighties.

"They all blend very well," said Bryanton. "We are always looking for new members."

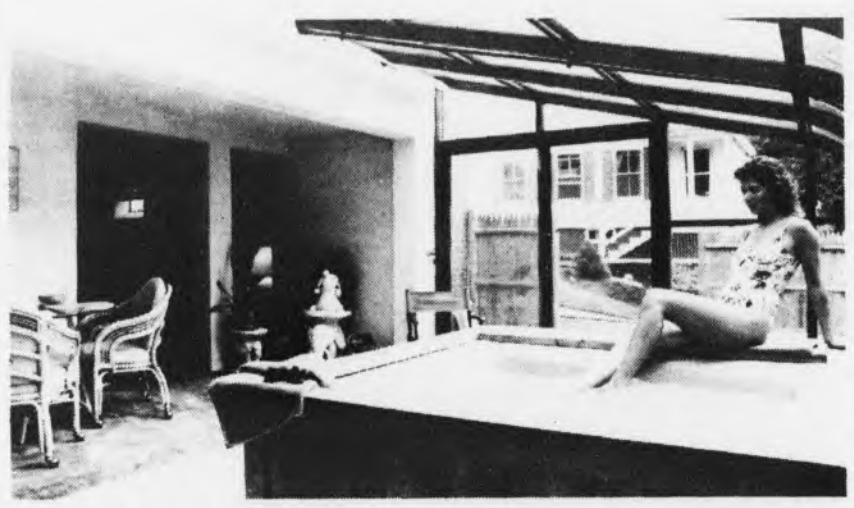
In good step with the Strutters on Friday were Olga Sawchuck, Margaret Taylor, Laura O'Conner, Tilly Nardo, Peggy Nyland, Helen Murphy, Jeanne Sullivan and Peg Aiken.

Right now, the Cohasset walking group has two projects in the works. The first is an all-male walking group to be led by Tony Finnegan. Also on the agenda is a training program for walking leaders. The Nov. 20 informational clinic is being held at the Tufts University Research Center on Aging at 711 Washington Street in Boston. The program is from 9:30- 3:00, and is open to the public.

For more information about becoming a Strutter or participating in some of their activities call Kathy Bryanton at 383-9112.

Cohasset Savings reports improved earnings

Cohasset Savings Bank reported sharply-improved earnings for the quarter which ended Sept. 30, the second financial reporting period since the bank's conversion in May, from a mutual to a stock form of organization.



Results for the three-month period were higher by comparison with both the immediately prior quarter and the quarter ended Sept. 30, 1986.

Net income for the 1987 third quarter was $197,000, an increase of 23.9% over the 1986 third quarter of $159,000, and a 51.5% increase over the $130,000 reported for the quarter ended June 30, 1987. Net income for the nine months ended September 30, 1987 was $422,000 compared with $550,000 for the first nine months of 1986.

Vo Tech open house

The students and faculty of South Shore Vocational Technical High School will be holding their annual open house Thursday, Nov. 19, from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Both campuses will be open and shuttle buses will be available to transport visitors between campuses. The Hanover campus is located at 476 Webster Street and the Abington campus is located on Ralph Hamlin Lane.

South Shore is a regional high school with an enrollment slightly below 500 students. Member towns in the regional school district are: Abington, Rockland, Whitman, Hanson, Norwell, Scituate, Hanover and Cohasset. The majority of students generally enter the school in grade nine, however, students are also accepted into grade 10 and limited openings are available each year in grade 11.

The open house will allow prospective students, their parents and the general public to view the facilities, investigate the programs and speak with members of the teaching, administrative and guidance staff. Students in each shop will present demonstrations and examples of the type of quality work produced by the students of the school.

Academic teachers will be available to discuss courses and extracurricula activities. The members of the physical education department will also be available to answer questions regarding the varsity, junior varsity and intramural sports program.

The Hanover campus offers training in the career fields of automotive, auto body, heating/ventilation and air conditioning, welding, precision metal fabrication, machine shop, drafting, carpentry and electronics.

The Abington campus offers training in the career fields of electrical, culinary arts, graphic arts, marine technology, painting and wall finishing, merchandising/management and marketing, packaging machine mechanics and cosmotology.

All students attend the Hanover campus for academic classes.

Notre Dame 15th reunion

Notre Dame Academy, Hingham, Class of '72, will hold its 15th reunion Saturday, Dec. 12, at the Alewife Restaurant, 707 Main St., Norwell.

Early Release Day Nov. 19

Thursday, Nov. 19, will be an early release day in the Cohasset Public Schools.

There will be no afternoon kindergarten sessions and other students will be dismissed according to the following schedule:

Junior/Senior High School, 12 noon; Deer Hill School, 12:40 p.m.; Joseph Osgood School, 12:50 p.m.

Lunch will be served in the elementary schools and food service will be available at the junior/senior high school.

This early release day has been approved by the Cohasset School Committee to allow the staff to participate in budget preparation.

Spelling Bee

Oct. 23, the sixth grade of the Deer Hill School conducted a spelling bee. It was held in the Open Space on Friday, promptly at 11:20. Each class picked their four best spellers to participate. The top spellers in Mrs. Cisneros's class were Charles Endris, Angela Dougharty, Larissa Huskins and Diane Saldi. Representatives of Mr. Becker's class were Hope Gaston, Tina Rousseau, Courtney Schultz, and Ann Senechal. Participants from Mrs. Whitley's class were Brandon DeVoe, Lauren Almeida, Sara Belson, and Lara Martin. And for Mr. Shultz's class, Mike Riley, Chris Rolandelli, Becky Golden, and Alison Killilea.

It was a very exciting contest. The top speller was Angela Dougharty. She spelled the winning word, chalet. Congratulations, Angela.

Classmate of the Month

Once a month, the students of Mrs. Cisneros's sixth grade class vote for a Classmate of the Month. To be nominated, a student has to consistently try to make other classmates feel successful, and feel wanted, and to be a good companion and friend.

The honored winner for this month was Lindsey Tibbetts. She was nominated by her classmates, who congratulate her very much.

Delightful Kindergarten

Kindergarten "D" week was a delightful time for kindergarten. Eric Hanion brought us a dart and a bag of dirt. We learned that if we change the "a" in dart to an "i" we could make a new word. Jamie Simons taught us that there are 100 pennies in his dollar, but only 10 dimes. Hard to decide which type of money we liked. Mrs. Price was surrounded by all kinds of dinosaurs, including a plant eater with a long neck. Michael Sadler taught us all about the Diplodocus. Matthew Pilczake baked us four dozen dinosaur cookies. A beautiful live white crested duck brought in by Aryanna Afshar enjoyed being petted by the class. David Michaels & Danny Sullivan were seen wearing their glittering golden "D"s. A walk on the beach helped Naomi Ansberg discover a different shape of driftwood.

Deer Hill Pumpkin Contest

Ever heard of a pumpkin with personality? Well, you could have seen just about anything in the Deer Hill Pumpkin Decorating Contest, held on Oct. 29. They were cute, they were pretty, they were scary and some were just plain strange. The school lobby was filled with nearly 50 pumpkins. All entries were divided into seven categories with prizes awarded for each.

The winners for the Scariest category were Katie Norris and her partner Karla Kennedy. The prize for the Ugliest went to Brendan Leung's pumpkin, Mr. Zits. Angela Dougharty took the ribbon for the Prettiest and the Cutest was taken by Lara Martin. The Wierdest pumpkin was decorated by a team of Brendan Mulligan and Spencer Henderson. There was a close tie for the Most Original between the team of Marnie DeMichele and Becky Golden and the team of Ann Senechal and Bethany Macial. For the Most Teacher-like, the prize went to Christa Ansbergs with her caricature of Mr.Shultz. All entries were spectacular.

Seventh grade team news

Oct. 16 approximately eighty students and their faculty chaperones survived the climb of Mt. Monadnock in Jaffrey, N.H. Marilyn Watson organized this successful trip.

Under the direction of the Social Studies and English departments, the seventh grade unit has thirty-eight students participating in a pen-pal exchange program organized by the Afro-Asian Center in New York.

Dick Golden, program director, and Larry King, radio announcer for radio station WQRC have provided the team with taped copies of old time radio programs. These will be used to reinforce students' listening skills.

Shortly, all seventh graders will be participating in small group guidance meetings to discuss study habits, scheduling, and any adjustment problems.

Eye Opener at the Museum

Nov. 17, the second grade will visit the Science Museum. The children will be involved in "Eye Opener," a hands on experience led by the museum staff. As the small groups explore their natural world, the children will be encouraged to touch, smell and observe objects.

A lunch at Friendly's: a hamburger, French fries and a Coke will cost $2.00. The cost of the bus is a dollar. Admission to the Museum is free. The students will leave at nine and return to school at one thirty.

Deer Hill Library

Once again at the Deer Hill School we have children who have won the Merit Award in the library for the month of October.

Grade 4 — Mrs. Murphy's room, 5965 pts;
Grade 5 — Mr. Deakin's room, 6,800 pts;
Grade 6 — Mr. Becker's room, 8,470 pts.

CHS presents 'Wizard of Oz' Dec. 4-6

by Peter Kasperowicz
Mariner correspondent

I heard two ninth graders talking in the hallway in Cohasset High School

"Yeah, it wasn't worth trying out for The Wizard of Oz; all the lead parts were given to the seniors. Dorothy is a senior, the Lion is a senior, the Scarecrow is a senior, and so is the Tinman."

"No, wait," the other one said. "Somebody told me that the Tinman is only eleven years old."

"I heard that he was only nine . . ." a passing student added.

Now wait a minute. "He" has a name, and his name is Doug Moe.

"Doug Moe? Who's he?"

He's the Tinman, and he's only in ninth grade. He's a Cinderella Story, and director Bryan Marks was pleasantly surprised to see him audition.

"It's always nice to see someone so talented and so young. To think that he'll be here for another three years . . . it's just great," Marks said.

And Doug plans to stay involved throughout high school. But for now, let's take a closer look at who this talented rookie really is under all that glitter (get it?)

Doug, does the fact that you're three years younger than Dot, Crow, and Lion intimidate you in any way?

"No, not really. We've all been like a family, and it doesn't make a difference what grade you're in. I think that the same would be true for any other show, also."

Have your friends complimented you, or are they all bitterly jealous of you?

"I don't think that many of them know that I even got the part."

(Maybe I'll ask him that agian after the show. December 4th, 5th, and 6th; reserve seats now!) Now, what about the part of Tinman. Are there a certain set of rules to follow while playing such a character?

"That's kinda tough to answer. The Tinman is not a goofy character. You can't slouch, and you have to stay really stiff. He's also sort of hollow as a person, but not too deep. You just sort of go up and play Tinman . . ."

Fascinating. How do you feel about the costume?

"Well, it's going to be really bulky. About the only thing good about it is that there are no costume changes during the show . . ."

Hmm. This kid's pretty smart for 9th grade. But hey, I'm three years older than him. I'll throw him a curve ball.

Is there any truth to the rumor that the Tinman likes to get "well oiled" in more ways than one?

"No comment." Handled like a pro.

So there's Doug Moe, the new kid in town. Comparable to Brad Lohaus, the new Celtics star? You bet. So come see him in The Wizard of Oz on Dec. 4th -6th at Cohasset High School. You'll certainly be seeing more of him before he graduates.

School news

New Leadership Program

Eight Deer Hill sixth graders have been chosen for a new leadership program under the direction of Edward Leonard, the school's adjustment counselor.

This group's purpose is to improve the communication, problem solving and decision making skills of its members. With these new skills developed, special leadership opportunities within the school will be explored.

The members of the group are Megan Bruns, Wesley DeSantis, Elizabeth Deveney, Jonathan Ford, Christopher Kondrat, Michael Riley, Jessica Sammon and Kimberlee Ward. Each of these young people has just completed their first project — carving a Jack-o-lantern which was presented to either a fourth grade homeroom or special needs class as a welcoming present from the school.

Mr. Leonard is excited with the success of the group's initial project and feels with the potential of these young people, many school wide benefits will be achieved.

Thanksgiving recipes

This month, the Resource Room students have written their favorite recipe in honor of Thanksgiving.

Our delicious creations are hung on the wall outside the room. Please stop by to check them out. Your Thanksgiving Feast won't be the same, without our delicious recipes!

Have a wonderful Thanksgiving.

5th grade spelling bee

By Candice Buckley

The fifth grade is given a new unit of spelling words each week. At the end of the week the classes are tested on those words.

At the end of six units, the fifth grade participates in a spelling bee. Four students from each class are selected.

The spelling bee is held in the Deer Hill cafeteria with the twelve selected students sitting in front and one of the teachers reads the words. The winner receives a candy bar.

The spelling bee is a fun way to learn.

'Some Class Acts' Nov. 20, 21

Now is the time to reserve seats for Some Class Acts, '88, to be presented Nov. 20 and 21. Tickets are currently on sale for $3.00 and may be purchased at Cohasset High School.

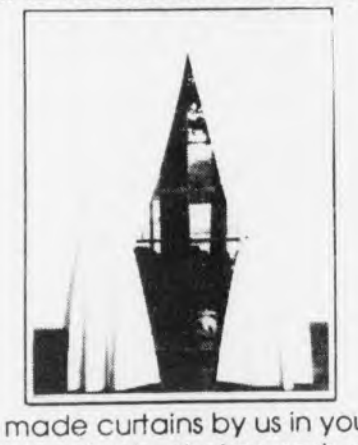
The variety show will feature several dance numbers, as well as many student directed skits. For a night of zany, mad-cap, off-the-wall hysterics, what could be better? Cancel that dentist appointment and go, Go, GO!

NDA runners win title

Notre Dame Academy's cross-country team recently gained its sixth straight Catholic League title. The title victory for the Aces was their 57th consecutive win in a meet against Cardinal Spellman and St. Gregory's at Dorchester Park.

Leading the Aces in the incredible victory were senior Tracy Mullare, Norwell, one of the team captains and junior Meghan Donahue, Duxbury, who tied for first place. Placing third, fourth and fifth were NDA runners Kim McGahan, Weymouth, Michelle Babin, Cohasset, and Katharina Armstrong, Braintree.

Outstanding performances were also turned in by Pam Wicks, Quincy, Caroline Donnelly and Beth Tully, both of Weymouth, Joanne Doyle, Milton, Kim Reidy, Norwell and Lisa Walbridge, Scituate.



A second important victory for the Aces recently was the Catholic Championship title which was won October 31 on the three-mile course at Franklin Park. Top runners in this race were Karen Rogers, Hanover, who took first place, Mary Beth Powers, Quincy, second place, Christine Higgins, Milton, third and Celia Morelli, Holbrook, fourth.

The NDA Aces will be ending the season by defending their state championship title for the fifth year in two upcoming meets. On November 14, they will be participating in the state class meet at Franklin Park and on Nov. 21 they will be running at the all-state meet at Northfield Mountain.

Slides on Kenya experience

Dr. Brent W. Lambert, a prominent cataract surgeon of the South Shore, will speak Sunday, Nov. 22 at 6:30 p.m. at The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 379 Gardner St., So. Hingham.

Lambert, a Mormon, will show slides of his recent trip to Kenya where he, assisted by his wife, Kitty and three daughters, removed cataracts and tended hundreds of patients in a one-week period under the most primitive conditions.

The Sunday night meeting is free and open to the public. For more information call Polly Doggett 383-1847.

Women invited to homemaking

Hingham and Cohasset women are invited to the November Homemaking meeting of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in Hingham on Thursday at 7 p.m.

The theme of the meeting will be — Creating a Gratitude Attitude — explains Jill Valentine, women's leader. "You may choose from several workshops: cooking with pumpkin, making 'souper soups,' creating a Williamsburg centerpiece or a Christmas wall decoration, or attend a class in 'the cycle of Addiction.' "

For more information call Polly at 383-1847.

Taking sex out of paychecks

The South Shore Chapter of the National Organization for Women (NOW) invites the public to attend its meeting on Wednesday evening, Nov. 18, at 7:30 p.m. at the Cohasset Community Center.

Jennifer Jackman, president of Massachusetts NOW will speak on the topic of pay equity and "How to Take Sex Out of Your Paycheck." Admission is free of charge and all persons interested in occupational segregation and pay discrepancies in jobs held predominantly by women such as nurses, clerical workers and teachers are welcome to attend.

According to Jackman, the goals of NOW's statewide project are to educate the public about the issue of wage discrimination and to secure concrete gains for women and people of color at the local level.

The Cohasset Community Center is located at 3 North Main St., at the intersection of Ripley Rd., near Cohasset Common. NOW needs support on these issues and encourages new members to attend.

For more information call 383-1248.

There's a magical kingdom waiting for you and your child.
A kingdom where the Spirit of Christmas burns brightly for young and old alike. Where 200,000 Christmas lights illuminate the night-time sky, painting rainbows across the winter landscape. And heated turn-of-the-century steam trains travel through woods and fields alive with wondrous sights and gaily lit seasonal displays.

It's the Edaville Railroad Christmas Light Festival. A magical mixture of light and color, sights and sounds. Where Christmas carols fill the air. And laughing children run from one marvelous sight to the next. From Santa's Village to the baby deer in the petting zoo. From the "Night Before Christmas" animated display to the white-bearded man in the red suit who always has a good word and a small gift to share with a child.

Discover this wonderful world for your child—and yourself. Experience the dozens of attractions, the once-in-a-lifetime train ride, and the most magnificent display of Christmas lights you'll probably ever see. This year, rediscover the Spirit of Christmas. You'll find it wonderfully lit up at the Edaville Railroad Christmas Light Festival.

Osgood Artist of the Month

The featured artist for our program in November will be Sue Dreamer, a successful illustrator of children's books and cards, who is the daughter of Mr. Jack Creamer, the principal at Osgood School.

Sue has most kindly agreed to demonstrate to the children how she creates her whimsical and imaginative characters. Chris Conley, a graphic design artist and mother of students at Osgood will work along with Sue to explain about art and illustration.

A coffee will be held at Retta Dwyer's home at 49 Hobart Lane Thursday, Nov. 19 at 10 a.m. for those who are interested in the program.

We hope you'll be able to join us. If you have any questions, please call Retta Dwyer (383-6629) or Olga Nohe (383-1273).

Monte Carlo Night

The P.S.O. Board would like to thank members of the community for its overwhelming support of the Monte Carlo night at the Cohasset Golf Club on Nov. 14. With a sell-out crowd, we look forward to this second annual gala evening. Your interest in this fundraising event is most appreciated.

Historical Society dinner

A reminder to members and friends of the Cohasset Historical Society; the Society's fall dinner meeting with special evening program will be held on Thursday, Nov. 19 at Trueblood Hall of the Unitarian Parish House. A limited number of reservations for the dinner are still available.

Reservations, which must be made in advance should be sent to the Society at 14 Summer Street, Cohasset, or dropped off at the Caleb Lothrop House, the same address. Reservations are $10 per dinner, and must be made and paid for in advance. They should be received no later than Saturday, Nov. 14. Caterer for the dinner will be Jessica. The menu is sherried beef with wild rice, vegetables, salad, and lemon delight dessert.

Following the dinner, a short Annual Business Meeting will be held for reports, and the election of Officers and Directors. Following the meeting, a special visitor will be Madelyn Shaw, the Society's gown consultant, who will speak on the fascinating subject of the Society's large and unique gown collection. Some of the best of the antique 19th century examples of gowns will be on display.

Society Senior Curator David Wadsworth also will present an update on the major reconstruction project going on at historic Minot's Ledge Lighthouse, and will talk about some interesting items from the Society's collection of art works which recently have been found to be unique and particularly interesting, as well as historically valuable.

Please send reservations for this interesting Historical Society evening dinner and program as early as possible, as seating is limited.

Charm Course Graduation

The Duxbury Dance Shoppe will hold a Graduation Tea for the Ingenue Charm Courses Saturday, Nov. 14, at 3 p.m. at the Reed Building on Rte. 3A in Kingston. Graduates of the Cohasset and Kingston classes will be participating. Guest speaker will be Pamela Proctor Driscoll, former Miss Massachusetts.

The Ingenue Charm Course is a six week program for young ladies age 9 through 14 who wish to learn basic walking, poise, grooming, and general hygiene techniques. This class is conducted by Noreen DaRue Minichiello, a graduate of the Carol Nash School and Model Agency.

Registration for classes starting in January can be made by calling the Cohasset Community Center any day, Monday through Friday, from 9 a.m. until 1 p.m. The number to call is 383-0088.

It's on to state tourney for boys' soccer

by Peter Kasperowicz
Mariner Correspondent

Cohasset is on the road to the state finals, having just come off their best season ever with a record of 15-1-2. The team set two other school records, too: most goals scored, 79; and least goals allowed, 12.

The team made its first stop last Sunday as they met Norton in Cohasset. Although Cohasset was victorious 7-0, the game was far from boring. Within the first three minutes of play, the Norton goalie was forced to leave the field after suffering a head wound. Minutes after that, Cohasset began its scoring blitz. Danny Pompeo scored first, followed by Jimmy Reidy. Although it seemed as if it would remain 2-0 at the half, Ian Smart brought Cohasset's total to three with about two minutes left.

Obviously, Cohasset had dominated much, if not all, of the first half. After viewing the rough and tumble style of play presented by both teams, it became evident that both teams wanted the win badly enough to fight for it. Coach Dan Magner was aware of this.

"I'm very pleased so far. I only worried because if they keep losing, they're going to start hacking at your shins. We can't afford to lose anyone, so if you're pushed, just ignore it. If you score again it will be . . ."

"The final spike in the railroad!" Ned Chase added.

"That's what I'm supposed to say!"

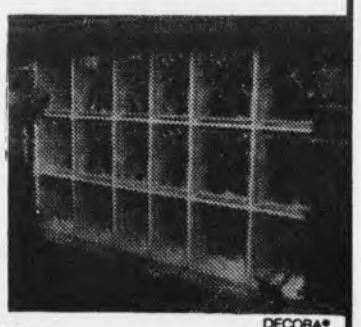
Sometimes even coaches are at a loss for words.

The second half was a run away. Dave Shultz started it off by scoring unassisted, making it 4-0. Jimmy Reidy went one better by bouncing the ball off of a Norton player, bringing the score to 5-0. Steve "Mr. Hustle" Myers scored for the first time this season; 6-0. Ian Smart received credit for the final goal in probably the most original way; he kicked the ball, and a Norton player, not the goalie, caught it inside the net. I guess that's sort of like goaltending, because it counted.

The scoring was over, but the game wasn't. For soon the inevitable occurred, the fight. It was quick, and fortunately no one was injured. Boys will be boys . . .

An enthusiastic, but chilly crowd, appreciated the winning efforts of the boys' CHS soccer team as they defeated Norton last Sunday.
(Paul MacDonald)

The team eagerly awaits their next opponent, and is hopefully looking to take it all the way. And why shouldn't they? Best record, most goals scored, least goals allowed?

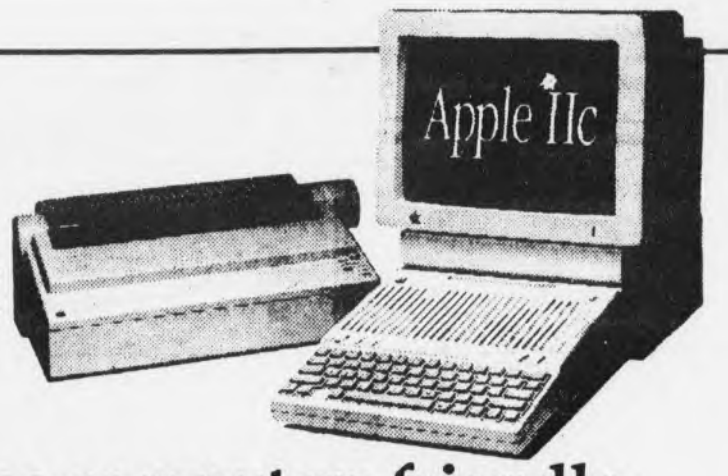


"It would be a nice going away present for all the seniors," goalie Joel Reidy laughed.

All star athletes

The following athletes were selected to the All Star Teams for the South Shore League:

Girls Soccer:
Vickey Kelley, Jen Coley, Katie Lord, Kerry Kirkendall.
Boys Soccer:
Joel Reidy, Jim Reidy, David Shultz, Todd Fitzpatrick, Ian Smart, Ned Chase, Jim Gallagher.
Field Hockey:
Cindy Spooner, Debbie Hartley, Jackie Lydon, Heather St. Onge.



All three All Star Games are scheduled for: Wednesday, Nov. 18 at Middleboro.

Holly Days Fair

The First Baptist Church, 653 Country Way in No. Scituate, will open its doors Saturday, Nov. 21 at 10 a.m. for the Holly Days Annual Fair.

The well stocked Country Store will be selling a variety of home baked pies, breads, jellies, pickles, cheese, fruit cakes, baked beans and fudge.

The Buffet Luncheon will be served from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. with more than 20 hot and cold choices for only $3.50.

Other features will be Christmas Gifts and Decorations, Childrens Activity Corner, "White Elephants", Jewelry, Plants, Consignment Table, Book Stall, and hand knit, crocheted and sewn articles.

Catholic-Jewish relations

There will be a special program on Catholic-Jewish relations at Congregation Sha'aray Shalom, 1112 Main St., Hingham. The program, sponsored by the social concerns committee, will be presented as part of Shabbat services on Nov. 13 at 8 p.m.

The Rev. John L. Sullivan will speak on "the Work and Challenge of Catholic-Jewish Relations." Father Sullivan is a professor of Biblical studies at St. John's Seminary and has served on the Catholic-Jewish Committee of the Boston Archdiocese for the past three years.

The public is invited to attend.

St. Mary's Church Schedule

The Credo Youth Group of St. Mary's Parish in Hull, invites all high school sophomores, juniors and seniors to a meeting at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 12 at St. Ann's Hall, Lewis and Samoset Streets.

Also, parents of children in the First Eucharist Program are reminded to attend one of the following upcoming sessions: 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., Sunday, Nov. 15; 7:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m., Monday, Nov. 16; or 10 a.m. to 11 a.m., Tuesday, Nov. 17.

Meetings will be in St. Ann's Hall.

St. Mary's Sodality invites all members and their families to the annual mass for deceased members at 7:30 p.m. on Wednesday, Nov. 18.

Second Congregational Church

QUILT DRAWING WINNER: Who is Leo Visser? He is the winner of the quilt. When the number listed was dialed, a familiar voice answered. It was Wilma Vanderlugt. Leo is a friend of the Vanderlugts who purchased a ticket when he was visiting from Holland last spring. He plans to move to Cohasset if he can get a visa for himself and his family. Wilma mentioned that Hubert was at a convention with Leo. So the news would travel fast. Congratulations, Leo. We hope to see you in Cohasset very soon.

FOOD NEEDED: There will be a bin inside the front door for your donation of food for the Quincy Crisis Center.

CHURCH SCHOOL: Our Sunday School family is growing! I'd like to extend a warm and friendly welcome to: Darius Amiri, Sam Amiri, Breezy Crossman, Jason Crossman, Jon Ford, Keith Herzog, Timothy Herzog, Kaitlin Jackson, Keith Jackson, Michael Kasameyer, John Kasameyer, Colin Pyfrom, Jennifer Ripley, Catherine Ronan and Jamey Watts. This week you'll attend church and then go to classes.

CHURCH CLEAN UP DAY needs lots of willing hands and greased elbows to help spruce up the building and ground SATURDAY, NOV. 14 from 8 a.m. to noon. Sign up for specific tasks at coffee hour this Sunday, Nov. 8. Jump on board!

The Upper Room and Alive Now devotional magazines for November/December are avilable in Bates Hall. Please pick one up for yourself or a friend and leave a small donation to help defray the cost.

NEED HELP RAKING LEAVES or with yard cleanup? Especially for those who have no one to work around the yard, the Junior High Youth Group will be offering their services (no charge — "Love in Action") Sunday, Nov. 15 from 1-3 p.m. Please call the church office if you have a need for this outreach ministry.

VILLAGE FAIR NEWS

The fair is only a month away and the Central Committee members are finalizing their plans now. A few reminders:

1 Please check the chart in Bates Hall to see where your expertise can best be used.

2. Save your leftover Halloween candy and bring it to church this Sunday for the Candy Committee.

Bargain Bazaar and Books can use donations at St. Anthony's Rectory. Hours are Wednesday and Saturday from 10-12 a.m.

4. Raffle tickets will be sold each Sunday from now through Nov. 29. Cost is $1 each or 6 for $5. If you can't volunteer your time or expertise, please consider buying a few books of raffle tickets. Every little thing helps towards the proceeds of the fair.

5. I have three balls of white yarn - enough for a baby sweater. I need a volunteer to knit a baby sweater for the Children's Table. Please call Debbie Anderson 383-6345 after 5 p.m.

6 Plan to donate something delicious to the Food and Candy Table. We will call people two weeks prior as a reminder. I need 2-3 volunteers to help on Friday, Dec. 5, setting up the Food Table and accepting baked items. Please call Debbie 383-6345 or Linda 383-0021 if you can volunteer a few hours.

Confirmation Class registration

Confirmation classes for St. Mary of the Assumption Parish, Hull, begin in January, 1988.

Registration for this group will end in December. The parish will celebrate the sacrament after the group completes two years of preparation.

Call the Religious Education Office at 925-5446 to register.

Also, child care is available for 3, 4, and 5 year-olds at the 10:30 a.m. Sunday Masses at St. Ann's. Parents who participate are asked to take a turn at supervision.

INTRODUCING

Dr. Ronald E. Wuotila
Chiropractor

Please allow me to introduce myself to the town of Hanover and it's surrounding communities. I am originally from the South Shore area and graduated from Palmer College of Chiropractic in Davenport, Iowa. I have received extensive pre and post graduate training at the Gonstead Clinic of chiropractic in Mount Horeb, Wisconsin which specializes in the treatment and care of patients with structural problems of the spine. My practical experience includes six years of clinical work treating patients for various spinal related conditions utilizing X-ray analysis and a specific adjusting technique.

Being a licensed Chiropractor in the state of Massachusetts, I did an extensive demographic study of the South Shore region and decided the town of Hanover was centrally located to service patients from many communities. My new office is conveniently located on Route 53, one and one half miles south of the Hanover Mall exit 13. To aquaint you with our newly opened office and all that Chiropractic care has to offer, my staff and I would like to provide to you or another family member, a spinal examination absolutely FREE. This examination (a $35.00 value) will include an orthopedic test, neurological test, blood pressure check, spinal alignment check, examination for restricted or excess motion in the spine, muscle strengthness test, and a private consultation with the Doctor to discuss the results.

SAVE! $35 VALUE!!
FREE

If you or a family member need to ✓ one or more below, come in and let me do the checking.

☐ Shoulder pain ☐ Hip and Leg pain ☐ Nervousness/Tension
☐ Upper mid-back pain ☐ Nubness in Hands and Feet ☐ Headaches/Dizziness ☐ Lower Back pain ☐ Tiredeness/Exhaustion ☐ Neck Pain

Beechwood Church services

The Beechwood Congregational Church invites everyone to worship at 10:45 a.m.

The pastor is Stephan S.J. Hall. Adult child care will be provided downstairs following the children's sermon.

Children in grades K-8 are welcome to attend Sunday School from 9:30-10:30 a.m. We teach basic Christian values and welcome children from any denomination. As usual, guests are always welcome.

Another successful antique show and sale was held Nov. 7 at the Deer Hill School. There were 25 antique dealers for the public to view and make those pre-Christmas purchases. Thank you to all those involved in making this another successful show.

The congregation enjoyed a wonderful service presented by the lay people of the church. Bill Ketchum, call to worship, Gerry Ainslie, scripture, Linda Holland, pastoral prayer, Barbara Fellows, children's sermon and Bob Richardson who gave a sermon on "Why do we go to church?"

New member Sunday is Nov. 15. The church will welcome six new members.

The church phone is 383-0808, Pastor Hall - 545-3810, home; 545-6800, work.

Parish News:

A fast for peace and development will be held Wednesday, Nov. 18 at 6:45 p.m. at Trueblood Hall. It will be sponsored by the Outreach Committee to support Oxfam America's annual "Fast for a World Harvest."

Join us by either fasting all day on the 18th or by omitting just your evening meal. A simple supper of soup and bread will be served and participants are asked to contribute their food money to Oxfam America.

Meeting Nov. 20

Parent Discussion Group is rescheduled for Friday, Nov. 20 from 7-9 p.m. at the Parish House. Topic: "Religious Issues/Unitarian Parenting."

During this discussion, we will address the questions of peer pressure on children regarding religion and communicating liberal religious values to children without the help of church dogma or centuries-old traditions. What are the questions your children ask? How do you answer them?

Our speaker will be Jackie Smith-Miller, who has been the Religious Education Director at the Unitarian church in Duxbury for 15 years. Ms. Smith-Miller frequently leads parenting workshops throughout New England.

The meetings are informal and are held in the living room of the Parish House. Parents of children of all ages are invited and welcome to attend.

Baby sitting will be provided. Please let Gladys know at 383-1100 if you will be bringing children to the baby sitting program. If you have other questions, contact Debbie Eaton at 383-6065 for further information.

Religious Education news

The UNICEF Halloween Party was a great success! There were many donations brought in. Next week we will report the amount. The party was well attended, and the costumes were fantastic! Every adult and child had fun.

Intercessory Prayer Group

One group meets monthly to hold the concerns of the parish in its prayer. This is the Intercessory Prayer Group. It meets on the last Sunday of every month after the fellowship time in the Bartow Room.

They meet to pray and to share the concerns of those they know who need our prayers. Confidentiality and compassion are observed so there is nothing gossipy about it.

If you would like to be part of this prayer group, you are most welcome. Please come to the Bartow Room on the last Sunday after fellowship time. And if you would

Village Fair to feature established favorites

All the popular features of Cohasset's Village Fair that have become established over the nearly half century of its existence will again be offered this year when the 47th annual version of this holiday fixture is staged in buildings around Cohasset Common, Saturday, Dec. 5 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

From the familiar standbys of wreaths and Santa to the more recently added Greek delicacies and a Secret Room for tot shoppers, the Central Committee from the five sponsoring churches headed by Lou Simeone, Kathy Pratt and Kathy Brennock, has organized a wide-ranging smorgasbord of attractions to satisfy every taste.

Working in individual homes, garages, or church buildings, scores of parishioners organized in some 20 committees are busy making preparations for the big event that will draw hundreds to the historic Common area on Fair day. This year St. Anthony's Church is taking the leadership role, joined by congregations from the Second Congregational, Panagia Greek Orthodox, First Parish Unitarian and St. Stephen's Episcopal.

Already in place are the chairpersons of the various committees, with enlistment still going on for workers both in advance and on the day of the Fair.

A list of committees and their chairs shows the range of attractions which Fair goers may expect:

Boutique--Sheila Wallingford and Donna Blain head this group which is concentrating on holiday and novelty gifts.

Children's Corner--Anna Abbruzzese is chair of the group making children's clothing and gifts for children.

Secret Room, a fairly recent addition to the Fair's attractions that offers shopping in private for the youngsters looking for gifts for their parents and families, is headed this year by June Simeone.

Bargain Bazaar, drawing its resources from attics and basements and offering them for sale in the Unitarian Parish House, is headed this year by Gail Bell.

Books, with Alice Daunt as chairperson, will have hundreds of second-hand book bargains on sale.

Baked Goods Committee is headed by Phylis Barkas, while the Candy Table is chaired by Eugenis Gianibias, and the Greek Food table will be headed by Jim Dedes.

Wreaths are again the domain of Jean Manganaro and her large committee.

Two particularly popular features, the Chowder Bar and Snack Bar, are being organized by Ralph and Susi Coley and Peter Guild respectively.

Plants, with emphasis on those appealing in the holiday season, are being arranged for now by a group headed by Sheila Wallingford and Donna Blain.

Grabs this year are the responsibility of Claudia Story and Deanna Mulligan, while Marilyn Hobson will again arrange for the hot buttered popcorn and Ham Tewksbury will preside over the offering of cheeses.

Special activities for children, involving games, stories and face painting are being organized by a group headed by Doneen Pride and Kate Caldwell, while the presence of Santa Claus in his sleigh on the Common is again being assured by Jeff Steele and her helpers.

Already in circulation among the participating churches and to the general public are salespersons for the raffle tickets that offer chances on many attrractive prizes donated by local merchants and individuals. Chris Kierce heads this merchandising group.

The Fair will again close with a catered gourmet dinner in Walton Rodgers Hall of St. Stephen's church on the evening of Dec. 5. Tickets at $12.50 each have been distributed by dinner chairperson Annette Sawchuk to representatives of the individual churches. Attendance at the dinner is limited so that an early purchase is urged.

Finally, behind the scenes of the Fair is an infrastructure that embraces procurement and transportation in advance and clean-up afterwards so that the Common looks its pristine best for Sunday worshippers. Bill Bell is transportation head arrangement for the delivery and return of tables and other equipment; Kathy Brennock coordinates procurement; and Glenn Pratt heads the clean-up crew.

Robert Barney joins staff

Robert Barney, formerly music director of St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Newburyport for over six years, will join our staff as Organist and Choir Director beginning Jan. 1, 1988.

Mr. Barney is also a member of the Music Commission of the Episcopal Diocese of Massachusetts. He brings a solid grounding in Episcopal liturgy, an approachableness and warmth of personality, and the desire to grow with a new choir and parish family. Mr. Barney works with organ builder Thad Outerbridge, and in addition to performing on the organ, plays the harpsichord as well.

Warm thanks go to the organis. search committee who have helped bring us to this good place — Sally Avery, Max Munro, Brad Stark, Dawn Vivian, Sally Warner, and Ann Whiteley.

Welcome to Rev. Gary Ritts

The Rev. Gary Ritts was instituted as minister of Second Congregational Church Sunday, Nov. 8, at 4 p.m. Mr. Ritts, his wife Judy and family have brought an enthusiasm and caring that have gone beyond the Congregational Church, which enjoys them thoroughly, to touch all of us in town. We send them all warm greetings at this time of institution.

Tax Benefits for (65) sixty-five and over. If you are 65 or older, the Internal Revenue Service says to take an additional standard deduction amount for age on your tax returns for 1987 and later tax year. The additional amount is $750 for single individuals and $600 for married individuals. Not only that, but if your spouse is also 65 or older and you are filing a joint return, you can claim 2 additional amounts - one for yourself and one for your spouse. You are considered 65 on the day before your 65th birthday. The total standard deduction for a single individual age 65 or over for 1987 if $5,600 if one spouse is 65 or older and $6,200 if both spouses are 65 and over. If one or both are also blind, the amount is higher. For more information call the IRS at 1-800-424-3676 and ask for Highlights of 1986 tax charges - #554.

Walking Club Welcomes New Members: Nature's reward to us before the start of winter is this great fall foliage season. On November 6th new members in Cohasset joined the Hingham Walkers, the Cohasset Walkers and our group leader, Tony Finegan. It was great fun touring the spectacular Wompatuck State Park in Cohasset. Everyone enjoyed the fresh, brisk stroll through the park and taking in the unusual plants and animals. Anyone interested in joining our walking group can come to the Center at 9:00 a.m. Tuesday through Friday - wear good walking shoes and warm clothing. Remember it's free. Other walks planned this month:

10 13 Union St. Park - Hingham
10 17 Nantasket Beach - Hull
10 20 Bare Cove Park - Hingham
10 24 Pleasant Beach or Cole Park - Scituate
10 25 Norris Reservation - Norwell
10 27 Webb Park - Weymouth

The group meets at the Senior Center and leaves promptly at 9:00 a.m. Hope to see you there!

'Minor' contamination of Pilgrim nuke workers

By Sue Asci
Mariner staff

Some workers at Boston Edison's Pilgrim nuclear power plant were contaminated by radiation over the weekend when some radioactive water leaked on them during testing of the plant's recirculation system.

A Boston Edison spokesman said the contamination of the individuals was "minor," but the company sent several hundred contractors home at noon Monday after it found some contaminated areas in the plant. The outage work, in preparation for restart later this fall, has been halted temporarily.

"The work was halted as we found several examples of deficiencies in the performance of work over the weekend," said Edison spokesman David Tarantino. "None of the events degraded the safety of the public or employees."

Tarantino said Ralph Bird, vice president of nuclear operations for Boston Edison, stopped work this past weekend when "problems were found with procedures and some areas which were previously decontaminated were recontaminated."

During testing of the plant's recirculation system, one of the valves leaked radioactive water on some workers.

"There was minor contamination of individuals, who were immediately decontaminated," said Tarantino. "Some water got on them."

Also, contamination was discovered in the radioactive waste area, where clothing and resins are deposited before shipment. The hallway leading to this area was also found to be contaminated.

"This would show a lack of following procedures," said Tarantino.

Edison said work will not resume until an investigation into these events is completed. Tarantino said work could resume as early as Friday.

"The investigation is going on now, and work will not start until we are sure we can proceed and we're sure we're not going to have a repeat of this weekend's deficiencies," he said.

Second and third shift contractors, employees of Bechtel and General Electric, were asked not to report for work.

Although work is not scheduled to resume until the investigation is completed, day-shift contractors will report to Pilgrim daily as required in their contract.

"I was just informed of this today," Carmine D'Olimpio, business agent for the Bricklayers and Allied Craftsmen Local Union 52, said Monday of the work stoppage. "The inspection was totally an in-house operation. I am advised by Edison that they expect to be back on with the work within a few days. From the in-house inspection, they thought they might need some tightening up in some small areas."

D'Olimpio said there were no masons contaminated during the events leading to the work stoppage.

Frances McKeown, business agent for the local plumbers and pipefitters union, said the approximately 85 contractors from this union will also report to the plant for work.

At press time Monday, John Revil of the electricians' union and president of the Building and Trades Council for the Plymouth area, did not know all of the specifics of the deficiencies discovered.

There are approximatley 200 union electricians working at the plant.

"All subcontractors were sent home," said Revil. "They are reporting to work tomorrow morning. I don't know what will happen tomorrow."

Officials of the federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission were either unavailable for comment or refused to comment on the incidents at Pilgrim.

Beyond confirming that outage work had ceased temporarily, the NRC resident inspector at Pilgrim refused to comment when contacted Monday.

And NRC officials at the regional office in King of Prussia Pennsylvania were unavailable for comment at press time.

Challenge made to Constitution

by Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray
Special to the Mariner

Recently, we celebrated one of the great events of America's history, the bicentennial of the Constitution. That document set the stage for the nation's future. But it would take determination, sweat, and the blood of people to defend that Constitution and the nation and way of life it reflected. Veterans played a great role in that effort, something worth noting on this Veterans Day 1987.

The veterans of the Revolutionary War gave us the opportunity to have a Constitution. They won the independence it took to be able to write such a document. The efforts at Valley Forge, Saratoga, Yorktown, Bunker Hill, and at Concord sparked the evolution of a new form of government.

Some of these veterans helped to write the Constitution. When the grand blueprint for this country was ready to be signed, 23 of the 40 sigenrs were veterans. They included men like George Washington and Alexander Hamilton, as well as lesser knowns like Thomas Fitzsimons and N cholas Gilman. Many of the veterans then, as now, were ordinary men from all walks of life. But they shared a common emotion, a love of country and freedom that demanded they stand up and defend their nation and its principles.

That feeling is the bridge that connects the veterans of all eras, the love of country and the defense of the Constitution. It's a bridge connecting 38 million Americans who faced the challenge of their commitment at places like the Argonne Forest, Normandy, Inchon, Khe Sanh, Beirut, and the Gulf of Sidra. The foundation of the commitment is our American way of life, provided for and symbolized by the Constitution.

General Phil Sheridan once said, "I never discussed the Constitution very much, and I never made many speeches upon it, but I have done a good deal of fighting for it."

We have prospered as a nation because we've always had citizens willing to stand up and answer the call in times of danger. The firm and steady commitment of our soldiers, sailors, airmen, and Marines overcame every adversity set before us.

Today we face challenges unlike any experienced thus far in our history. Our resolve must be as strong as ever. It must show in the citizen as well as the soldier if we are to successfully defend our interests.

"The Heart of the South Shore"

Obituaries

John J. Conley

A funeral Mass was celebrated Friday, Nov. 6 in St. Anthony's Church for John J. Conley, 88, who died Tuesday, Nov. 3 at South Shore Hospital. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

Mr. Conley, a Cohasset resident for the past 35 years, was a retired assistant general yardmaster with Union Freight Railroad Co. He worked for the railroad for 40 years.

Following his retirement, he was employed at several South Shore funeral homes.

Mr. Conley was a Navy veteran of World War I and was a member of the William Walsh American Legion Post in Dorchester.

A native of Portland, Maine, he was a member of the New England Association of Railroad Veterans and the United Transportation Union 36307, Local 1361.

He leaves three sons, Richard Conley of Cohasset; John Conley of Quincy and William Conley of Sandwich; a daughter, Kathleen Lewis of Norton; a brother, Edward Conley of Portland, Maine; two sisters, Margaret Conley and Agnes Conley, both of Portland, Maine; 15 grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Ruth Meyers

A memorial service was held Saturday, Nov. 7 at the First Trinitarian Congregational Church in Scituate for Ruth (Murdock) Meyers, 85, who died Sept. 11 at the Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home. Burial was in Fairview Cemetery in Scituate.

Mrs. Meyers was a remedial reading teacher and school psychologist for 50 years. She taught fifth and sixth grades in Quincy and in Marshfield schools and was school psychologist in Marshfield schools from 1964 until her retirement in 1969.

A graduate of Quincy High School and Bridgewater State College, Mrs. Meyers received her master's degree from Bridgewater in 1963. She was a member of the Massachusetts Teachers Association.

Mrs. Meyers was a member of the First Congregational Church and was a volunteer at the South Shore Hospital and for the American Red Cross. She was a member of the Dramateurs in Scituate and the Order of the Eastern Star.

Wife of the late Bernard A. Meyers, she leaves a son, Elden M. Meyers of Scituate, four grandchildren and six great-grandchildren. She was the sister of the late Sarah D. Mays.

Memorial donations may be made to the charity of one's choice.

Ralph E. Keegan

Funeral services were held Wednesday, Nov. 11 at the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, for Ralph E. Keegan Sr., 87, who died Monday, Nov. 9. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

Mr. Keegan was a landscape architect for estates in Cohasset. He was born and educated in Cambridge and attended the Museum School of Boston.

He lived in Cohasset for the past 70 years.

Mr. Keegan leaves his wife, Mamie F. (Flint) Keegan; a daughter, Elinor Coughlin of Cohasset; a sister, Estella Toye of Cambridge; a niece, Charlotte Littlefield of Zion, Ill.; four grandchildren, Scott Coughlin of Hull, Donna Coughlin of New Hampshire, Bonnie Winterton of Utah, and Nancy Jenkins of California, and nine great-grandchildren. He was the father of the late Ralph E. Keegan Jr.

Memorial donations may be made to the charity of choice.

Grace Alvey

A memorial service was held Tuesday, Nov. 10 at the First Baptist Church in New London, N.H., for Grace "Gay" (Brantmeyer) Alvey, 85, a former resident of Cohasset. She died Saturday.

Mrs. Alvey and her husband, R. Lester Alvey, celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary earlier this year.

She leaves two sons, Ray L. Alvey Jr. of Lakewood, Ohio and John W. Alvey of Medina, Ohio; a daughter, Betty Lou Strong of Deep River, Conn.; two sisters, Anna Alvey of Marshfield and Myrtle March of Port Jervis, N.Y.; a nephew, Roger Alvey, eight grandchildren, three great-grandchildren and a cousin.

Memorial donations may be made to the First Baptist Church, New London, Ct., 03257.

James R. Gray

A memorial service will be held at a later date at St. Joseph's Church in Brookfield, Conn., for James R. Gray, 67, former superintendent of schools in Cohasset. He died Oct. 31 at Yale New Haven Hospital after suffering a heart attack. Burial was in Danbury, Conn.

Mr. Gray was superintendent of the Cohasset schools from 1972 to 1975. Prior to his death, he was a fifth grade teacher at the Huckleberry Hill School in Brookfield, where he lived for the past 12 years. He was a candidate for selectman of Brookfield.

Prior to his position in the Cohasset schools, Mr. Gray was superintendent of schools in Glen Ridge, N.J. He was commissioner of aging for ten years in Danbury, and was a member of the municipal building committee. Mr. Gray was also a member of the advisory committee of Western Connecticut State University.

During World War II, he instructed Air Force crews in the use of radio navigation and compass instruments while serving in Guam and Taipei. He also served in the Royal Canadian Air Force.

Mr. Gray was a member of the Phi Delta Fraternity and was a former member of the Rotary Club.

He leaves his wife, Mary Virginia Gray; two sons, Bruce Gray of Yonkers, N.Y., and James Gray of Brookfield; two daughters, Ayn DuVoisin of Scituate and Linda Simmons of Falls Church, Va., and seven grandchildren.

Memorial donations may be made to the James F. Gray Memorial Fund, c/o E. Gribbin, Brookfield Public Schools, Brookfield Municipal Center, Pocono Road, Brookfield Center, Ct., 06805.

Officials push for Sunday day of rest

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Cohasset has become a "pioneer" of sorts, establishing a guideline which discourages the use of town land for organized activities on Sunday mornings.

They stopped short of endorsing a resolution, but selectmen have put the word out: there will be no Sunday morning organized activities on town-owned property.

Responding to a request from local clergymen to prohibit the use of town-controlled property and fields until 1 p.m. Sundays, selectmen decided informally to support the proposal.

"Let's get the word out that for anyone seeking a permit (for Sunday mornings) for property we have control over, we will push hard not to issue that permit," Selectman Cliff Mitman said. "For anyone who comes in here for a permit, we need to be convinced that the only time they can do this is on Sunday morning."

Rev. Edward Atkinson of the First Parish Church, urged selectmen to adopt a resolution calling for a complete ban on the permitted use of town fields and property by organizations and clubs.

"I hope this becomes a national movement," he explained Monday night to selectmen. "But we should start locally - the principle that has been seriously eroded in our society - that there is no agreed upon day of rest.

"I am not here to ask you to force people to attend church," he continued. "But I am talking about leaving families free to do whatever they please on Sundays." He cited a number of conflicts which force families to choose between attendance at a child's soccer game, a Pop Warner football match, or attendance at church. A number of these activities, including the traditional Rotary Club roadrace and art center summer festival, are held on Sunday mornings while church services are in progress.

Cedar St. dump has 3 years left

By Bob Tis
Mariner Staff

"Three more years and they are going to shut the door on us," is what Cedar Street Landfill superintendent Joesph Laugelle told the health board this week.

Board members voted unanimously to hold a public hearing along with the dump study committee to discuss the possibility of banning commercial trash at the landfill in order to increase its lifespan.

"I would like to consider banning commercial trash," said member Sharon Becker.

"I would get pretty upset if I was a taxpayer and couldn't dump my trash," said board member William Baird. "If we ban commercial trash, the businessmen will sue us for discrimination."

- At Monday's meeting Becker asked Laugelle about complaints she has heard regarding dump employees emptying trash directly into the dumpsters. A recent health board edict states that all trash must be wrapped in a plastic bag.

"I have informed everyone," said Laugelle who said that a large part of the problem was with newspaper.

"I probably put 15 tons of it a week in the dump," Laugelle added.

Presently Sugerman Co. removes paper from a large container at the landfill for free. According to Laugelle the price that they in turn sell the paper for is down near $1 a ton. Because of this the service has been less than adequate and newspapers pile up, creating health and fire hazards.

Board members decided to look into alternatives, including purchasing a new container and paying someone to remove the paper.

A tale of two buildings

● Fire chief rejects town hall addition plans

Construction of the town hall addition will proceed despite a "monkeywrench" thrown into the plans by Fire Chief Daniel Brock.

Late last week, the fire chief rejected plans for the $1.1 million addition. Town meeting in April appropriated money for the addition which will house most of the town offices on Highland Avenue.

The fire chief said he could not approve the plans because they do not contain an adequate sprinkler system based on the total square footage of the entire building. Adding a sprinkler system into the addition will cost approximately $20,000, he said, explaining that the plans currently include main fixtures for a system in the basement.

The fire chief also explained that the plans he received ten days ago were not the same as the preliminary drawings he reviewed several months ago. Because of the increased square footage in the entire building, including the basement, it will not meet the town's fire code standards without a sprinkler system.

Despite the bad news, town officials participated in a

● State opinion sought on police, fire plans

Selectmen will enlist the help of Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray in requesting an opinion from the state about the special town meeting vote on the police and fire station renovation project.

Two residents, Charles DeSantis and Roy Fitzsimmons, wrote to the state attorney general's office, requesting a determination on the controversial Oct. 26 vote.

Assistant Atty. General Henry O'Connell responded this week by stating, "the issue raised by your correspondence are of importance to the town of Cohasset and it would not be appropriate to extend the custom of informal opinions of assistant attorneys general or state officers to information letters to municipal officers or others. This is especially true when such information is not formal and would not be binding on the local officers. You should consult with the town counsel."

Town Counsel Richard Henderson forwarded a written opinion to selectmen this week, stating that the vote and revote regarding the $1.1 million appropriation for the

Sign co. asks for time

Officials from University Brink Sign Co. have asked the zoning board of appeals for an extension in the deadline for a variance needed to erect a 192-square-foot illuminated Stop and Shop sign.

The appeals board voted last week to deny the variance for the sign because the company had not forwarded the information necessary to approve it. But they noted the company could file for an extension of their decision, which occurred just minutes before the deadline of 12:45 p.m. Friday, Nov. 13.

In a letter filed with the town clerk's office at 12:05 p.m. Friday, Kenneth Sawyer of University Brink Sign Co. stated they were filing for an extension "for the Zoning Board of Appeals to hear our case on Dec. 15, 1987."

Appeals board chairman Myrna Putzinger explained that if the board had not filed a decision and no extension was requested, the company would automatically be granted a variance. Town bylaw limits the size of signs to 25 square feet.

Following a nighttime demonstration last month of the 192-square-foot illuminated burgundy sign, board members had requested further information regarding the intensity of the light, and other technical questions. Because they had not received the information, the appeals board filed a decision last week, rejecting the proposed sign at the new super Stop and Shop at the corner of Rte. 3A and Sohier Street.

Odors from CHL and swamp

The state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) has determined that the odors frequently smelled along Rte. 3A near the commercial landfill emanate from Cohasset Heights Ltd. and a nearby swamp.

DEQE investigated the smells in May and June after a number of residents complained to the fire department and the board of health. Air monitoring tests were conducted by the state once a week for four weeks at four locations. But at no time were the tests conducted when there were odors detected in the area, officials explained.

As a result of those tests, DEQE discovered that several compounds exceeded acceptable limits, including benzene, toluene, trichloroethylene and tetrachloroethylene. But the DEQE noted, "I'm not sure that our analytical equipment could identify some of the exotic compounds, present at low concentrations, which might cause the offensive odors. It is logical to assume that the compounds that are present during the odor episodes are present at other times, perhaps not in as high concentrations.

"I believe that the landfill and the swamp are sources of odors. Clear, cold nights with no wind are classic prerequisites for a radiation inversion. This inversion is intensified by the presence of hills surrounding the area. I believe that the odors are trapped during these conditions."

Selectman Martha Gjesteby said she thought the study was inadequate and requested the state conduct a six-month test. She also said that tests should also be conducted in the fall, not just the spring.

Selectmen appointed four members to the town hall building committee, the group that will oversee construction plans for the new town hall addition.

They are seeking a fifth member to this committee. Anyone interested in serving on this committee should contact the selectmen's office at town hall.

The following persons were appointed Monday night: Robert A. Stansell, Diane Sullivan, Veneta Roebuck, and Robert Davenport.

Town was ready for storm

The storm that came and went caught almost everyone by surprise except for local authorities.

A record-breaking seasonal snowstorm blanketed Cohasset with up to 11 inches of heavy wet snow last Thursday, Nov. 12, forcing schools and many local businesses to close down.

"We were very fortunate," said Police Chief Joseph Kealey, who explained the only accidents reported were a couple of cars sliding into snow banks and getting stuck.

"We have a super highway department," said Kealey. "Compared to other towns, they are the tops. Even with a storm like this sneaking up on us they were really on top of things."

"Yes, we were ready for this one," replied Harold Litchfield, supervisor of the highway department.

Litchfield had his crews out sanding the streets at 11:30 p.m. on Wednesday. A team of 12 plows began clearing roads at 3:30 a.m. Thursday and continued until about four that afternoon.

"We started removing snow from the downtown area at 6 p.m. on Thursday and that is still going on," said Litchfield last Friday afternoon.

Litchfield said there were some complaints from residents of private ways. Litchfield said that he will not know how his budget will be affected by the surprise snowfall.

"To my knowledge this is the earliest that we have ever had to cancel school," said superintendent Stephen Hart. "We had to do a lot of athletic rescheduling because of snow and water on the fields."

Hearing continued

Developer/consultant Donald Staszko met with the conservation commission Tuesday night to discuss drainage plans for a single-story commercial building to be constructed at the corner of Sohier Street and Rte. 3A.

Sohier Street Realty Trust owns the property which abuts the Super Stop and Shop. Staszko would not elaborate on plans for the 12,000 square-foot building, saying that he did not own the property. He is working as an agent for Sohier Street Realty Trust.

The commission's engineer, Robert Maki, reviewed the plans and made a list of ten questions and suggestions. Engineer Richard Fitzgerald, representating the realty trust, said he would file an amended application for a notice of intent to the commission. The plans will also be filed with other town boards for their review.

A continuation of the hearing was scheduled for Dec. 1. The proposed commercial building, which will access from Rte.3A, is located on the site of a building owned by Staszko which was recently destroyed in a fire.

Landfill given three years . . .

"I think that we should be willing to pay to keep it out of our landfill," said board chairman John Burns.

"I think that it is asking a lot to tell people to take the paper back home," said Baird.

"There is just a mountain of paper up there," said Laugelle.

"If people want to have a town landfill they are going to have to realize that it is going to be expensive," said Burns.

"Right now the dump is a mudhole," said Laugelle. "I don't know how I am going to get any trucks in there."

In other dump-related activity, health board members heard from Russel Field of Scituate. Field, a local contractor, was in to dispute a billing he received for dumping trash at the landfill.

"My truck wasn't even in town on those days," Field told Laugelle and the board. "It caught my eye because there is no way that I could have brought in that amount of garbage in one week."

According to Field, of the seven landfills that he uses regularly, Cohasset is the only one that doesn't issue a receipt to a driver after he has emptied his load.

"The check off system has never been a problem," said Laugelle.

Board members took under advisement changing the present check-off system.

The health board granted developer Paul Ferreni three variances on Monday night getting the ball rolling once again for his three proposed subdivisions off Evergreen Lane.

After numerous meetings with the planning board and the conservation commission earlier in the year, a compromise sent Ferrini to town meeting looking for an easement on some school property. A negative vote at Town meeting has sent Ferrini back to the drawing board.

"I think in essence they have complied with what the watershed protection agency wanted," said William Baird of the health board.

"Some people think that you can find an engineering solution to everything. In this case I am not convinced," said Sharon Becker of the board who was opposed to some of Ferrini's proposals to negate wetland damages.

"I think allowing an innovative way of complying is better than just saying no and having to go to court over it," said Baird.

Water commissioner Ron Goodwin took note of this and asked Baird to vote on the plan without worrying about an impending lawsuit.

"I think that it is a reasonable engineering solution," said Baird.

Attorney Charles Humpheys was successful in proving to the board that the case presented a manifest injustice to Ferrini. Humphreys argued that a negative vote from the health board would make the land valueless.

"It would not be fair pre-empting land of this size from use especially after it has met all of the perculation tests," said Humpheys.

Jeff Wall appealed to the board stating that the land is too near a brook that flows into Lily Pond. Board members were convinced by Ferrini's plans to curb wetland abuse.

Studds blasts Reagan in Cohasset visit

By Bob Tis
Mariner staff

Congressman Gerry Studds completed a whirlwind tour of the South Shore this weekend, addressing citizens' concerns in both Hingham and Cohasset.

Studds spoke to approximately 50 Hingham residents on prevalent issues on Capitol Hill, including the situation in Nicaragua and the Gramm/Rudman spending bill.

Studds had many criticisms of the President's position in Nicaragua.

"He has changed positions and policy too many times," said Studds. "I thought they were trying to facilitate peace. Everything they have said or done seems to be designed to make it more difficult to achieve peace."

Studds said he was hopeful about the plans of Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega.

"With a mutual interest, I think that we can make this work. For the five countries, I can see why it would be very easy for them to be pessimistic. It really is all up in the air at the moment. This is the first thing in years that has had a chance," said Studds, crossing his fingers in hope.

Studds, who has taken a stand against Reagan's arms supply to the rebel forces, is not worried about the possible communist control of Nicaragua.

"They are not stupid enough to do something that would bring on an American offensive," said Studds, citing the Cuban missile crisis as an example.

Studds admits that a total withdrawal from the area would not immediately be in the country's best interest. "There are a lot of bandits down there and they wouldn't be there if it wasn't for our policies," said Studds. "It is our responsibility at this point."

Studds had less than favorable comments about the Gramm/Rudman spending bill.

"It is absolutely mindless," said Studds,saying that the cuts are being made in the wrong places. "It is just beyond any rational thinking."

In Washington, Studds is presently caught up in debate over the budget and the deficit.

"The debt that we are placing on future generations is weakening us economically. The big dollars are for things like the MX and Star Wars programs. No one even knows what the final price tag is going to be on that. It will be in the hundreds of billions in the next couple years," said Studds.

"We have only put a tiny dent in the deficit," said Studds. "We'd better get at it. The President says get at it, but at the same time he wants more money for the military and he won't raise taxes. You can't take in less and spend more. It is simply ludicrous."

Congressman Gerry Studds, back in familiar territory, talks to residents during his hometown visit last Saturday.

Studds would like to see more money chaneled into education, health and the environment as opposed to military spending.

"The bottom line," said Studds, "is that the argument is not over money - it is just over how to spend it."

Studds took an unpopular stance in favor of the Old Colony Rail line. Some of the audience's fears were quelled, however, when Studds told the crowd, "I think that you will find that there won't be much federal money available for at least a year."

Studds accepted praise from both gatherings for his controversial stand on AIDS and his recent informational mailings to constituents.

"Someday Washington will have to answer for ignoring this problem," said Studds, who took jabs at elected officials who are afraid to go on the record supporting AIDS information and research funding.

"The real challenge is for people around the country to tell their Congress to vote their conscience," said Studds.

Studds raked Reagan over the coals for his lack of support of student loans.

"The whole thought process behind that is utterly stupid," said Studds. "Some people can't differentiate between an expenditure and an investment."

Studds told a small crowd of 20 in Cohasset that the country is on the brink of an economic crisis.

"Congress is not about to raise taxes," said Studds. "That is part of the problem. That takes courage. Many officials have backed themselves into a corner saying they will not raise taxes."

Studds admitted that he does not know the answer to many of the wastewater and sewer funding problems that the two communities share.

"For some of the things that you are talking about, it would be an oppressive tax; too much for property owners to assume," said Studds. "The state has boxed itself into Proposition 2 1/2. The pool of money is going down."

Studds also did not have any direct answers for the clean-up of Boston Harbor.

"I do not envy the next president. The administration will inherit one heck of a fiscal responsibility," said

'Picnic' opens Dramatic Club's 67th season

By David Johnson
Mariner staff

The Cohasset Dramatic Club opened its 67th season last weekend with a peppy production of Picnic, by William Inge a story of love and romance set in a small Kansas town in the 1950's.

Although the play itself was a bit hokey and low in mental calories, the drama group did a creditable job. The acting, staging and set were all as good as possible given the poverty of community theater.

Directing his first show for the dramatic club, Scituate's Joe Graham did a fine job bringing the play together. It definitely worked, although some of the actors seemed a little too understated.

The stars of the show were clearly Audrey Abrams as Rosemary Sidney, an "old maid school teacher" and her friend, Howard Bevans played by Jim Leonard. The pair have lots of impressive acting credentials which they put to good use last weekend. They were as good, if not better, as many comedy teams on T.V.

Scituate's Nan Hamacher was a warm, smiling Helen Potts, one of the two women who share a yard in the small town.

Jim Pickel played Hal Carter, an unemployed young man who rents a room from Mrs. Potts. He is really the central character of the play: his appearance upsets the romantic plans of the other characters, while everyone's perceptions of him determines their actions.

Pickel did a fine job, but the love triangle that develops between himself, Madge, Cynthia Basler of Hingham and Alan Seymour, played by Stephen Lee of Randolph, could have used more tension. The three romantic leads were all too understated. They seemed to lack confidence or perhaps they did not want to overact.

Once or twice Basler did not speak quite loudly enough. However, she filled the role of the beautiful and innocent dime store clerk admirably.

Lee also looked the part of the handsome fraternity boy, about to return to college. However, he was the only one of the actors who did not manage some sort of Western accent at least occasionally.

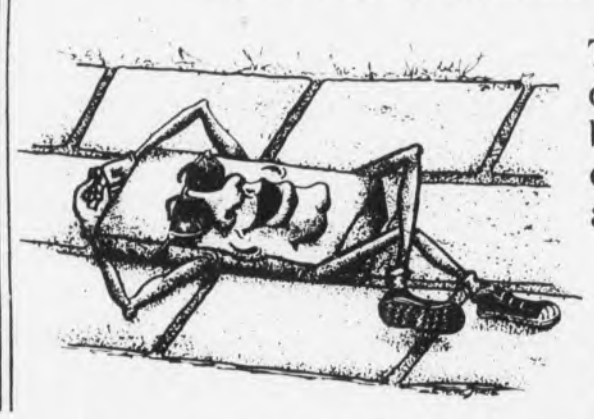
Cohasset's Jennifer Plante played Millie Owens, Madge's kid sister who was making the transition between tomboy and young woman with some difficulty. Plante managed splendidly.

Betty Miessner of Scituate was the girls' worried mother, Flo Owens. She was excellent and managed to keep a Mid-Western accent throughout. She didn't skip an "R" for the entire show.

Doris Herzberg and Angi Walsh of Cohasset were the two other school teachers. They both — especially Herzberg — did humorous, colorful jobs.



Matthew Kuhn of Norwell played Bomber, a high school tormenter of Millie's. He did well with his brief role.

The group is off to a fine start. Later in the season they will produce Come Blow Your Horn by Neil Simon and The Heiress, by Ruth and Augustus Goetz, which is "suggested" by a Henry James novel. If Picnic is any indication, everyone who enjoys good, cheap theater will want to see the others. I know I will.

At the start of the play, Bonnie Haley of Scituate welcomed the audience to join the Cohasset Dramatic Group. "It's a lot of fun," she said.

To join, send membership dues to The Cohasset Dramatic Club, Box 225, Cohasset, 02025. Membership for patrons is $25 or more; $15 for couples, $10 for singles and $1 for those under 18.

Selectmen support day of rest . . .

"You control the town's property," he stated. "And I am asking you not to schedule things during the hours of traditional worship."

Rev. Clifford Cutler of St. Stephen's Church, concurred with the resolution which was signed by a number of the local clergymen. "We live in such a hectic time," Rev. Cutler said. "For the health of the community, we need to set aside some free time. It doesn't really matter if it's Saturday or Sunday morning, although Sunday is more sensible. But we need time for a breather."

Selectman Rocco Laugelle asked how the parishioners reacted to the proposal. Rev. Atkinson, who said the proposal has been the subject of his sermons, admitted most people who have confronted this scheduling problem "feel isolated. This calls for institutional action," he added, recalling one incident in which a young boy was told if he did not attend Sunday morning soccer tryouts, he would not make the team.

"We have received encouragement," Rev. Atkinson said. "I would like to try things easier the first time. But if we do not get the appropriate answer, then we could engage in an expensive political action, but I hope not. This is an issue of respect."

Rev. Atkinson explained he has brought the same proposal to the school committee, and plans to discuss a similar resolution regarding school-owned fields and property.

Sunday soccer games and the annual powderpuff game are two examples when persons are required to attend a sports event rather than attending church or spending time with their families at home, he noted.

Owned fields for soccer games and the annual powderpuff game are two examples when persons are required to attend a sports event rather than attending church or spending time with their families at home, he noted.

"Sunday is the only vacuum left - it's the one piece left on the calendar. Pretty soon even that will be all gone," he continued. "In essence that's gone now, too. I think it's important you allow us to have that time."

Selectman Laugelle noted that some town activities, including the annual roadrace, could be moved to a location farther away from the village churches.

Selectmen Marth Gjesteby and Burt Pratt questioned the proposal. Gjesteby said she was concerned with delving into the Constitutionally-guaranteed separation of church and state. Selectman Pratt wondered whether such a regulation would be enforceable. "Did you know then that the Sailing Club, of which you are commodore," he said. to Rev. Atkinson, "would be unable to do anything on Sunday mornings?"

Rev. Atkinson said the policy would apply to organized groups using town property, not individuals.

"This is symbolic and it could be contagious," he added. The last thing I want is for someone from the church telling you what to do on Sundays mornings. But it's within your power to be an example of leadership."

Charles DeSantis, a member of the Coastal Soccer League, admitted "we're a big violator, but our games are scheduled by the league. But if Cohasset requested that no fields be used Sunday monrings, I think we could get 99 percent compliance.We will try to make sure they do not schedule games here on Sunday mornings."

Selectman Mitman assured DeSantis the games could be played in Cohasset on Sundays, as long a they are scheduled after 1 p.m.

Studds vs. Reagan . . .

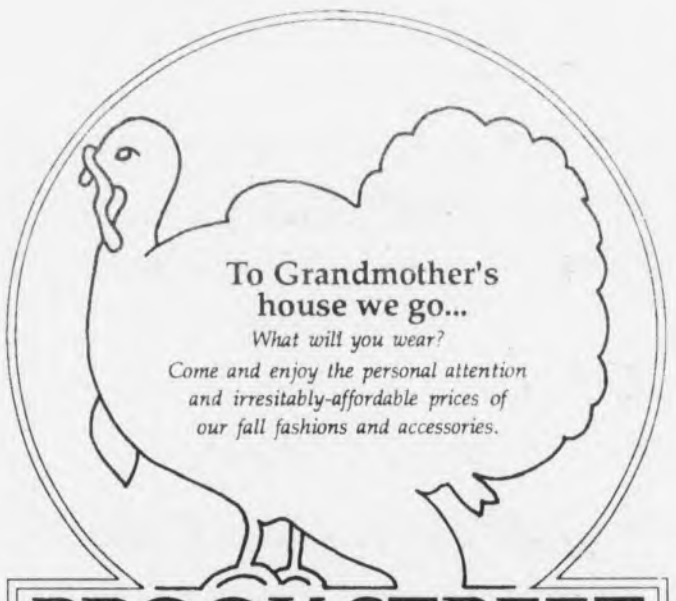
Studds.

Studds explained that 88 percent of the federal budget is uncontrollable. Residents suggested measures such as an amusement tax on things like cigarettes, beer, plays and sporting events.



"I think that tends to put the tax on the people that can't afford it," said Studds. "I favor a graduated tax based more on people's ability to pay."

Studds also criticized the President's present policy in the Persian Gulf.

"I don't think the President has thought this completely through either. I think that the whole situation will end in tragedy. It is not clear what our policy is. It certainly isn't what he said it is," said Studds.

Studds also addressed the problem of long-term nursing care.

"We have the best medical system in the world," he said, "but in other respects it is the worst. A Saudi Arabian president comes here to Boston and gets the best medical care in the world by highly skilled professionals. But for a person of modest means from New Bedford, the odds are that he wouldn't get anywhere near that hospital."

around town

☐ A large round of applause sure goes to some folks around town, both young and old! Friday it was the football team. Saturday it was the soccer team . . . and their parents and friends. The grand total of hours given was 300!! The reason? To get the field ready for the State Soccer game that was to be held on Saturday! As everyone knows there was the snowstorm on Thursday and the field was like all the rest of the town, snowed under. Unlike the rest of the town, it couldn't be plowed (the ground wasn't frozen underneath). So, all those people got together to make sure that they would do everything in their power to have the game at home. No names need to be mentioned, you all know who you are, just give yourselves a pat on the back and be sure that you know everyone is grateful to you for your efforts!

☐ Its nice to know that the Community Garden Club of Cohasset is again planning their Christmas House Tour. The date will be Dec. 10th. Watch for more details as they are announced. Seven homes will be on the tour, and a tea at the Community Center will follow, so it sounds like another winner!

☐ Here's hoping that Grace Mitchell is feeling better!

☐ Congratulations go to Gloria Ellis and Steve Forman, both of whom recently attended a real estate sales seminar in the Grand Cayman Islands. They earned memberships in the President's Silver Club by performing outstanding service to their customers. Jack Conway certainly does know how to treat his employees right, and they sure do a lot for him in return!! Jack is a fine man and his company sure is a good one!!

☐ Should Bookport be renamed Bowker-port? It might seem so. Three generations of Bowker women are now employed at Bookport, at Lincoln Plaza, Hingham. They are: Barbara Shea, who is also working on an AIDS grant in New Borso; Barbara' mother, Cornellia Bowker Shea; and Mary Bowker, Barbara's grandmother, who worked as a librarian for many years at the Boston Public Library.

Town hall groundbreaking ceremonies took place Saturday. Participating in the event were: (l to r) architect Brett Donham; project manager Harry Driscoll; project superintendent Charlie MacIntosh; Selectmen Burt Pratt, Martha Gjesteby and Cliff Mitman. Shovels were wielded by (1 to r) Rocco Laugelle, selectman chairman and Benjamin Blake, chairman of the Building Study Committee. (J. Paul Mac Donald)

Its official, Rev. Gary Ritts is now installed as the minister of the Second Congregational Church. No matter what denomination you are, you should take a Sunday and listen to his sermon, he is truly inspiring. And a fine man. He and his family are a grand addition to our town. We are lucky!

☐ Hats off to Bruce Dalrymple, who has been named vice president of Aslanis Seafoods, Inc. of Boston. When you buy your seafood at supermarket chains, it is he that is responsible for putting them there, and that's good!

☐ Congratulations to Dan Leahy, general manager of Kimball's by the Sea. Dan was recently honored by Norfolk County Newton Lung Association as being a leader in creating a smoke-free environment for restaurant patrons. Kimball's doesn't allow smoking in its dining room, which should certainly please all non-smokers! All the better to taste that delicious food!

☐ Everyone remembers Jean Fink, the wonderful teacher at the Osgood School. She has since retired, after leaving an endilible mark on her students (they all loved her so much). Mrs. Fink hasn't retired from her love of children though, as anyone knows who saw her last week-end! Her son Chris and daughter-in-law Bonnie were here with their baby for a pre-Thanksgiving visit. When last seen, Jean was walking that baby with such pride and love . . .

☐ On the subject of former Osgood teachers, here's hoping that former principal Mrs. Mulcahy is feeling much better after her accident last weekend. We all know that you can't hold a grand lady like that down for long!!

☐ Talk about being taken by surprise, how about the job that Harold Litchfield and his crew did after the last snow storm. Not only was it an early one, it was on a holiday with no one realy being willing to believe the forecasts . . . in spite of all that, all of our roads were done in record time. A salute to you Harold, you did it again.

☐ It means a lot to all of us that those two took the time and the effort to go to Washington, not only representing themselves and their feelings, but our town too! Thank you gentlemen. A tribute like that makes everyone feel special.

☐ Dr. and Mrs. Mark L. Friedman are the parents of Laura Danielle, who was born October 31, at Mount Auburn Hospital in Cambridge. Paternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Freidman of Danbury, Connecticut. Maternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs Robert Gabriel of Miller Beach, Indiana.

around town

☐ The question that everyone is asking is will Rocco Laugelle, our illustrious selectman, volunteer to be Mr. Norwell? Sure is the image of him . . .

☐ Hats off to Burt Pratt, who was honored recently by the Massachusetts Republican Committee for his service to the Cohasset Town Republican Committee. He has been doing this work for forty years, he certainly earned his honor! We should all take a lesson from Burt and get involved.

☐ If you graduated from Notre Dame Academy in 1972, the class is looking for you! They are holding their fifteenth reunion on December 12th at the Alewife Restaurant in Norwell. For more information please call Joanne L'Esperance Shore at 331-4484.

☐ Congratulations go to eight sixth graders: Megan Bruns, Wesley DeSantis, Elizabeth Deveney, Jonathan Ford, Christopher Kondrat, Michael Riley, Jessica Sammon and Kimberlee Ward. These students have been chosen for a new leadership program to enable them to improve decision making, problem solving, and communication. Watch for these names in the future, they are certain to be everywhere!

☐ Hats off to Michelle Babin who helped her Notre Dame Academy's cross country team to win the sixth straight Catholic League title! And continued success in the finals, we're rooting for you Michelle.

☐ Get those turkeys in the oven early so that you can watch our football team in action when they face Hull. It's in Hull at 10 o'clock and the winner will be co-champ of the league, small school division. All Coach Pisano and his boys need are lots of cheer and tons of applause, they promise to do the rest!

☐ Larry Souza and Gerry Pattison went to Washington, D.C. to honor our Veterans on veteran's day last week, and they certainly were in for a surprise! They were snowbound there, and wound up taking the train back to return home! That sure qualifies as going above and beyond the call of duty, though they reported that the train ride was a great one.

☐ That's the news from here, please let us in on your newsworthy event . . . as for me, I'm about to have a nice mug of Joan Pinkham's recipe for mulled cider. It was in last week's issue, and I cannot wait.

Cloud of doubt

Despite a ruling from town counsel, who conferred with the town's bonding counsel, there is still some doubt as to whether the majority of residents voted to renovate the police and fire station.

That's unfortunate, because the town is about to spend $1 million on the project - a project many people in town seem to be against.

The vote at the special town meeting was close, 160 to 77 to approve the project. But the appropriation required a two-thirds majority of those in attendance. And the fact is, 160 was not a majority. It was extremely close, but it was not the 160.7 votes needed to approve the measure.

Town moderator, was in a perplexing position. Was it 160 or 161? Either way, and the project was won or lost. He decided the vote was too close to call, and requested a revote on the matter. That was his decision, and there would be no alternative.

But as one resident, Charles DeSantis of Forest Avenue, noted, the 160 to 77 vote was "less than a tie." By mathematically rounding 160.7 to the nearest figure, you have 161, not 160, as the required number of votes necessary to approve the appropriation. The measure therefore required 161 votes to pass. It failed on that first vote, and therefore should have been left for dead.

It was close, no doubt about that. However, no matter how you contort the configurations, 160 is not 160.7 or 161. The motion to appropriate $1 million for the police and fire station should be a dead issue.

But it is not. Town moderator made the decision to issue a revote on the matter, and the second vote showed a clear two-thirds majority in favor of the plans. Construction of the project will be set to begin.

It is perhaps fruitless, even damaging, to bring this issue to the forefront of debate again. There is little voters can do but accept the second vote and dig into their pockets for the construction money.

Town counsel has ruled that the revote was valid, and the time for questions should therefore cease.

However, for our future reference, perhaps the rules governing town meeting should be more explicit. What should happen to a vote if a majority is necessary, but that majority is some unattainable fraction of a vote? Should the number be rounded off to the nearest digit, or should a revote be immediately ordered to remove any doubt about the vote?

Votes for political candidates, even in Cohasset, have been known to be close, even tied. But one vote either way clearly tips the scale. With a two-thirds majority vote at town meeting, there can sometimes be that murky margin of error between a fraction of a vote - victory or defeat.

This would be an unwelcomed precedent to set for town meeting. We hope that somewhere within the Parliamentary rules, there is justification for the vote we took Oct. 26. No matter how you view it, there remains a cloud of doubt over this expensive renovation project.

QUALITY AUDITING CAC MARK OF INTEGRITY

Committee sends synopsis of work

This letter was sent to selectmen from Charles DeSantis, a member of The Milliken Field Study Committee. Ed.)

At the study committee's last meeting, it was decided that I would write your board and give a synopsis of the committee's work. This information should be of some help to another study committee and to the Board of Selectmen in making their decision to either support or to oppose the project.

For ease of discussion, I divide this information into four headings. These are: 1. Committee Composition; 2. Definition of Need; 3. Available Resources; 4. Committee Solution.

COMMITTEE COMPOSITION

The committee included the Director of Athletics who provided the committee with the best assessment of the High School and Junior High needs. The AD also had the best perspective on the relative quality of our facilities. The Superintendent of Tree & Park was aboard. He provided the committee with his expertise on questions of maintenance, irrigation systems, security fencing, etc. A member from the Recreation Department helped provide input on that department's needs, and I represented the Cohasset Soccer Club, the town's biggest organized user of outdoor facilities in the Spring. Our Chairman, through his affiliation with the Grid Iron Club and the School System, provided insight from both those perspectives.

DEFINITION OF NEED

1. Separate Track from Baseball field. Intersection of two made for dangerous situation. Track locatior made for inefficient use of Milliken acreage.

2. Upgrade varsity playing surface to inter town league quality. Provide seating for 1000, a press box, handicapped access and seating, irrigation system, security fencing to protect investment and provide crowd control, a 1/4 mile low maintenance synthetic surface track, and lights for night play.

3. Provide more and improved Recreation Department facilities, provide better playi ig surfaces for Spring Soccer Program and for JV Freshmen and Junior High sports.

4. Increase practice areas for all sports.

5. Provide locker room, restroom and concession facilities for High School contest'. Provide storage for field equipment adjacent to playing field. Provide more and better parking for High School contests.

6. Provide for long term maintenance of facility by securing a maintenance endowment to guarantee that facility will serve the town far into the future.

7. Provide a graded access to the varsity facility for maintenance, and ambulance vehicles, and for the handicapped.

8. Upgrade the aesthetics of the varsity field and its entrance by providing for landscaping.

9. Relocate and improve Baseball Field.

AVAILABLE RESOURCES

We have Lillard and Milliken Field to work with for playing surfaces. We have the storage, restrooms, cafeteria and parking at the High School.

COMMITTEE'S SOLUTION

We created a varsity field surrounded by a track at Lillard Field. This site did things for us that Milliken could not. At Milliken we could not site the track away from the baseball diamond and still provide an additional field for recreation and JV-Freshmen-Junior High play. There simply was not enough real estate. Lillard did this for us plus fulfilled all our needs except (9.), the new baseball diamond location, but it did improve the baseball field by removing the track and the old bleachers, and of course removed the conflict with the track.

Our solution did provide for more and improved recreation fields. We gained for the Recreation Department use of the present varsity football-soccer field. Perhaps even more important, by moving the varsity field to Lillard we opened up thousands of square feet for High School and Recreation Department practice.

In summary our proposal accomplished the following:

1. Created a new varsity playing surface and track.

2. 100 seat enclosed bleachers (for safety and aesthetics) together with press box, handicapped ramp, seating for handicapped.

3. Supplied Recreation Department and Spring Soccer Program with additional new full sized higher quality playing field (the former varsity field).

4. Increased substantially the area for practice of all sports.

5. Found locker room, storage, concession facilities and lavatories at the High School at no cost to the project.

6. Secured an endowment which would easily handle the maintenance of the field in perpetuity.

7. Designed field that met all State Handicapped requirements.

8. Improved site entrance by providing professional landscapimg.

The committee proudly stands by its work. It answered all the major needs of our athletic programs. It could not be done in segments, for laying a field, then some following year laying a track, and then some other year providing drainage would be chaotic and more expensive. Our design allowed for the project to be constructed with a minimum interference with our present sport schedules. We solicited supplemental funds and received $64,000 from two sources!

We ask that any future plan be weighed against ours to ensure that it addresses the needs so identified above. We also suggest that the Board of Selectmen hold our lowest bid if agreeable to the contractor (some $100,000 below our architect's estimate) for six months in the event that our option becomes the selected plan. I remind you that we have $36,000 in plans, specs and bid documents that will go to waste if not used. If there is a better way to do this project we are all for it. If not, we ask that our plan be resubmitted to the Town Meeting for ratification. We wish our successors all the best and hope that they can develop a better solution in time for April Town Meeting so that we can at long last provide the basic outdoor athletic facilities that our youth deserve.

Warmest regards,
Charles DeSantis

International tribute to Thomas Churchill

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

A small but elegant reminder of the man who inspired a connection between two distant towns was dedicated Sunday, Nov. 15.

A marble headstone was placed at the grave of the late Thomas Churchill, the man whose heroic wartime efforts paved the way for friendship across the Atlantic Ocean.

It was his revisit to Souppes Sur Loing forty years later that inspired his French hosts to suggest a sister-town relationship with the residents of Cohasset. It was an idea that Churchill supported enthusiastically.

In a letter to the editor written after the first official visit to Cohasset in 1986 by the mayor of Souppes, Churchill wrote, "this certainly presents untold opportunities to the families in Cohasset desirous of widening their vistas of the world, more particularly Europe."

The marble stone was taken from the same quarry which was used to construct the base of the Statue of Liberty. The moument reads: "A La Memoire du Major Churchill - La Commune de Soup reconnaissante - Soup Sur Loing, France, 8/7/87. Emblazoned with the colorful town seal, the monument marks the date of Churchill's death on April 7, 1987.

His widow, Celeste, and members of her family gathered Sunday afternoon along with town officials and members of the Cultural Exchange Committee to dedicate the Souppes memorial at the Woodside Cemetery. The 35 invited guests dropped single roses onto the gravesite.

Lee Jenkins, representing the Cultural Exchange Committee, presented a basket of flowers in memory of the former selectman and school committee member. "In behalf of the committee, we express our gratitude to Tom for planting the seeds of friendship. May we continue to reap from those seeds," she stated.

Rev. Edward Atkinson of the First Parish Church, officiated at the ceremonies. He talked about the memory of Churchill, and how his life affected so many in different parts of the world.

Churchill was a Major in the U.S. Army; commanding officer of the Fourth Armored Division task force that gained control of Souppes from the Germans.

In notes he wrote before his 1984 return to Souppes with his family, Churchill recalled the moments leading to the liberation of the tiny Frnech town. "Col. Conley (Co. 8th TK.) had received word from the Third Army that the bridges at Souppes had been left unguarded. Reports indicated the Germans had moved back into the town. There was a threat the bridges would be blown. This would seriously hinder and split the Third Army. Our mission was to sieze the bridges and secure the town," he wrote.

"Our friends from the 35th Infantry were placed on B Company tanks. The slow crawl began with Capt. MacGlarney (Co B 8th Tank) himself leading the entire force in a jeep. We hugged the rear of each vehicle so that the column wouldn't stray. Support was also forthcoming from the Free French.

"Just before dawn," he continued, "Mac arrived at the bridges leading to Souppes. Our friends from the 35-3rd. Bn. 329 Int. Regt. crossed the bridges, securing both sides. When dawn broke, B/Co. 8th Tank was completedly inside Souppes, while the infantry was engaged in a fire fight with the Germans on the southern perimeter of the town.

"We reported back at day break to Tom Conley that the bridges were secured. We also advised of enemy action on the southern approaches and that we had suffered some casualities. We were given further orders to secure the area, destroy any Germans and await further orders."

He concluded his notes by stating, "We sadly had three of our force killed in action. Evacuation was impossible. The local mortuary held the bodies. News of this spread throughout the town. The entrance to the area was a massive collection of bouquets given by the local citizens. Such love and affection still remains there today."

Robert and Richard Churchill grandsons of the late Thomas Churchill unveiled the monument sent by the town of Souppes-Sur-Loing.

A relative of the late Major Churchill lays a rose by his grave during Sunday's memorial service.

Rev. Atkinson borrowed the words of Robert Terry Weston's "The Web of Life," comparing Churchill's life to a "living web that runs through us and through the universe."

"The web of life that interconnects us is real - in it lies our immortality. The things we do have distant echoes. Our lives make a difference eternally," he continued.

"God cast Tom in that role to earn the gratitude of people across the ocean," he noted. "The strands of that web have grown to a relationship with our sister city. There have been exchanges and new and precious friendships. We have been connected with a new and greater community. This marble is taken as a visible reminder that the web is real. It is there to enrich many lives."

Selectman Cliff Mitman, liason with the Cultural Exchange Committee, talked about his exchange visit to Souppes last year. He said many people there feel a strong sense of gratitude to Churchill for their liberation during World War II. "It really brought it home to us," he stated. "I think this memorial is approriate - a fitting reminder of the life that touched two towns."

Conservation Commission briefs . . .

Brook works

The conservation commission requested that the highway supervisor file a notice of intent regarding work the department has done near Peppermint and James brooks. The commission also discussed allegations by Sam Esposito that the department has filled in his Rte. 3A property with diggings from Peppermint Brook.

The commission told Litchfield that no machines can be used to clean Peppermint Brook, although the members admitted it is an impossible job clearing the debris by hand.

Esposito showed the commission several photographs which indicated that dirt had been dropped onto his property where he plans to operate a commercial nursery. The Hull Street resident asked the commission repeatedly why he is harassed continually by town officials when others need not follow the regulations. He mentioned numerous accounts when town officials have stopped him from working on his property at the corner of Pond Street and Chief Justice Cushing Highway. "I did nothing but improve that property," he said.

Ripley Rd. repairs

Philip Smith, the new owner of 103 Ripley Road, will file a notice of intent with the conservation commission to approve a porch roof he had erected in the front of the building.

The commission requested a meeting with Smith to clarify the renovations he plans at the former art center building. Smith explained that the contractor simply extended a roof ten feet over the sidewalk, and placed a boardwalk over the asphalt on the sidewalk. The extended porch roof allows water to fall into the drain, the contractor told commission members Tuesday night.

Because the building is within the floodplain, commission members told Smith he will have to file a notice of intent. The commission will formally vote on the plan at its Dec. 1 meeting.

Selectmen angered by Brock's memo . . .

groundbreaking ceremony Saturday morning, Nov. 14, in the town hall parking lot.

At selectmen's meeting Monday night, Chairman Rocco Laugelle was angered by Chief Brock's "last minute" memo. "Town meeting has voted for this one million dollar building and at the last minute a monkeywrench is thrown into it. I asked the chairman of the town hall study committee if he knew anything about this, and he was shocked to hear something like this," Laugelle told the chief.

Chief Brock replied, "I saw incomplete plans last spring. Those plans would not require a sprinkler system. The building inspector forwarded the new plans to me which were submitted ten days ago. Those are the first complete plans I saw."

"As an ex-officio member of the town hall study committee, did you attend their meetings?" Laugelle asked.

"I was never invited and I was never told to attend," the chief answered. "I sent a letter asking when the meetings would be held and they never responded."

"I can't understand why you wouldn't go out and inquire," the chairman persisted. "If I were in your position, I would have made sure I was there."

Selectman Burt Pratt noted that in a memo sent by architects Donham and Sweeney, it stated the plans were discussed with the fire chief in May, 1986. But the chief explained, "they were not the complete drawings. The last plans included a basement for a total of 8,900 square feet, and the law is clear that the basement is included in the total square footage."

Selectman Cliff Mitman sought a resolution to the problem by requesting that the chief discuss the problem directly with the town hall study committee, "to do whatever has to be done - by cutting somewhere else or asking for more money at another town meeting."

The chief noted that by expanding the sprinkler system, the elaborate fire alarm system proposed for the building could be reduced in size and cost.

Selectmen agreed with the suggestion, and asked the chief to meet soon with the study committee.

But some members of the board expressed their displeasure with the chief's actions. "I'm wicked disappointed in you, chief," Selectman James Gallagher told him. "It was your job to make sure this building was adequately protected. You should have gone to those meetings."

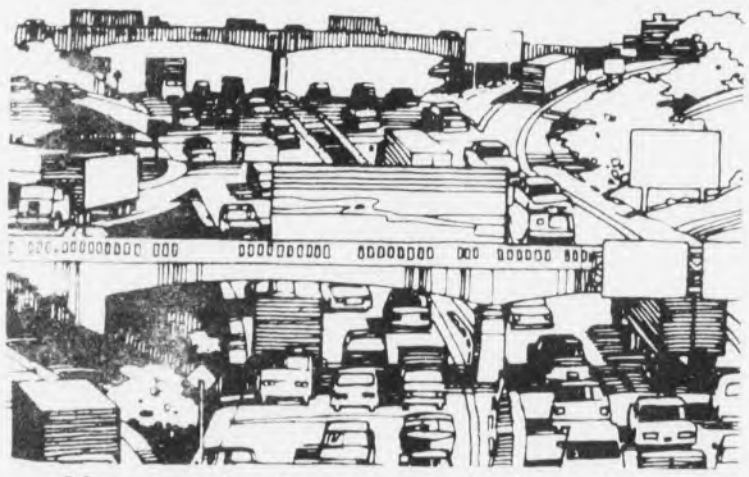
"I can't understand how a man in your position would not look at these plans until the last minute," Laugelle added. "It's your job to look into what's going on. Why didn't you go to the architect if you didn't go to the meetings?"

Selectmen Chairman Rocco Laugelle discusses the town hall addition plans during Saturday's groundbreaking ceremonies. He is thanked by selectmen Burt Pratt and Martha Gjesteby.

(Paul MacDonald)

At Saturday's groundbreaking ceremonies, selectmen Gjesteby, Pratt, Mitman and Laugelle gathered alongside architect Brett Donham and Benjamin Blake, chairman of the town hall study committee, to take the first shovels of muddy dirt from the site.

Officials from the construction company, A.P. Whittaker, also participated - project superintendent Charles MacIntosh and project manager Harry Driscoll. The general contractor, working with architect Donham, recently completed major renovations to the Hanover fire station.



Selectman Laugelle was given a recent tour of the new facility and was impressed by the work."They did a great job in Hanover," he said Saturday. "There were no complaints at all. The fire chief pointed out many of the things they did as extras. I've seen it myself - they did a great job. I hope everything will work out well here."

Laugelle qucikly added he would like some help in saving the flowering arbovitae tree that will have to be transplanted once construction begins. He was referring to a discussion last week in which he stated he wanted the tree saved, despite arguments by his brother, Peter Laugelle, tree and park superintendent, that the tree could not survive transplantation.

Selectman Mitman jokingly suggested Saturday that the tree could be made into a desk for Rocco.

The new addition will allow enough office space to accomodate the town employees from the Bates Building on Elm Street. There will be handicapped access into the building, with an elevator to the second level.

Decision on town meeting vote . . .

police and fire station project was legal. Henderson said he also consulted with the town's bonding counsel before making that determination.

Forest Avenue resident Charles DeSantis told selectmen Monday night, "it would be uncomfortable for the town to proceed with this element of doubt." At the Oct. 26 town meeting, 160 residents voted for the project and 81 were opposed. Because that was not a clear two-thirds majority, the margin necessary to appropriate the money, the town moderator asked for a revote. The second vote clearly established a two-thirds majority in favor of the plan, and the article was approved.

DeSantis, in his letter to Atty. O'Connell stated, "it now appears that the second vote called by the moderator was invalid because his reason for calling a second vote is without basis in Parlimentary Law."

But Selectmen Chairman Rocco Laugelle emphasized that both town counsel and bond counsel have approved the second vote. "If we don't have faith in town counsel and bond counsel, we might as well close down our doors."

DeSantis said he was concerned the revote would set a major precedent for the town.

"I agree," Selectman Cliff Mitman said, "however, to resolve any doubt, it might be as simple as Mary Jeanette Murray making a request to the attorney general."

DeSantis agreed that direct input from the state attorney general's office would satisfy Cohasset voters. "The vote (Oct. 26) was not a tie, it was less than a tie. So I thought the measure did not prevail. I think the town would be satisfied if the attorney general was a party to this."

Selectmen noted that in order to receive an opinion from the attorney general's office, the request must be made by a state, not a local official or resident. Sohier Street resident Robert Davenport said when he attempted to obtain legal opinion from the state attorney general regarding a sewer commission matter, "he said he wouldn't rule. That's as far as I got," he said.

DeSantis told selectmen he was acting on his own and not on behalf of the sewer commission.

In other action Monday night, selectmen talked to Harbormaster Steve Osborne about pay increases for the laborers and night patrols in his department. Osborne suggested that in order to keep the current personnel, the town should pay $6.50 per hour, an increase from the current $5 per hour rate. "I believe this is a good faith type of thing," he explained. "An increase will keep them coming back."

Selectman Laugelle told Osborne that last year he proposed a pay hike for the assistant harbormasters who work as volunteers. He had suggested they receive $100 for their work, but the proposal was rejected. Osborne agreed the assistants should be paid, but said that the $100 amount "is an insult," and he would propose even more at budget time.

Selectman Gjesteby asked the harbormaster to submit a written personnel proposal. Included in that proposal, selectmen agreed, should be a survey of what other assistant harbormasters and laborers are paid in area towns.

Nigh attends three-day aerobics conference

Normandie Nigh of Cohasset, Director of the International Council on Sport and Exercise Safety, just returned from a three-day aerobics conference in Washington D.C. The conference was hosted by the International Dance Exercise Association, an aerobics organization with more than 14,000 members in 38 countries.

Normandie, who teaches on the South Shore at the Hingham and Cohasset Community Centers, taught two workshops on light impact aerobics (LIA). She has developed a new style of instruction which creates a less intimidating environment for participants who are not accustomed to 'typical' aerobics.

Normandie will be traveling to Vail, Colorado this weekend to co-teach a two day intensive training program with Drs. Peter and Lorna Francis of the IDEA. She is planning a workshop in January for local instructors to share the new research information, choreography, and teaching style which she has been presenting to instructors all over the world.

For more information on this winter workshop, call 383-2515.

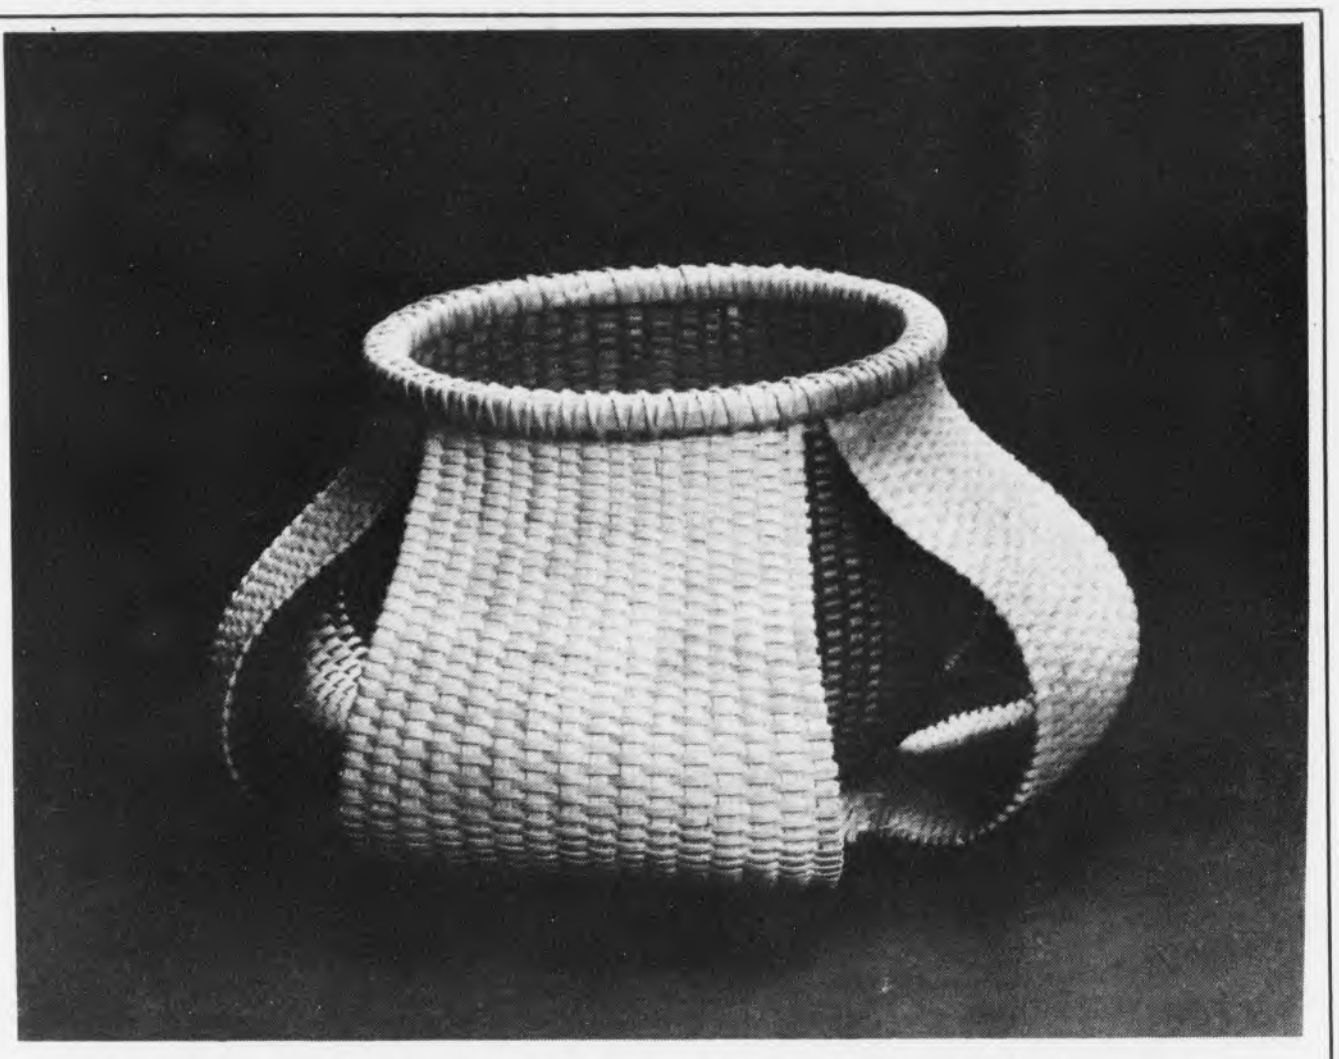
Artisan exhibit begins Nov. 22 at Art Center

Eight South Shore artisans come together for a major exhibit of their finely handcrafted work in the South Shore Art Center's invitational gallery in Cohasset.

Invited to exhibit in this show are Victoria Justice, masks; Penelope Walker, woven rugs and wallhangings; Lois Atherton, ceramics; Dianne Stanton, baskets; J.F. Collins, wood furniture; Clifford Roberts, weavings; John Heller, jewelry; and Bill Bell, ceramic wall pieces.



The opening will be Sunday, Nov. 22 with a reception from 4-6 p.m. at the Center, 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset. The opening coincides with the opening of the Center's all new holiday gift shop featuring an array of handcrafted items for gift giving.

This exhibit of fine crafts will demonstrate the quality of handcrafted work created by South Shore artisans. Pieces by these artisans can be seen in many corporate and private collections in the Boston area.

The baskets of Dianne Stanton of Pembroke are either very traditional forms or sculptural containers that "test the definition of a basket. The shapes are fluid and organic, often inspired by objects in the world around me," Stanton said, in describing her work in the exhibit.

She has had one-person shows at the Thayer Gallery, Thayer Academy; Old Barn Gallery, Heritage Plantation; Anderson Gallery, Bridgewater State College; and Sailor's Valentine Gallery, Nantucket. Her work has been included in group shows at the Tennessee Basketry Conference in Smithville, Tennessee; the Rome Art and Community Center, in Rome, N.Y.; The Dairy Barn, in Athens, Ohio; a travelling exhibit, the Basketry Link in Mendicino, California; and Fiber National '84, Dunkirk, New York.

She was awarded the first prize in sculpture at the 1987 Duxbury Art Association Winter Juried Show and first prizes in crafts at several Plymouth Outdoor Art Shows. She received the juror's award in the travelling exhibit, Basketry Link. She has taught basketry at numerous places in Massachusetts and Connecticut.

A hand-woven basket by Pembroke artist Dianne Stanton on display at the SS Art Center.

Victoria Justice terms her masks "wearable art" and she constructs them with a high degree of finish from a great variety of contemporary and antique materials. Included in her working materials are fabric and fibers of every description — paper, leather, lace, crystal, feathers, silk flower parts and beading.

She was commissioned to design a pair of masks for a bride and groom who chose to have a masqued ball as their reception. Justice has had one-person exhibits at the Framers' Workshop, Quincy; "Picture It Framed"

A muddy victory

By Peter Kasperowicz
Mariner Correspondent

Darn it. I had all that time, and I still missed it. We had a week of snow, and when the soccer team played I wasn't there. Gee, I'd almost forgotten about soccer. . .

Well, it's time to remember. Cohasset will enter the semifinals of the South Section today, whether they play in Cohasset or not (a football conflict may force the team to travel to Harwich, even though it should technically be a home game). The stronger-than-ever Cohasset team stepped into the semifinals by defeating Sacred Heart of Kingston 5-0 last Tuesday. You didn't go?

"You missed a mud-bath," goalie Joel Reidy said. Obviously, the field was in rough shape due to the melting of the snow. The road to the State Championship was temporarily detoured as the team was faced with practicing indoors. In fact, Saturday's practice consisted of shoveling off the field.

The field condition was rough on both teams; it was drenched in mud, and then sprinkled with sawdust and sand. Not exactly ideal playing conditions. However, Cohasset managed to stick to its usual game plan: winning. It started slow, as players on both teams discovered what it was like to play in split-pea soup. Soon, Todd Fitzpatrick banged a shot in, and soon after that, Ian Smart did the same, giving the half-time score of 2-0.

The second half might as well have just lasted five minutes: that's how long it took for Cohasset to bring the score to 5-0.

"It was amazing. . .it was just a flurry of goals. . ." Steve Myers reported. Fitzpatrick struck again for the third, David Shultz won the fourth, and Kostas Roukounakis sealed the victory with the fifth.

No matter where they are, don't forget to support the team in these important remaining games! There aren't many left before the State Finals!

Special thanks go out to Mr. Clark Chatterton and Mr. Larry Shultz for defrosting the field all weekend. The team never could have played without their help. (I wonder if they do driveways?)

Gallery, Sudbury; and the Scituate Arts Association Gallery. She has had her work in numerous group exhibits including Lowe Art Gallery in Syracuse, N.Y.; Ellis Art Center, Scituate; North River Arts Festival in Marshfield; and the Scituate Town Library.

"A successful piece for me is one that seems timeless; a pleasure to look at and touch today. . .and in fifty years," said Lois Atherton of her clay vessels. Atherton's work is included in private collections all over the world from Tasmania to China to most European countries.

Her awards include first prizes at the 21st Annual Outdoor Art Show, Plymouth Art Guild, Inc.,; 70th Annual MidSummer Show, Duxbury Art Association; and the 1987 South Shore Arts Festival; a third prize at the Duxbury Art Association Winter Juried Exhibit; and an honorable mention at the South Shore Art Center's "Spring Fling," an All New England Juried Exhibit.

Atherton is the current director and potter-in-residence at the 1640 Richard Sparrow House Museum in Plymouth. She was educated at Middlebury College, University of Toulouse in France and the University of California at Santa Cruz.

Clifford Roberts's weavings evolve around textile constructions on and off the loom, emphasizing free standing forms, self-structural elements and illusions of texture and dimensions. His pieces are included in the permanent collections of Addison in Texas, Creative Gourmet in Charlestown and Southwest Securities in Dallas.

His work was included in the Eighth International Tapestry Biennial in Lausanne, in Textiles for the Eighties at the Rhode Island School of Design and in Fibers of the Future in Los Angeles. He won the Gold at the Midwest Designers Craftsman in Laurence, Kansas.

Currently he is the owner of Weave, Inc. in Cohasset and has done freelance textile designs. He was educated at the University of Kansas and the University of Copenhagen.

With a long list of professional affiliations, honors and solo exhibit, Dr. John Heller, professor of art at Bridgewater State College, will exhibit his gold and silver jewelry. His professional honors include an artist's fellowship in crafts from the Commonwealth of Massachusetts; chairperson of the Visual Arts Panel for the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities as well as serving on the Council's Percent for Art Program; panel member for craft organizations and artists' organizations for the Connecticut Commission on the Arts Merit Aid Program; and a member of the Artist Grant Program of the New Hampshire Commission on the Arts.

His solo exhibits include Sheila Nussbaum Gallery in New Jersey, Handcrafters Gallery in Maine, Brockton Art Museum and Stonehill College. He has led extensive international art tours to Italy and Greece. And he has a long list of curated exhibits in which his work has been included.

"The use of my piece dictates how I design it," said Penelope Walker referring to her woven rugs and wall hangings. A rug, she considers, a furnishing as well as an aesthetic piece so it must lend itself to both form and function, so it should harmonize with its surroundings as well as be an independent visual statement. Her wall pieces are designed to immediately impact the eye and "I try to create a pattern which the perimeters of the piece can contain successfully movement and tension," she said.

Her work has been exhibited in shows at the Brockton Art Museum, Museum of American Textile History in N. Andover, the Junior League of Boston Decorator Show House, the North River Arts International Show, the Helen Bumpus Gallery in Duxbury and at the Duxbury Art Association.

She studied at the School for American Craftsmen at the Rochester Institute of Technology and privately with Eeva Henna Aalto in Norway and with Vestfold Fylkes Husflidskole in Norway. She has continued her studies with Phyllis Szerejko at the Brockton Art Museum School, Fletcher Farm Craft School in Vermont, Toijala Kaidetehdas Summer Weaving School in Finland and others.

Bill Bell's ceramic wallpieces are in a series based on the African alphabet. Working in clay, he has taken the Western alphabet and sculptured corresponding African works of art symbolizing African letters. This series of wall hangings stems from his deep interest in African art and for this series he has received funding from the Plymouth Arts Lottery Council to be applied to the cost of supplies.

This series along with other free standing pieces selected for the exhibit is an eclectic collection of his work "in which my primary concern is to bring to visual fruition a concept or to turn the not yet into reality," he said.

His first prizes include ones from the Plymouth Outdoor Art Show the most recent being a first in mixed media for 1987 and also an honorable mention in crafts in the same exhibit. He has also won prizes in the Westerly, Rhode Island Art Show and the Massachusetts Art Teachers' Association. His group exhibits include "Crafts at the Castle," a national exhibit held in Boston and exhibits in Pembroke. His work can be found in private collections.

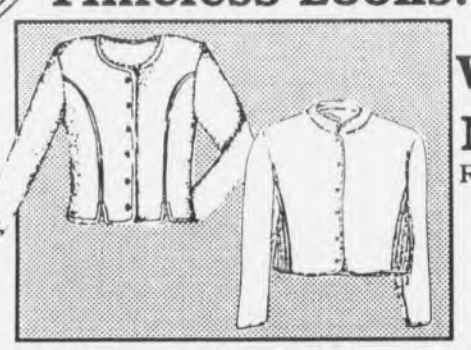
He is currently the art educator for the Hanover Schools, a calligraphy instructor for the South Shore Art Center and the Plymouth Art Guild and coordinator of numerous clay workshops.

The fine woodworking pieces of J.F. Collins will include a small maple and purple heart wood table and a coffee table carved from walnut with the top likened to the waves of the ocean. The unique qualities of these pieces as well as the work he does with office furniture and residential kitchens are achieved through the detailed work with his skills. His initial designs do not always represent the final pieces, he said explaining that the process of decision making changes the definition and the character of the work.

He has designed office furniture for Boston Five, Unesco, General Mills, Talbots and Chemical Bank and his work may be seen in the Gladstone Gallery, O. K. Harris Gallery and Society of Arts and Crafts.

One of his most recent pieces will be housed permanently in the South Shore Art Center as the new gift shop counter and cabinet space.

Items to be handled by the gift shop include artists from the craft exhibit as well as Nanci Jaye, silk scarves; Berj Kailian, handpainted note cards; Michelle Pontious, handsewn berets; Syma, passport masks; Judy Rossman, Betty Madden, decorated egg ornaments; and Lynn Rizzotto, wooden and ceramic ornaments.



The variety of handcrafted items within the Center promises to enhance the giftgiving season. The Center is open to the public Monday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Saturdays, 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. The exhibit and gift shop continue through December 23.

The Center is supported in part by a grant from the Massachusetts Councils on the Arts and Humanities, a state agency.

South Shore Art Center . . .

Fundraising drive

The South Shore Art Center recently formed its Capital Campaign Phase II Committee which will direct the continuation of fund raising efforts for their new building.

Headed by Keith A. Faulkner, the committee's goal will be to raise an additional $300,000, needed to complete all construction on the Art Center's enlarged facility, and to supply furnishings, equipment and landscaping.

Phase I of the Capital Campaign raised $950,000 as of June, a combined effort from individual, corporate and foundation giving. A vital expression of the area's commitment to the programs the center provides, the building will allow the center to more adequately meet the cultural needs of the rapidly growing South Shore community.

Art center directors named

South Shore arts patron and civic leader Shirley F. Neer has been named the president of the South Shore Art Center.

Neer steps into this position after just completing her term as the chairman of the Capital Campaign Phase I committee which raised $950,000 for the construction of the Center's new home at 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset. She also serves on the board of the U.S. Constitution Museum and is chairman of the Boston Morning Musicale.

Serving as officers of the Center along with Neer are Stan Nikkel of Hingham, vice president; Ralph Lawson of Duxbury, treasurer; Anita Franks of Scituate, recording secretary; and Margery Atherton of Norwell, corresponding secretary.

Other board members include Jacqueline Dormitzer, Thomas Hamilton, Richard Henderson, Julie Guild, Keith Faulkner and Jack Manning, all of Cohasset; and Mary Lynd Phelps and Chris Rifkin, both of Hingham.

Dance for grades 7-10

The Cohasset Community Center Thanksgiving dance Nov. 28 is for 7th through 10th grades only.

It is not 7th through 12th and returning grads as printed on the PSO calendar. The time is 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. at the Community Center.

The junior and senior powder puff game is Sunday Dec. 22 at 1 p.m. at CHS. The rain date is Monday, Dec. 23 at 2:30 p.m.

Monte Carlo success

The PSO would like to thank members of the Community for its overwhelming support of the Monte Carlo Night at the Cohasset Gold Club, Nov. 14. With a sell out crowd, the second annual gala evening was a great success. Your interest in this fund raising event was most appreciated.

CHS production

CHS presents Wizard of Oz Dec. 4 at 7:30 p.m., Dec. 5 at 7:30 p.m., and Dec 6 at 2:00 p.m. at CHS auditorium. Tickets are $4.

"Some Class Acts '88" will be presented Nov. 20 and 21 at 7:30 p.m. at the CHS auditorium. Tickets are $3.

Notre Dame champions

For the sixth consecutive year, the undefeated Notre Dame Academy Aces won the Catholic League championship. The title was won at a meet against Cardinal Spellman and St. Gregory's Oct. 26 and it marked the team's 57th consecutive victory.

Leading the Aces were senior Tracy Mullare, Norwell, and junior Meghan Donahue, Duxbury who tied for first place. Third place runner was NDA freshman Kim McGahan, Norwell, while NDA's Michelle Babin, a junior from Cohasset and Catherina Armstrong, a sophomore from Braintree took fourth and fifth places. Other outstanding performers for the Aces were by Pam Wicks, Quincy, Caroline Donnelly, Weymouth, Joanne Doyle, Milton, Beth Tully, Weymouth, Kim Reidy, Norwell and Lisa Walbridge, Scituate.

An additional significant victory for the Aces occurred on October 31 when they won the Catholic Championships at Franklin Park. Top runner in the three-mile race was NDA senior Karen Rogers, Hanover who was followed by schoolmates Mary Beth Powers, Quincy, Christine Higgins, Milton and Celia Morelli.

Upcoming meets for the Aces are the state class meet at Franklin Park Nov. 14 and the state meet at Northfield Mountain Nov. 21 where they will be defending their state championship title for the fifth year.

State conference

Recently school committee members and administrators of the Cohasset school system attended the 23rd Annual Joint Conference of the Massachusetts Association of School Committees and the Massachusetts Association of School Superintendents.

Dr. Joseph Nedrow, school committee chairman, reported that the Nov. 4-7 conference in Hyannis drew over 1000 school committee members, superintendents, and educators.

Panel discussions covered a wide range of topics: AIDS and curriculum implications, preschool and extended day programs, teacher empowerment, creating opportunities for the average student, and how schools deal with issues at the local level.

Members and the superintendent also attended a workshop on the elements of strategic planning. This process will be utilized in the coming year in an attempt to develop long-range goals for the school system.

Commissioner Harold Raynolds, keynote speaker last Wednesday evening, commented on his first year as Commissioner of Education in Massachusetts and the many changes that have been accomplished as a result of the implementation of Chapter 188, the educational reform act of Massachusetts.

This area conference gives an opportunity for both school committee members and school administrators to discuss educational issues and concerns with their colleagues from across the State.

Those attending from Cohasset were: Dr. Joseph Nedrow, Chairman; Barbara Bliss, Vice-chairman; Diana Kornet, Secretary; Dr. Christopher Ford; Nancy Sandell; and Stephen E. Hart, Superintendent of Schools.

Troop 28 news . . .

For the Fall-Camporee weekend, the Boy Scouts and Webelos hiked with backpacks from Merle Brown's cottage two miles to Camp Massasoit. The Scouts had a fun time.

Many thanks to the Scout mothers and friends who helped sell the coffee at the town meeting. They include: Carol Bestick, Pat Anstead, Jane Long, Mary McElroy and Nancy McLaughlin.

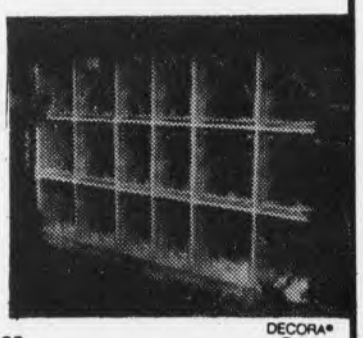
The Troop wishes Joe McElroy, who is a patient at Brockton Hospital, a speedy recovery.

The Scouts have been busy earning their Skill Awards, Merit Badges and Advancement Ranks which were presented at the November 2 "Court of Honor". Bill Anstead was the recepient of the Howard Reed Award. This award was presented to Bill for his outstanding achievements, leadership and efforts in Scouting. This award is in memory of Dr. Howard Reed of Cohasset, who for many years supported the Scouts.

Nov. 21 Den Chief Training at First Lutheran Church, 900 Main St. Brockton. 8:30 - 3 p.m. Cost $2. Bring a Bag Lunch. For further info call Jean Arthur at 586-6094.

Nov. 22 Turkey Shoot sponsored by the Scituate Rod and Gun Club, has given the opportunity for Troop 28 to run several booths at their Turkey Shoot.

Nov. 23 No Scout Meeting



Jan. 23 Klondike Derby Troop 28 will be the host. It will be at Wheelright Park North Main St. Cohasset for the District.

Philmont Scout Ranch in Cimarron, New Mexico offers the Old Colony Council to attend the 50th Anniversary of the Philmont Council Expedition June 29-July 13, 1988. Scouts must be at least 13 years of age by Jan. 1, 1988 and those attending must complete pre-philmont day hikes and participate in the weekend shakedown camp May 20-22, 1988. The cost is $725-$750 depending on the air transportation costs.

A total of fifty scouters and adult leaders can attend from our Council. Call the Council for further details at 828-8360.

The information night is Thurs., Dec. 3 at 7:30 p.m. at the Quincy Saving's Bank Queen Anne's Corner in Norwell.

CHS students quiz rock band 'Blockyard'

By Peter Kasperowicz
Mariner correspondent

"Blockyard," a Boston-based rock group that is currently poised for the "big time", recently visited Cohasset high school for a question-answer period.

Students were allowed to sign out of study halls, and many teachers brought entire classes down. The quartet consists of lead singer Amy Rome, keyboardist Frank Cyr, drummer Bob Miranda, and guitarist Sal DiFusco.

Every subject from the group's financial situation to the composition of their music was discussed in the three-hour period. Here's a small sample:

CHS: "How much money do you guys make?"

Blockyard: "Well, we make a lot more than we see, and that's because so many people work for the band. We have to hire a lawyer firm, an accounting firm, roadies, etc. Any money we do make is poured right back into the band."

CHS: "How much would it cost to put on an average performance?"

Blockyard: "That really depends on how big the group is. Madonna carts her show around the country in umpteen trailer trucks. Her set-up costs around a half-million dollars, but she grosses about $1 milion a night, so she can afford it. Our set-up costs about $500."

CHS: "How did you get your name?"

Blockyard: "Names are really hard to choose in this business, because it has to be original. We've gone by other names before, but "blockyard" comes from a place that we grew up near. It was like an old parking lot with cinder blocks all around it. We used to play there as kids."

CHS: "You're missing a bass-player, and from hearing some of your songs, it's obvious that you program sounds and have a computer play them back. What are some of the advantages and disadvantages of using those computers?"

Blockyard: "Actually, there are far more advantages than disadvantages. The use of computers is the latest trend in the music business. We don't use them for everything because we play most of the music ourselves. The computers can also take care of boosting the volume on, say, a guitar solo. I think the audience would rather see the guitarist jump out onto stage and play instead over seeing him fiddle around with knobs. Overall, computers can make staging the show easier, and at the same time they can add a lot to our music."

Blockyard, the Boston-based rock band, met with CHS students last week.

CHS: "Is there a certain group that you model yourselves after?"

Blockyard: "Right now, I think that we've found our niche in pop/dance songs. Obviously, we look to the pro's, like Madonna and Michael Jackson, but we listen to almost everything else. Once in awhile we'll pick up any record, old or new, and just listen. You can learn alot that way."

CHS: "Are you going to make videos to be on the video channels?"

Blockyard: "I wouldn't be surprised if you saw us in video within 12 to 14 months . . ."

That's because the group is moments away from signing with its first major label. Blockyard is definitely headed for the big time, so be sure to watch for them!

INTRODUCING

Dr. Ronald E. Wuotila
Chiropractor

Please allow me to introduce myself to the town of Hanover and it's surrounding communities. I am originally from the South Shore area and graduated from Palmer College of Chiropractic in Davenport, Iowa. I have received extensive pre and post graduate training at the Gonstead Clinic of chiropractic in Mount Horeb, Wisconsin which specializes in the treatment and care of patients with structural problems of the spine. My practical experience includes six years of clinical work treating patients for various spinal related conditions utilizing X-ray analysis and a specific adjusting technique.

Being a licensed Chiropractor in the state of Massachusetts, I did an extensive demographic study of the South Shore region and decided the town of Hanover was centrally located to service patients from many communities. My new office is conveniently located on Route 53, one and one half miles south of the Hanover Mall exit 13. To aquaint you with our newly opened office and all that Chiropractic care has to offer, my staff and I would like to provide to you or another family member, a spinal examination absolutely FREE. This examination (a $35.00 value) will include an orthopedic test, neurological test, blood pressure check, spinal alignment check, examination for restricted or excess motion in the spine, muscle strengthness test, and a private consultation with the Doctor to discuss the results.

Nature walk at Science Center

Take a brief respite from Thanksgiving preparations and enjoy nature the way the Pilgrims saw it. Come and participate in a natural history walk which explores the natural beauty of the South Shore. Perfect for adults and children, the walk is led by staff naturalists on Wednesday, Nov. 25 from 10 a.m. to noon. The walk is free to members and $4 for non-members. For more information, call 659-2559.

South Shore Natural Science Center is on Jacobs Lane, Norwell, just off Route 123 and less than one mile from the Hanover/Rte. 3 interchange (exit 13). The Center is open Mondays through Saturdays, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Sundays and most holidays, 1 to 4 p.m. Closed Thanksgiving. Trails, exhibits, library, store. Free admission.

All-time favorites

In celebration of Children's Book Week, Nov. 16-22, we are asking everyone (adults and children) to let us know what their all-time favorite children's book is. There will be ballot boxes and ballots to fill out at each of the three school libraries. Next week, once the votes are in and counted, we will announce the winners. It should be fun to see which books are chosen.

League presents film

Because of the unexpected and early arrival of winter, the Cohasset League of Women Voters has rescheduled its showing of the Academy Award winning film, "Women: For America, For the World".

The film will now be shown Tuesday, Nov. 24 at 9:30 a.m. at the First Parish on Main Street. Don't miss this opportunity to see a truly first rate and timely film. It redefines the meaning of security in a nuclear age.

Refreshments will be served. Please call Motoko Deane at 383-1738 if babysitting is needed. For additional details, contact Madeline Olney at 383-1492.

Basketball Boosters club meeting

There will be a meeting of CBBC Thursday, Dec. 3.

The meeting will be at the American Legion Post across from Kimballs beginning at 7:30 p.m. All persons interested in helping with this year's basketball recreation program are invited to attend.

This year's program schedules, basketballs, etc. will be distributed following the meeting. All coaches are urged to attend.

Rep. Murray to be honored

The Massachusetts Foundation for Economic Research will be awarding Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray a certificate of excellence for her outstanding voting record with respect to fiscal responsibility.

According to the Massachusetts General Court Rollcall Analysis (published by MFER each year), Representative Murray received the highest ranking for Repbulican Representatives based on many key economic issues. She has the business community's highest regard for her continuing efforts to strenghten free enterprise and to limit government spending.

Rep. Murray will be honored Nov. 20, at 7 p.m., at the Marriot Copley where she will receive her award at the Second Annual Awards Dinner for the Foundation for Economic Research.

For more information contact MFER at 449-6260.

Beechwood services

The Beechwood Congregational Church invites everyone to worship Sundays at 10:45 a.m. The Pastor is Stephen S.J. Hall. Adult child care is provided downstairs after the children's sermon. Coffee hour follows the service. Everyone is welcome.

All neighborhood children in grades K-8 are welcome to attend Sunday School from 9:30-10:30 a.m. As usual, friends are always welcome.

Sunday, Nov. 15, the church welcomed four new members. Pastor and Marjorie Hall, Linda Holland, and Edward Hettstrom. The church welcomes you, we look forward to many good times with our new members.

The church invites all neighbors and friends to attend this year's first Beechwood social. Bring your family and friends to the church Thursday, Nov. 19 at 6:30 p.m. Bring a covered dish for the Pot Luck supper. There will be a funfilled evening following the supper. Everyone welcome!

Children will be VIPs at Village Fair Dec. 5

Once again, children will be Very Important People at Cohasset's Village Fair Saturday, Dec. 5, where they will find a wide range of activities and merchandise geared to their interests.

From "grabs to Santa Claus, face-painting, clowns, baloons and a special "Secret Room" for their own Christmas shopping, youngsters will find a multitude of attractions while their parents shop seriously for holiday gifts.

High on their list, as it has been for several years, will be the "Secret Room" where shopping will be limited to those 12 and under. Because of its popularity it has been moved to larger quarters in St. Stephen's Church on the rock, with signs pointing the way to the rear of the church.

From 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. a corps of 'teen-age salespeople under adult direction will help tots pick out suitable, inexpensive gifts for mothers, fathers, brothers and sisters. All gifts will be wrapped and tagged. June Simeone heads the secret room committee.

Meanwhile, on the Common (weather permitting), a host of other attractions for children will be going on. Santa Claus has already sent word to his long-time Fair host, Jeff Steele, that he will be arriving about 10:45 to take up residence in a sleigh parked in an evergreen bower. There he will welcome youngsters to his sleigh and pose for Polaroid pictures.

While they are waiting in line to give Santa their wish lists, children will be entertained by clowns, have their faces painted, and participate in a number of children's activities as balloons are inflated and sold. The Common, too, is the planned site for the popular "Grabs" feature being arranged by Claudia Story and Deanna Mulligan.

Occupying a central position in the Town Hall will be a Children's Corner which always attracts both children and parents to the many attractive hand-made clothes and novelty gifts which a committee headed by Anna Abbruzzese has been fashioning over a period of weeks.

To satisfy the ravenous appetites of young people there will be the usual fast food features of the Fair. In the Town Hall, a Snack Bar will be doing a land-office business serving hot dogs and soft drinks. This year Peter Guild heads the large group of young fathers who traditionally staff this activity. Also in the Town Hall, Marilyn Hobson will again preside over the popcorn machine as it turns out a white flood of product.

Children will not be able to resist the temptations of the Bargain Bazaar in the Unitarian Parish House, where the gleanings of many Cohasset attics, closets and basements will be offered for sale by a group headed by Gail Bell.

Once again local merchants have joined individual givers in supporting the fund-raising effort of the five churches by making significant contributions of merchandise and services.

Walpole's home furnishings shop in Cushing Plaza has donated 11 boxes of curtains valued at over $3,000 which will be placed on sale at the Fair. Sestito's Florists is again donating the Christmas Tree that will stand at the Town Hall and bear cards listing the names of all Fair workers. Country Way nursery will again allow the use of a number of trees out of which Santa's hideaway on the Common will be fashioned.

Dependent on the generosity of merchants for its appeal is the raffle, headed this year by Chris Kierce. Once again an anonymous donor is making available a color TV as the top prize, but many other prizes are being offered in the form of merchandise, gift certificates or service by Hugo's Restaurant, Red Lion Inn, Kit & Kaboodle, The Linen Chest, Liquors Unlimited, Leo Fiori's Exxon, Colonial Pharmacy, Bildner's, Sea & Cheese, Cohasset Liquors, Party, Etc., Papa Gino's, Good Sport, Radio Shack, August West Chimneysweeps, and others.

This year's Central Committee for the Fair is headed by Lou Simeone, Kathy Pratt and Kathy Brennock of St. Anthony's Church, which has the leadership role. Representatives from the other churches are Eugenia Syrmopoulos and Helena Panesis of Panagia Greek Orthodox; Sheila Wallingford and Donna Blain of St. Stephen's Episcopal; Linda Campbell and Debbie Anderson of Second Congregational and Gail and Bill Bell of First Parish Unitarian. Lisa Smith is Secretary and Jan Hamilton Treasurer.

CHRISTMAS

WONDERLAND by LIGHT

There's a magical kingdom waiting for you and your child.
A kingdom where the Spirit of Christmas burns brightly for young and old alike. Where 200,000 Christmas lights illuminate the night-time sky, painting rainbows across the winter landscape. And heated turn-of-the-century steam trains travel through woods and fields alive with wondrous sights and gaily lit seasonal displays.

It's the Edaville Railroad Christmas Light Festival. A magical mixture of light and color, sights and sounds. Where Christmas carols fill the air. And laughing children run from one marvelous sight to the next. From Santa's Village to the baby deer in the petting zoo. From the "Night Before Christmas" animated display to the white-bearded man in the red suit who always has a good word and a small gift to share with a child.

Discover this wonderful world for your child—and yourself. Experience the dozens of attractions, the once-in-a-lifetime train ride, and the most magnificent display of Christmas lights you'll probably ever see. This year, rediscover the Spirit of Christmas. You'll find it wonderfully lit up at the Edaville Railroad Christmas Light Festival.

Visit the Edaville Railroad Christmas Light Festival.

Stewardship Sunday

Stewardship Sunday is upon us! Nov. 22,Thanksgiving Sunday and likewise our opportunity to give a concrete THANK YOU TO GOD by returning our pledge cards (to be mailed 11/16) during the morning's collection. Our vision and our circles are expanding, we need everyone's support. To be sure, financial support is merely a part of the need: add to that time, talent and prayers. Give it all we can and those expanding circles will swell making some truly loving waves felt throughout our community and beyond!

FOOD NEEDED

There will be a bin inside the front door throughout the month of November for your donation of food for the Quincy Crisis Center.

VILLAGE FAIR

Candy, Candy, Candy! Get rid of all that Halloween Candy before you eat it all!. Donate it to the Village Fair. Call Debbie Anderson 383-6345 or bring it to the church next Sunday.

Village Fair Dinner tickets are going quickly. There are only seven tickets left. Dinner will be catered by Carmine and tickets are $12.50 a piece. A fun way to relax after the fair. Call Linda Campbell to reserve your tickets, 383-0021.

Don't forget to sign up on the volunteer poster in Bates Hall so we can submit our list of names of people working on the fair. Volunteers still needed to work on Friday, Dec. 4, and Saturday, Dec. 5, at the Bake Table. Call Debbie Anderson 383-6345.

SUMMER TRIP TO APPALACHIA

Our Summer '88 Work Camp application will be made at the regular Thursday night meeting of the Youth Group on Nov. 19, 6 - 7:30 p.m. All students, 9th - 12th grade (community-wide) even remotely considering going with us early next summer, should attend this meeting.

First Parish sevices

Rev. Edward T. Atkinson, Minister, Parish House (617) 383-1100, 23 North Main Street.

COMMUNITY OUTREACH NEWS:

It was both an exciting and rewarding day for fourteen committee members and friends who volunteered their time and labor on Saturday at the Arbutus St. Project off Blue Hill Avenue in Dorchester. The "Jubilee Houseraising Site" is a four-building project housing eleven units sponsored by Christians for Urban Justice, the Boston Habitat affiliate. We were part of close to seventy volunteers who worked at various times throughout the day. Those from First Parish were primarily involved in clearing the site of debris and installing finished flooring in four of the units. We shared in the joy of hard work, laboring side by side with future residents and other volunteers from local colleges and churches. And we were rewarded with a delicious hot lunch and a warm feeling of accomplishment at day's end.

We hope to schedule a second work day at the Dorchester project in mid-December. If our plans fall into place, we hope to include members of the Youth Group and the Coming of Age Class. We realize that the weeks just prior to Christmas are hectic enough as it is, but knowing that until the project is completed, a single mother and her three children continue to live in a Mattapan shelter and that a father of four from Alabama has no place to call home, stirs us to make the time and give our labor.

VILLAGE FAIR NEWS:

AN APPEAL TO ALL. The Book Committee needs books — books and more books to sell at the annual Christmas Fair to be held December 5th, sponsored by the Catholic, Congregational, Episcopal, Greek Orthodox and Unitarian Churches of Cohasset. Elders receive $2,763 grant

The Executive Office of Elder Affairs has awarded Cohasset $2,763 under the Formula Grant Program. Hingham will receive $6,663 for its elders.

All debts and obligations approved by the towns "Council on Aging" must be incurred within one year of the date of the awards."

Funding is provided to local Councils on aging, which provide services to more than 360,000 elders across the Commonwealth. Elder Affairs is working with the Council on Aging to maximize the effect of every dollar so that the needs of all elders are met.

Funds are granted for a variety of purposes and complement more than $12 million in local appropriations for Council activities.

Programs supported by the funds include: staffing, facility maintenance, and a range of transportation, outreach, health/fitness, nutrition and peer support program activities. Other award categories include removal of architectural barriers, other physical improvements and the purchase of equipment.

Council on Aging conference

The Massachusetts Association of Council on Aging held its 1987 annual conference at the Best Western Royal Plaza, Marlborough, MA on Wednesday, Oct. 21 and Thursday, Oct. 22. This year's theme of the conference was: "Working Today for Your Tomorrow".

The conference addressed issues of concern for a large aging population growing in numbers, covering such topics as Changes in the Health Care System, Catastrophic Health Insurance, Discharge Planning from hospitals, Clients Rights & Entitlements, Caregivers In An Aging America, Housing & Homeless, Housing Alternatives, Protection Of Assets. Also planned was a legislative Roundtable discussion on the Legislative process in Mass., many of the current bills that will directly affect the elderly constituents of the Councils on Aging.

Thursday, Kathy Bryanton, Director, Cohasset Council on Aging, and Louise Wadsworth, Director, Belchertown Council on Aging presented "Developing Skills For Small Senior Centers". Chet Jacubiak, Director, Program Management Executive Office of Elder Affairs, Boston, Ma. acted as Moderator for the panel. The content of the program focused on how small Senior Centers in Massachusetts have a unique set of problems. The session panelists focus on the identification of these problems, and give the direction to help deal with each one of them. Special emphasis was on community relationships vital to success, and programming that is also unique to small centers.

Recently appointed Paul Lanzikos, Secretary of Elder Affairs, was the Thursday's Luncheon speaker. He made a controversial presentation promoting the Dukakis health program. Secretary Lanzikos feels that although the present health package is not perfect, it is a solid starting point, an alternative for comprehensive health plan for the future.

The conference is open to all interested persons, this year over 200 people attended the conference with 90% from local Council On Aging Board members, staff, and volunteers. The conference is organized to enhance and expand ones knowledge of the concerns and opportunities that lie ahead. The many needs for improving and offering a varied service plan to elders. Expanded communication and increased professionalism remains the key to the development of innovative policies and programs to address the complex needs of our growing older population. This conference did indeed demonstrate MCOA's commitment to these worthy goals.

The importance of councils on aging in the local towns as the elder advocates on the community level was stressed as the need for the future.

If you have any questions, please call the Council on Aging at 383-9112 to make your appointment.

SHINE

Cohasset Senior Center's "SHINE" sheds light on Health Care for Elders

Health care benefits for older persons can be very confusing, now there is a solution: A new state program called SHINE (Serving Health Information Needs of Elders). Specially trained SHINE counselors can assist elders in assessing health care needs and eligibility accessing insurance coverage information, and processing individual counselling is offered to insure privacy.

A SHINE counselor will be available at the Cohasset Senior Center every Wednesday morning from 9:00 a.m. to 1:00 p.m. Transportation to and from the office is available (in the Cohasset area). To make an appointment or more information, call Kathy Bryanton at 383-9112.

Senior news . . .

WEATHER CANCELLATIONS

It is that time of year again when the weather sometimes plays dirty tricks on us. Please keep in mind the Senior Center program closing policy:

If the Cohasset schools are cancelled, the van will definitely not run for the day and activities will be cancelled. In the event of an early clearing, afternoon events at the Center might be held. Unless Town Hall closes, the office at the Center will remain open — they might open later than usual.

All announcements concerning weather schedules will be called on the Quincy radio station — WJDA (1300 AM).

"WALK - DON'T RUN!"

According to Washington, D.C.'s "Walking Center," walking is the safest, most natural form of exercise to maintain health and fitness. It is growing in popularity with all age groups but particularly with the sixty plus segment of the population. People who engage in more vigorous exercise, like jogging, "actually may have little significant health advantage over walkers, and they experience more injuries. Today's fitness motto could well be: 'Walk. Don't Run.'

A shortage of safe paths has led to some creative answers, such as Mall-walkers, downtown-walkers. Cohasset Strutters meet every Tuesday - Friday at the Senior Center, 3 No. Main St. Cohasset has some beautiful beaches, downtown travel, or some paths through the woods that make excellent walking places until the really cold weather comes.

If you would like to lead or join our walking club, please call the Senior Center office. Jane Tilden our Tuesday leader, Ann Leonard leads the group on Wednesday, Lillian Lincoln & Shirley Laidlaw head the group on Thursdays. On Friday the Group goes out-of- town, and all are welcome to come with our senior Strutters. COME ONE! COME ALL!

SOCIAL SECURITY NEWS

It has been estimated that the average increase in your Social Security check will increase about $20.00 starting in January. This is the good news, and the bad news is Medicare monthly payments will also go up. For more information call the S.S. office in Quincy.

SENIOR JOB OPPORTUNITY

1. For General clerical assistance and telephone — handling reservations for various COA programs.

2. Exciting and rewarding position available with community SHINE program. Must be over 55 with limited income. Salary: $4.10 hourly with vacation and quarterly reimbursement for health insurance. Apply in writing to Cohasset Council on Aging, 3 No. Main St.

CHRISTMAS SHOPPING

Tuesday, Dec. 8, the Council on Aging is sponsoring a day trip to the Hanover Mall for the "Senior Shopping Day Treat." The bus will be leaving from the Town Hall at 9:00 a.m. (this is a change.) Transportation is free and lunch is at discount price/on your own. Reservations are now being taken on a first come first served basis. The trip will be one bus, so get your reservations in early. Free items, discounts for seniors & special displays. Call 383-9112.

TRIPS — TRIPS

Dec. 5, fun filled day in Newport Rhode Island, abounding with history, elegance and most of all — beauty. Time for shopping, luncheon at the beautiful Sheraton Islander Inn at Goat Island. After lunch rebound the coach for a view of the magnificently decorated Newport Mansions. All for $39.95. - call Connie at 545-3349.

Cohasset Strutters (1 to r) Tilly Nardo, Margaret Taylor, Olga Sawchuk, and Jane Tilden get ready for the walk along Nantasket Beach.

Margaret Taylor, an avid Cohasset Strutters walker has a pacemaker. Her doctors advised her to join the walking club. (Dave Sullivan)

Public notices

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS THE TRIAL COURT THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT NORFOLK DIVISION DOCKET NO. 87P2396E1

Estate of CARL E. NELSON late of COHASSET In the County of NORFOLK

NOTICE

A petition has been presented in the above-captioned matter praying that the last will of said decedent be proved and allowed and that STATE STREET BANK and TRUST COMPANY of BOSTON in the County of SUFFOLK be appointed executor named in the will without surety on the bond.

If you desire to object to the allowance of said petition, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before 10:00 in the forenoon on December 2, 1987.

In addition you should file a written statement of objections to the petition, giving the specific grounds therefore, within thirty (30) days after the return day (or such other time as the Court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) in accordance with Probate Rule 16.

Witness, Robert M. Ford, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Dedham, the sixth day of November in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and eighty seven.

EQUAL HOUSING OPPORTUNITY

VA lowers maximum mortgage rate to 10.5%

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Veterans Administration said yesterday it was lowering its maximum interest rate for federally backed home mortgages to 10.5 percent, the first rate reduction in 10 months.

The change, which was to take effect today, represents a one-half percentage point decrease from the old rate of 11 percent, which has been in effect since Oct. 5.

The VA said it was making the reduction, the first rate cut since Jan. 19, to bring its rate in line with the mortgage market.

Conventional, fixed-rate mortgages — those not backed by federal guarantees — fell to 10.79 percent last week, the third consecutive weekly decline in the survey done by the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. Fixed-rate mortgages had peaked at 11.58 percent on Oct. 16, three days before the record drop in stock prices.

In announcing the lower rate, VA Administrator Thomas K. Turnage said, "The decrease reflects the current market condition in that investors are will to accept a lower yield on long-term investments."

Housing officials nix EOCD policy

By Bob Tis
Mariner staff

Just when everyone thought that a fair housing agreement might be signed, sealed and delivered to the state house, it is back to square one.

The agreement to provide more available low-income housing in Cohasset passed successfully through the hands of the selectmen and the planning board but did not find approval from the Cohasset Housing Authority.

The pact which has been in the developmental stage since 1983 has been, according to planning board chairman Robert Sturdy, "negotiated and renegotiated many times."

"We took it to our attorney," said John Muncey chairman of the housing authority. "He said it is not legally correct."

Muncey said they are going to have the contract rewritten so that it is legally correct and then resubmit it.

The most recent renegotiations held that the title to properties on Government Island and the Bates building would stay with the town and be operated through the housing authority.

"I want those properties out of the contract all together," said Muncey. "We purchased that property for fair market value. Nobody has the right to give that away. Our forefathers in their infinite wisdom bought that property for full market value. When you do that as oppossed to paying just one dollar for the property there are no conditions tied along with the property. I don't think that it should be in the contract."

Muncey also said that the contract, "puts us into a position where we can't operate."

According to Muncey, the housing authority also should have more leeway in applying for loans and facilitating leases and rent.

Muncey said that he thinks that the planning board is afraid that all of the low income housing will go to people from out of town.

"Look at the housing for elderly," said Muncey who is

An old rivalry will heat up in Hull

Sure, the Cohasset High School soccer team is doing OK. They will probably end up winning the state championship in fact.

The word in the athletic office last Thursday morning, from people who really know. was that this might be the best group of athletes CHS has produced in a long time.

But let's talk about something really big. Thanksgiving football.

Turkey day will once again find the Skippers facing their arch rival Hull in a fierce battle of brains, brawn and brutality, At 10 a.m., a time when most turkeys aren't even dressed and ready for the oven, on probably the coldest field in America at Point Allerton in Hull, these two teams will play the game they have been thinking about for their whole life.

People think there is tension involved in super bowls and world series games. The winner of this turkey day classic will be tied for the South Shore league championship. That is big.

"What else really needs to be said," declared assistant coach Bob Silvia.

What is paramount in a lot of minds is that it is a chance to embarass a long time rival on their home turf. What is foremost on a lot of other minds is that Thanksgiving will be a perfect time to catch up with some old friends that helped pass four years away at 149 Pond Street.

There is an amazing history to Thanksgiving football in Cohasset. Our first real rivalry started in the 1950's when we faced Holbrook on Thanksgiving.

In 1957, Hull formed its own high school after breaking away from Hingham. Holbrook in the meantime was dropping in size and talent so Cohasset immediately initiated a series with our infamous neighbor to the north.

The Cohasset-Hull Thanksgiving football game was by far the biggest sporting event of the year during this time.

Records show that upwards of four thousand people attending these games. In these years, close to eighty percent of the male population went out for the football team. The records show that the Skippers came out on the winning end in a majority of occasions.

These were rich years in Cohasset football history as many graduates, including professional football standout

Today we win it all

A very powerful Skipper team refused to give in to St. Mary's of Lynn in this weeks division 3 state semifinal. With the score locked at 3 apiece and 6 minutes left to play, Jim Reidy headed in a corner kick from Todd Fitzpatrick to put the Skippers ahead for good.

Cohasset took an early lead with both Reidy and Fitzpatrick depositing the ball in the net in the first half. St. Mary's scored at the twenty minute mark but soon after that Cohasset's Ian Smart put the Skippers up by two again.

Before the second half ended St. Mary's was able to tie the game. Cohasset was able dominate play

Director honored by center

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

As director of the South Shore Art Center and a contributing artist, Margaret Dillon has received many honors. None was more special than the one she was presented with Sunday.

After ten years as art center director, 11 years as gallery coordinator, and service as both a board member and vice president, Dillon announced her retirement that evening.

In appreciation of her efforts, the art center has named the members' gallery in her honor. The Dillon Room will stand as a tribute to the hours she toiled in search of a new facility and ways to enlarge the center's membership and class offerings.

"It was a marvelous evening," she said, noting that her retirement coincided with a new exhibit of local artisans at the center. "It was a marvelous time that I will remember."

Dillon, who has lived in Cohasset for 21 years, was named director in 1975. It was then, along with President Claffy Williams, that she began planning for a new facility which would house more exhibits, more classrooms and more office space.

In the spring of 1987, that goal was realized when the art center moved from the familiar red building on Ripley Road, to a former auto body shop down the same street. "Claffy and I worked all those years. We first started with a $25,000 fundraising campaign to repair the barn at the old building. We went on to bigger and better things after that."

Dillon said the new art center, with expansive, high-ceiling exhibit rooms, and wide, airy classrooms, is an appropriate place to showcase exciting new work by local artists.

Margaret Dillon

Regarding the current exhibit, Dillon commented that it is a "beautiful show - superb. It's the kind of exhibit I've been working toward. We just never had the room for it in the other building."

Cohasset's week . . .

Shelter stalled

Members of the Animal Shelter Committee informed selectmen they have been stalled in plans to obtain land for the regional shelter.

Cindy Rubin, secretary to the shelter committee, which includes the towns of Hingham, Cohasset, Scituate, Scituate, Norwell and Hanover, said plans to use a piece of land in Bare Cove Park in Hingham have been initially denied. That parcel now belongs to the federal government.

According to Rubin, members of the regional committe traveled to Philadelphia to talk to federal officials about use of the land. "We are still very optimistic about obtaining this piece of land for our purposes," Rubin stated. The committee is now writing a formal proposal to the federal government for the land.

In the meantime, committee members are searching for other available parcels of property in which the shelter can be located.

Currently, there is no municipal shelter for animals in these towns, and there are only one or two private kennels which will accept dogs found by the animal control officers.

Cable changes are few

In a letter to selectmen, the chairman of Continental Cablevision, Inc. assured selectmen there will be few, if any changes after the merger with American Cablesystems Corp.

Amos Hostetter Jr., chairman of Continental, explained that although they are the third largest cable television operator in the country, they take pride in keeping license commitments and providing high quality service to their subscribers. Local management and employees will remain in place, and all existing contract obligations necessary for the continued operation of the system will be met, he assured selectmen in the letter.

The chairman noted the company's philosophy is to encourage local managers to be innovative, and they are given broad decision-making authority. "It has been our experience that the people closest to the communities and most familiar with the particular needs of a town and our local subscribers are in the best position to make decisions. This also ensures more timely responses to the issues and opportunities that arise," he added.

Revote is legal

In a written opinion submitted to selectmen Nov. 16, town counsel ruled that two separate votes at the Oct. 26 and 27 special town meeting which were later questioned, are legal and binding votes.

Atty. Richard Henderson noted in his letter that objections were raised by citizens after town meeting regarding the fire/police station and water treatment facility appropriation votes.

Regarding the fire/police station vote, Atty. Henderson said on the first hand count, the motion lost by less than one vote and the moderator called for a revote at which time the motion clearly passed by the two-thirds necessaary. "It is within the moderator's discretion to call for a second vote whenever there is confusion or doubt. Bearing in mind the hand count system that was used on the first vote, it was clearly within the moderator's discretion, when the tally showed less than a one-vote margin, to request a second vote," he stated.

Atty. Henderson noted that it is within the moderator's power and discretion to order a second vote even if seven residents did not object to the initial vote.

Regarding the water treatment facility roof repairs, Atty. Henderson noted there was concern expressed that one individual objected on a voice vote, and no hand count was ordered by the moderator. "Customarily when a two-thirds majority is required and any opposition is expressed on the voice vote, it has been the practice to request a hand count," he wrote. "It is, however, not necessary to do so. Under the circumstances, the record shows that only one person objected and that from the affirmative vote it was clear that more than two people were in favor and accordingly the article passed. As long as the clerk's minutes reflect that a quorum was present, that only one person objected and that more than two voted in favor, then it cannot be legally questioned," he stated in the letter.

The town's bond counsel reviewed the opinions, and has concurred, Atty. Henderson added.

Distinguished voter

Massachusetts Secretary of State Michael Connolly has inducted Robert A. Leonard of Bancroft Road into the Massachusetts Voter of Hall of Fame.

Leonard was given the award for a establishing a consecutive voting record of more than 50 years. "The Hall of Fame was established to honor good citizens like yourself who have displayed their loyalty to the democratic electoral process for more than half a century. You should be extremely proud of this significant accomplishment," Connolly stated in his declaration to Leonard.

"Your patriotism has been a source of strength and vitality for our democracy for many years, and it has not gone unnoticed," the secretary of state added.

Town Clerk Frances Marks also officially congratulated Leonard for his distinguished voting record.

Building group named

Selectmen appointed four members to the police/fire station building committee, the group that will oversee construction plans for the police/fire station renovations.

They are seeking a fifth member to this committee. Anyone interested in serving on this committee shouuld contact the selectmen's office at town hall.

The following persons have been appointed to the committee: Robert A. Stansell, Diane Sullivan, Veneta Roebuck, and Robert Davenport.

Murray to assist in revote request

By Bob Tis
Mariner staff

Selectmen received a copy of state Representative Mary Jeanette Murray's letter to the Attorney General this week, requesting an opinion about the special town meeting vote on the police and fire renovation project.

Selectmen have heard no word, as yet, on a ruling from the Attorney General.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson, who said the vote was legal, had no comment on Murray's letter.

The original vote at the Oct. 26 meeting resulted in a tie of sorts, 160-81, only percentage points short of the two- thirds majority needed for approval.

Many residents including selectmen Burt Pratt and Martha Gjesteby believe the vote lost at that point and that the proper procedure was not followed by the Moderator who immediately called for a revote.

Despite protests, Town Moderator William Weeks stands by his decision to issue a revote at the meeting. After the tie vote, Weeks held an impromptu conference with selectmen and town counsel. Weeks then called for a second vote which gained the two-thirds majority needed to pass the article.

Roy Fitzsimmons and Charles DeSantis both told the board last week that they felt the vote should have lost.

According to town counsel, Representative Murray has become involved because of the two selectmen that do not think the vote passed. Chairman Rocco Laugelle said that he was satisfied with the vote especially since the approval from bond counsel. However, with two selectmen not convinced of the legitimacy of the vote, Laugelle was not opposed to getting the Attorney General's opinion.

DeSantis received a letter back from the office of the Attorney General that, "quoted a lot of statutes and basically said that they don't engage in responding to articles of this sort."

DeSantis disagreed with their logic citing the last year's town meeting when the Attorney General did involve himself in a matter of land acquisition. According to DeSantis, because maps were not available and other errors in procedure, the office intervened.

"It was on a procedural basis that they threw out the vote of town meeting on the eminent domain of the reservoir land."

DeSantis believes that this vote is a very similar situation.

"We are talking about procedure. This is a dangerous precedent. We are governed by certain laws. The procedures have to be included. If we have made a flaw, it is vital that we remove the procedural flaw. This is a

Housing group rejects agreement

in charge of the project with over 90 percent Cohasset residents.

"We are funded by the state, we have to play by their rules," said Muncey.

An agreement was signed by selectmen and by the housing authority in July. Members of the planning board disagreed with tenets of the agreement and would not sign the agreement. Because of this the state levied a ban on discretionary funding for projects in Cohasset, such as an impending sewer project.

In October representatives from all three boards met with state officials in Boston to hammer out an agreement. The planning board was satisfied with a new agreement they authored which was very similar to the original agreement. The most noticeable changes in the new agreement is the holding of the leases to certain proposed low-income sites by Cohasset boards.

"I have pointed out to them," said Robert Sturdy chairman of the planning board, "that they had an oppurtunity to go to the state house and voice their opinion."

Only one member of the housing authority, state appointed Leo Happeny, was in attendance from the Cohasset Housing Authority. He is no longer on the board. The state has appointed Fred Koed as his replacement.

"They say they don't want any interference from any town agency," said Sturdy. "I really don't know where they are at this point. I wish they were at that meeting. I guess they chose not to be," said Sturdy.

"I get bent out of shape when they say they are not a town commission," said Sturdy suggesting that maybe a separate town funded housing authority be formed."

"I will hopefully be able to enlighten the board," Sturdy told fellow planning board members at last Wednesday's meeting (Nov. 18). "I am trying to keep this whole thing from breaking apart. It is very important that we get some low-income housing for this town."

"They want to hire developers," said Sturdy of his conversations with the housing authority. "It is a kind of a power play. That is the kind of thing that this board is concerned about."

Sturdy said that he would be contacting State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray in the morning to possibly set up another joint meeeting.

"Frankly there is a lot of agreement," said Sturdy. "We can't let our paranoia run away with ourselves and end up with nothing."

Sturdy estimated that a new round of meetings will have to take place for the three boards to get together on this agreement. This would put off the final signing of the agreement until late December or early January at the earliest.

John Muncey indicated that a rewritten draft of the agreement will be completed by their attorney, Charles Humphreys, this week.

Selectmen's briefs . . .

Smith Place paved

After some initial skepticism selectmen decided to lend support to a citizens petition to pave a thruway off of Smith Place in Cohasset Village.

At Monday's meeting selectman Rocco Laugelle originally told petitioners Phil Smith and Norma Kravette that funds were not available for a project like this and that they probably could not be appropriated because it was not an emergency situation.

"In a sense it is an emergency," said Phil Smith, a local merchant. "Traffic cannot move around the village. How do we go about addressing the problem before it gets any bigger?"

Smith said that cars are often parked all day on the thruway and that cars are often disabled trying to pass through the dirt road.

"The used area is a mud hole," said Norma Kravette, manager of Carousel antiques. "Cars have had to get towed out of there. I would think that you could grade it and level it. It is a disaster over there. It is ridiculous."

"We realize that you just purchased the nearby property and this will benefit you greatly," Laugelle told Smith.

"Not necessarily," replied Smith who referred to highway plans that showed that the road should be a thruway.

"This has been a problem long before Phil came," said Kravette. "We came to him. Parking has been a problem. People park everywhere. We have tried to handle it in a friendly way but it has become impossible."

Laugelle explained to have the road graded they would have to go through the conservation commission. The board had given an approval to Target Industries earlier in the year for some paving and Laugelle explained that selectmen learned that it was not their position to determine such affairs.

"The survey we have made is that it is a town road," said Smith. "It is not a point of what I have to gain. There is a parking problem and congestion in the area. We are here asking for help for what we consider an emergency situation."

A motion to begin action and ask Harold Litchfield of the highway department to start working on it, by selectman Jim Gallagher, carried unanimously.

Constitution resignation

Selectmen accepted with regret the resignation of David Chittim, on Monday, from the U.S. Constitution Bicentennial Committee. Selectman Burt Pratt expressed the appreciation of the board for a, "job well done."

Liquor license granted

Selectmen granted the Cohasset Community Center a request for a one-day liquor license for Jan. 30, 1988, from 8.p.m. until midnight. Dennis Dooley told selectmen that the annual fundraiser is usually held at Hugos but now that renovations are coming to a finish they want to hold the festivities in their own building.

Selectmen granted the request with the proviso that they contact the chief of police about having a policeman on hand for the "Frosty Frolic."

Accounting clerk

Selectmen voted to approve the appointment of Linda Litchfield to the position of accounting clerk. Litchfield was the favored candidate among the six applicants for the job. Litchfield will assist the new town accountant and perform numerous other duties working between 21 and 35 hours per week.

Selectmen also appointed water commissioner Ron Goodwin and Susan Hodgeson to the watershed protection area study committee.

Search for strays

The dog officer is presently on a campaign to locate all of the unlicensed dogs in Cohasset. Executive secretary Don Andrew estimated that about 75 dogs are alive and unregistered within the city limits. The dog officer will be sending out second and final notice cards this week to be followed up by citations.

Audit fee reviewed

Selectmen Monday night approved $8574 for unemployment pay owed to former town employees. A transfer request for $150 was approved for the conservation commission for postage money. $500 was transferred to purchase additional computer paper for the town hall and $127 was approved for the purchasing of topographical maps. Selectmen voted to investigate further the approval of funds for an auditing of the town's books.

"It seems to me we have spent an awful lot of money on accounting stuff," said Martha Gjesteby.

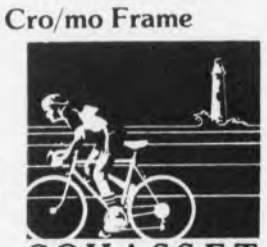
The auditing company came in with a fee significantly higher than their original estimate.

Anti-nuke petition

Petition circulators are confident that they will have more than enough certified voters signatures to get their anti-nuclear referendum question on the statewide 1988 ballot.

Several citizen groups have been circulating the referendum petitions since September trying to make the goal of 50,525 certified signatures by the deadlines of Nov. 18 for local town clerks and Nov. 23 for Boston.

"We're hesitant to say anything about the numbers until all the signatures are valid. But I feel there's a safe margin," said Patricia Granahan, director of the Campaign to Stop Nuclear Waste.



Granahan said several groups have been active in the statewide gathering of signatures including: the Responsible Energy Alternatives Coalition of Hingham (REACH); Pilgrim Alliance; Cape Cod Safe Energy Alliance; Bristol County Safe Energy Alliance; Greenpeace; and MassPIRG.

Recently, a gentleman came into our shop and asked for twelve lords a-leaping, eleven ladies dancing, ten pipers piping, nine drummers drumming, eight maids a-milking, seven swans a-swimming, six geese a-laying, five golden rings, four calling birds, three French hens, two turtle doves, and a partridge in a pear tree. Clearly a tough customer.

We were fresh out of maids a-milking. So instead he selected twelve lavender frogs a-leaping, eleven vases flowering, ten goblets sparkling, nine fish platters swimming, eight grapevine angels twining, seven candles glowing, six kitten carvings, five napkin rings, four ringing bells, three French soaps, two perfume doves and a porcelain rabbit tureen.

Which we happily gift-wrapped and shipped.

Construction to begin, without sprinkler system plan

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

A building permit has been issued and construction is set to begin on the $1.1 million addition to town hall.

Despite rejection of the plans by the fire chief, the construction permit was issued Friday, Nov. 20 by Building Inspector Donald Robbins. Construction of the building's foundation could begin as early as this week.

Two weeks ago, Fire Chief Daniel Brock informed selectmen and the town hall study committee that he rejected the architectural plans for the addition. The rejection was based on an inadequate sprinkler system in the first and second levels of the addition.

This notification by Chief Brock came one day before selectmen participated in a groundbreaking ceremony for the addition. The chief defended his timing by saying the plans submitted to him ten days earlier were not the same he gave preliminary approval to more than a year ago.

Chief Brock said he is still waiting to meet with architect Brett Donham and members of the building committee to discuss his concerns. He explained that the building inspector is allowed to issue a building permit without the fire chief's approval, although it could leave the town official "wide open" regarding future legal action by the chief.

"I am not looking to bring any lawsuits to this town," the chief explained, noting that such an extreme reaction would be a last resort. "And I don't expect I'll have to."

Under Chapter 148 of the state's general laws, all buildings exceeding 7,500 square feet must contain a sprinkler system. The fire chief maintained that the new addition, including the basement, and a first and second level, contain more than 7,500 square feet. Although the basement will include a sprinkler system, the remaining levels will not.

Building Inspector Robbins explained that a building permit may be issued before plans for a sprinkler system are presented. But before an occupancy permit is issued and employees are allowed to work inside the structure, he must approve sprinkler system plans that meet the state law recently adopted by the town.

"The architect did not know the town had accepted that law," Robbins said, "and that's why a full system was not included in the total plan for the addition."

Chief Brock said the addition of the full sprinkler system will cost "in the ballpark of $20 to $25,000." A full system was originally estimated at about $47,000, but because the basement will contain the main valves, the cost of a system in the upper two levels will not be as expensive as originally estimated.

Executive Secretary Donald Andrew said the additional expense will warrant either a change order in the construction plans, or a request for an additional $25,000.

"Either they'll have to change something somewhere else in the plans, or the building committee will have to ask the advisory committee for a transfer, or go to town meeting in April for another appropriation," he said.

The fire chief had suggested last week that by expanding the sprinkler system throughout the addition, the elaborate fire alarm system proposed for the building could be reduced in size and cost.

This week, a foundation was dug for the groundfloor elevator. Construction of the addition's foundation could begin as early as this week, Andrew stated.

The town hall addition is adequately sprinkled, according to architect Brett Donham, and in fact, it exceeds what the National Fire Protection Association requires.

In a letter to selectmen, Donham gave a chronology of events regarding the communication he forwarded to the fire chief about the proposed sprinkler system. Last week, Fire Chief Daniel Brock rejected the plans based on an insufficient sprinkler system in the addition.

Donham stated that in May, 1986, the plans were discussed with the fire chief. That month, the chief submitted a letter stating a full sprinkler system is recommended, but not required.

In June, 1986, cost estimates for a sprinkler system in the addition were discussed with selectmen and members of the town hall study committee. It was decided to provide a system in the basement only because a full system throughout the three levels is not required; the state building code does not require it; the two vaults for the town's valuable papers have a six-hour fire proof rating; and the town's insurance agent indicated there would be no cost savings in insurance premiums with a full system; and the building has a complete fire detection and alarm system.

The basement, which is 3,154 square feet, has a full sprinkler system which meets all requirements. "I believe the addition is fully protected, in excess of what the code requires, and that you have the authority to grant a building permit," Donham added.

NE Wildlife Center holiday gifts

The New England Wildlife has wildlife-related gifts for the upcoming holiday season.

Included in this year's offerings are gift memberships, a number of books on birds and bird feeders (including the renowned Peterson's Field Guide to the Eastern Birds), cedar bird houses for chickadees, owls, wrens and woodpeckers, hawk and owl calls, and a special "Bat House".

Designed by the Bat Conservation International, this "Official Bat House" is a perfect gift for gardeners, pool owners and anyone else bothered by annoying and biting mosquitos and other flying insects. Bats are man's best friend when it comes to insect control. A single bat can catch and consume as many as 500 mosquitos per hour during a hot summer evening- much quieter, cheaper, and more succesful than any electronic "bug zapper" on the market today.

The "Official Bat House" provides these fascinating and helpful flying mammals with a daytime roosting place that is safer than our attics and chimneys. The "Official Bat House" resembles a bird house in appearance and can be easily mounted to any vertical surface.

To order the "Bat House" or any other gift item from the New England Wildlife Center, call the Center offices at (617)749-5387. Proceeds from all gift sales will benefit the private, non-profit Center's wildlife education and rehabilitation programs.

Education task force proposed

By John Magadieu
Mariner staff

State Sen. William Golden has proposed the establishment of a task force on education for the 11 member South Shore Coalition towns.

He said that bringing the coalition's 11 towns together in a "unified front would give them clout when raising their concerns in a united voice."

Golden told committee members Thursday that area school committee members have told him they are suffering the costs of Chapter 766 special education programs, competition from private schools, and the crunch of teachers in certain areas.

Marshfield School Supt. Daniel Bresnahan said last month higher wages not only in nearby states but in neighboring towns are draining good teachers away.

And, Special Education Director John Braithwaite said recently that special education costs will probably approach $1.3 million in fiscal 1989.

"They are not sure where the state is going," Golden said. "I propose that we set up a task force on education to help school officials keep informed on what is going on at the state level, to give them direct access to the technical information they need."

The senator added that he is interested in the potential for interaction between school systems.

"It has become uneconomical for schools to specialize," he noted, "so they can't accommodate students who want to speak or write in Russian, or math students who want to go beyond what is available in their schools, or science students who want to work on special projects," Golden continued.

"An aspect of education I have been interested in is education for gifted and talented students, he said.

Marshfield has a program for academically gifted and talented youngsters in the fourth, fifth and sixth grades.

Because of a lack of programs for the gifted and talented in most schools, Golden said, there has been a drain on public school systems. Private school waiting lists are growing ever longer.

"There are now some schools in the state that are beginning to share," he commented. "It is supervised by the teachers."

Details of such arrangements would have to be worked out with teachers' organizations, he said, adding that he believes sharing between school systems could result in savings for towns and an increase in the diversity of course offerings.

Golden said he has gotten together with the "lighthouse group," an organization of school superintendents in the coastal towns.

"I think getting them together with town officials would be of real value," he said. "What would be ideal is to have three members from each town on the task force—a school commitee member, an administrator, and a teacher."

Hull Selectman John Silva, vice-chairman of the coalition, asked Golden to give the coalition an outline of his ideas on the proposed task force.

"If the South Shore Coalition supports your concept, we will go before our school committees and suggest it to them," he said. "The only negative I could see is that there is distrust between the school department and the town on budgetary issues. They don't want a coalition of selectmen to have some say; the coalition will have to allay those fears."

Golden suggested that the coalition "create a forum" for school committee members, administrators and teachers to get together with state officials.

"I think this is an excellent idea," said Hanover Selectman Janet O'Brien, coalition chairman. "This idea ties into what we want to accomplish."

O'Brien said she is concerned that "as the coalition branches out, we don't want to lose our focus. We have to figure out how, structurally, we can do this."

"Just bring them together and see what comes out of it," Golden said.

Silva agreed, "If the initial meeting works, perhaps one of the school departments may take the lead on information dissemination."

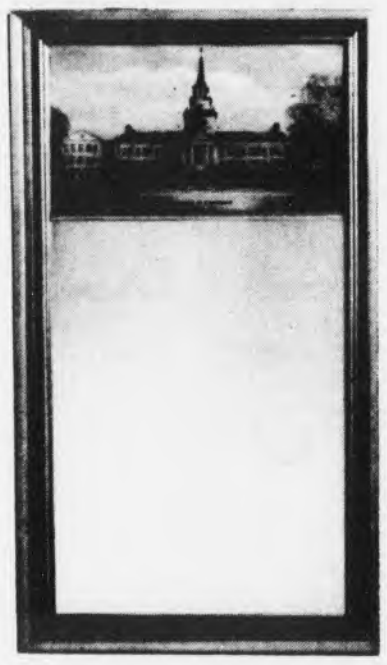
The coalition voted to support Golden's proposal for the formation of a task force on education.

Tax abatement legislation filed

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray has filed legislation to allow for a $500 yearly real estate tax abatement for persons seventy years of age and over.

The Act would read as follows: "Any city or town which accepts the provisions of this section shall provide any person seventy years of age and over, and a resident of the Commonwealth for the preceding ten years, with an abatement of five hundred dollars on their yearly real estate tax on their domicile."

The principal difference with the present law is that no means test is required. All residents of Massachusetts 70 years of age and older who meet the criteria described would qualify for this real estate tax abatement.



Rep. Murray has filed similar legislation in the past. It is her hope that the passage of this bill will ease some of the tax burden placed upon seniors.

☐ Gary Ormiston, Cohasset High Class of 1981, graduated from Lehigh University, Bethlehem, Pa. on October 11th with a Master's Degree in Civil Engineering. While he was there he was also a recipient of the Brink Fellowship. Gary is currently working for the structural engineering company Howard, Needles, Tammen and Bergendoff in Hartford, Conn. He is living in nearby Middletown, Conn. Gary is the son of Peter and Joyce Conway.

☐ Another Cohasset High graduate makes the news this week! Mark Lahive, who graduated in 1985 and is in his Junior year at Middlebury College in Vermont, was just elected Varsity Football Captain for next year's team. Mark should fit in to that role admirably, as he has had past experience! He was the captain of the CHS football team, and was very much admired and liked by everyone from the coaches to the players. It certainly is an honor to be chosen Captain, and everyone is proud of you Mark! Especially Mom and Dad (Janet and Dave Lahive) we'll bet! Continued success on and off the field to you, we sure will be watching...

☐ Kevin Leary has his name known in the soccer world, and is to be applauded for his latest feat. Kevin, captain of the Worcester Academy Soccer Team, capped off his season by being named to the All-star team of Western New England Prep School Soccer Association. Good work!

☐ Arne and Martha Gjestby had a special guest in their home a few weeks ago. Arne's sister, Kari paid a visit on-route to the opening of the United Nations General Assembly. Kari Gjestby is the Underseeretary of State of Norway, and she got a chance to view "small town politics" while she was here. She went on a tour of the Town Hall, and even read the Town Meeting Warrant! Wonder how Cohasset compares to Norway?

☐ Bryan Edwards made the headlines early this year, but it was still basketball related! Bryan announced that he has chosen to go to Boston College, after being sought by over three hundred! Good news for Edwards fans, Chestnut Hill sure isn't far to go to watch him play. And, good news for Bryan, the Cohasset Contingent that attends B.C. are sure to be there to cheer him on. We'll all have one more year of watching Bryan play for CHS, here's hoping its a great one for you Bryan.

☐ Joel Reidy and his able defenders sure have reason to boast this week; in the first three States Games, Joel has had shut-outs! Quite a record indeed. Here's hoping they go all the way to the top, the team certainly has worked hard to get there!

☐ Congratulations to Shirley F. Neew, who has been named the President of the South Shore Art Center. She most assuredly will fill the shoes admirably, the Center is lucky to have her.

☐ "Some Class Acts '88" was some class act! Not only was a lot of fun had by cast and crew, the audience loved it too. Hats go off again to Joanne Fictner for another wonderful performance! All of your hard work sure paid off, and from all reports, people would like an encore!

☐ Next weekend there will be a production at CHS, the Wizard of Oz. It will be held on Dec. 4th and 5th at 7:30 and Dec. 6th at 2:00 at the auditorium. Tickets are $4, and can be purchased at the door.

☐ Michelle Babin, a junior at Notre Dame Academy, makes the news again this week. Michelle took fourth place in the Catholic League Champions Meet. She sure must be a super runner...

☐ Don't forget to go to Hull this weekend to watch all of the CHS alumns try to beat Hull in the touch football game. Not only will it be a lot of fun to watch, but you will be benefiting the Jimmy Fund at the same time. Watch for the Patriot Ledger to give all the details.

☐ Sara Dickerman, recently completed an outstanding season for the Babson College Women's field hockey team in Wellesley.

Sarah, a freshman, played a major role in the success of the 1987 Beaver squad. As a back, Sarah helped stabilize the defense as well as establish herself as an offensive threat by leading the team in total assists. For her unselfish efforts, Sarah was one of the most consistent performers for second year coach Laurie Magoon.

According to Head Coach Laurie Magoon, "Sarah was a pleasant surprise this year. Her presence made an immediate impact on the field as she developed into a more complete all around player. With her unlimited potential, Babson has high hopes for Sarah's upcoming years."

The future of the program is optimistic. Despite a 6-8-4 season this year, Coach Magoon's squad has played consistently in a very promising fall campaign.

Sarah is the daughter of David Dickerman and plans to major in business administration at Babson.

☐ The Gridiron Club held a successful dance at the Cohasset Country Club last weekend, and a great time was had by all. The dinner was delicious, the band had everyone dancing and the raffle produced many winners. Good job men.

☐ That's the news from here. Have a wonderful Thanksgiving, and let us know of any events that go on over your holiday weekend.

Giving comfort

It is Thanksgiving time once again. The weather has already chilled us to the bone, as we seek the comfort of our warm homes.

Perhaps you sat beside a mesmerizing fire this weekend, watching from the hearth as the wood cracked and sizzled. The warmth of a fireplace can ignite the coldest hearts and hands.

But there are some who can not seek the warmth of a soft winter fire. They have no home, they have no food, and they have little clothing.

These are people whose good fortune has evaporated, much like last week's snow. They were once sheltered and well fed, but that is gone. They are alone and struggling – often trying in vain to make a better life.

A homeless person is not a faceless man or woman living miles away. They are people, just like us. Some are well educated, but troubled. Some are without education, without employment and with children.

We are grateful for the bounty we are about to consume this Thanksgiving. It is not comforting to think of the children who will be observing this holiday from inside a motel room or underneath the roof of some temporary shelter.

It's a difficult thought. Tiny, innocent children seeking shelter in a lonesome, frightening, unfamiliar place. The one thing in life we all need, aside from water and food, is a habitat – a place we can call our home.

We're saddened at the thought of others doing without this year. And so we send them our money, our canned food, our prayers, and hope they receive them and prosper.

This is not to belittle our efforts. We are well-intentioned and should be commended for our generosity.

But a very special word of thanks should be said this holiday for the many people in our neighborhood who give more than their hard-earned money, and more than their prayers to help those less fortunate.

There are people like Esther Sanger who devote their lives to one mission – helping others to survive. She is not a doctor, nor is she is a millionaire. She is a simple woman who has boundless energy and a passionate commitment to serve others.

She is selfless and seeks nothing for herself. People like Esther Sanger are rare.

Esther began the Quincy Crisis Center many years ago where she sheltered homeless people. She has fed, housed and educated these people until they are ready to begin a life outside her door.

At Thanksgiving this year, we should look around our bountiful table and express a reason for our gratefulness and good fortune. We should all be thankful there are Esther Sangers in this world – people who make life a little more comfortable for those who seek refuge from a difficult life.

Rules of moral conduct misguided

To the Editor:

In a recent column in the "Mariner," Tom Henshaw pokes fun at the "new rules" of moral conduct he sees being applied to aspiring public officials. Many of us he notes are guilty of the same indiscretions for which Hart, Biden and Ginsberg were taken to task.

Mr. Henshaw is right of course. "If thou, O Lord, shouldst mark iniquities, Lord, who could stand?" observes the ancient Psalmist. Though all of us may not be adulterers, plagerists, or experiment with illegal drugs, we all, in one way or another, fall short of moral perfection. Indeed, even the one who believes he or she is perfect is prima facie guilty of the sin of pride. Summing up my own moral conduct for example, I find that I have committed five out of the seven deadly sins only this past week and will probably commit the other two within a few days.

But Mr. Henshaw's conclusion drawn from the premise that we are all sinners is seriously flawed. Since he has sinned he rejoices that he is thus freed from the responsibilities of public office and is thereby at liberty to go fishing off Minot's Light. Wrong, wrong, wrong! When on his fishing trip Mr. Henshaw hooks a piece of garbage or sees the sewage floating by he will no doubt rail against all those incompetent politicians who allowed Massachusetts Bay to be disgracefully despoiled. Perhaps then he will understand that a lack of moral perfection cannot become our excuse for opting out of the political process. Those boring Supreme Court cases in Washington and those tedious election speeches in Iowa often have a clear connection with the trash one may observe drifting past Minot's Light.

It is ironical that adjacent to Mr. Henshaw's column is a news report of a speech by Nobel peace laureate and concentration camp survivor Elie Wiesel in which he is quoted as saying, "Indifference to evil is evil" and "When we needed other people, they never came to our aid." When we are needed will our answer be that we decided to go fishing that day?

Meeting should be secured before vote

To the Editor:

I agree with your editorial of November 18 in which you suggest something must be done about our bylaws, with regard to reconsideration of articles at town meetings.

Further, I agree with the Town Moderator's call for a second vote on the police/fire station vote at the second session of Special Town Meeting. Town Meeting is an extension of Annual Town Elections, and the vote in this case was so close (neither winning or failing by a full vote) as to mandate a second count. If I am not mistaken, there is precedence (case law) which required Town Moderator Weeks to take this action.

However, the Town Moderator erred in not locking (securing) the hall immediately after the first hand vote was taken on the fire/police renovation and before the decision for a re-vote, recount. This would have insured the integrity of the vote and the voters. No calls could have been made to opponents or supporters of the article; no individuals who were outside the hall on the first vote could have been brought in to decide the issue; accordingly, no votes within the hall would have been lost.

In the case of a recount at Annual Town Elections, the ballots are already secured by the Town Clerk. No new elements (new ballots, new voters) are introduced during a recount. In the case of Town Meeting, the Town Moderator secures the vote by immediately locking the hall, in order that the preceding paragraph does not occur.

By not following the example of Town Meeting Time, which we have adopted as a procedure for our Town Meeting, and which provides for securing the hall, the Town Moderator lost control of his meeting, and lost the voters' trust.

In fact, the Moderator lost the trust and control of his recent special town meeting on two consecutive nights. The first night he had to deal with reconsideration (on the same night, ten minutes after the fact) of the town fields articles. Numerous athletic field proponents had left the meeting. Accordingly, new elements (voters) were introduced. If my suggestion of a bylaw change had been in force, Mr. Ekberg and supporters would have, according to bylaw, announced their intention to call for reconsideration of that article at a continuing session of Special Town Meeting. What Town Meeting voted at 8 p.m. should not be overturned at 8:15 p.m. or 10 p.m. at the same session.

The Town Government Structure Committee should look into this matter, and should prepare a bylaw which will allow reconsideration only at a continuing session of the meeting; notice of the same should be given at the same session in which the vote failed, or won.

Art center director honored . . .

According to the artist who was named the center's first director emeritus, "The things I planned for the center are right on schedule. This is just what I wanted . Now with this new building, suddenly our class enrollments have doubled along with our memberships. It has created a real sense of excitement."

Her friend and fellow officer, Claffy Williams, said the art center's recent goals would never have been attained without Dillon's guidance. "The two of us had this dream of a new building," she said. "We just couldn't have the classes and shows we wanted, while we were in the other building. That dream lasted for about ten years. It took us four years just to look around for different locations, and then to purchase the property. Then it took about two years to raise the money.

"But nothing would have been acomplished without Margaret's leadership and drive to keep things going," she added.

Williams said her friend possesses leadership qualities and a vast knowledge of art. "And she has a marvelous ability to handle people well and to raise money for our many causes.

"Right now, we are trying to look for a new director. We need someone like Margaret - capable of running a large organization, managing the shows, the artists, and the students. The students' work was always as important to Margaret as the work by the professionals. She never forgot the student."

Williams noted that Dillon began a tradition of juried exhibits by student artists, something that is not a regular feature of other art organizations.

"I think her personality, her leadership qualities and her ability to get along with people will be difficult to replace. She set goals for this art center, and reached every one. Margaret has meant many things to the art center," Williams added.

Artist Victoria Justice, with her husband, Paul, in front of the masks she designed.

Her retirement from the art center will at last free Dillon to pursue something she has ignored for too long - her artwork. An accomplished acrylic artist, Dillon said she will definitely return to her brushes now that other commitments have been completed.

"I feel good leaving now," she said. "I've done the things I set out to do. You can only do so much, and now I intend to get back to my painting."

Art Center director emeritus Margaret Dillon (center) was presented with a plaque Sunday evening by center president Shirley Neer and Anita Franks, while an appreciative audience watches the proceedings. A special artisan exhibit also opened that night at the center.

country of law. The only way we can operate in a workable society is if we follow procedural law. If not we get chaos. Procedural law unchecked has to be dealt with."

"When you ask for a ruling you ask for an injunction," said DeSantis who is considering taking futher action if the Attorney General declines to make a decision.

According to DeSantis if he or some other citizens did take this to superior court, "it would never see its day in court because another town meeting will be here in April."

"That would be a favorable situation," said DeSantis, "It would let the townspeople decide for themselves one more time."

Sports before worship — progress?

Letters

To the Editor:

Are the people of Cohasset opting for Sunday morning sports instead of Sunday worship? The current question of banning athletic activities on Sunday mornings to allow for a "quiet time for family church attendance" would seem a reasonable request from the clergy and their congregations.

Our forefathers founded this nation on God-given principles. The Sabbath was a day of rest, a holy day to study the Scriptures and nourish the soul. A day for families to enjoy each other. Not a business-as-usual day!

But today, with Blue Laws gone, the stores are open Sundays the year round, pro football and baseball games are in full sway . . . and Cohasset, with all its "leisure" and "freedoms" has it no time for quiet reflection, not one hour a week for worshipping together? Is this progress?

Sports can and should be an important part of our everyday lives, yes, but need there be a conflict with the Sabbath?

Small work force at Pilgrim station

A little over 300 contracted workers are currently proceeding with outage work at the Pilgrim nuclear power plant. This number is 150 less than the number of workers present before the work stoppage by Edison management on Nov. 9.

"Some of the less critical work has not yet been released so supervisors and managers can concentrate on the more critical jobs," said Edison Spokesman David Tarantino. "We are keeping the workforce intentionally small so we can exercise more control over the management of the jobs."

Senior news . . .

The Cohasset Council On Aging Board wishes to take this opportunity at such a joyous time of year to sincerely thank the volunteers, drivers, instructors, office help, and the social service league for their support and assistance to us this past year. We have seen an enormous increase in activity here and many changes, without all of your help, we would have been surely overwhelmed!

So, thank you, happy holidays, and a wonderful 1988!

Wompatuck officials review plans

By Bob Tis
Mariner staff

Wompatuck State Park and Department of Environmental Management officials met with citizens Thursday, Nov. 19 to discuss immediate goals for the state park.

Citizens, however, were more concerned with the immediate impact on the perimeters of the park with the proposed increase in swimming and fishing activities.

"It seems to me there are other roads and entrances that could be used besides Free Street," said Nick Panetsos of Hingham. "It is a major problem in our area and leaves a great impact on the community."

"People who live around here are worried about what is going to be in their front yards," echoed another resident.

"With an excess of 300,000 visiting Mount Blue spring, we are talking about a million people driving down Free Street." said Panetsos.

Park director Jack Lash reminded residents the advisory board for the state park was picked by selectmen from each community. Lash also assured residents that a thorough traffic study was being completed, taking into consideration any increased impact new facilities would have on the area.

"I don't feel like we have been operating in a vacuum," said Lash. "We are now relying heavily on the traffic study."

"With a swimming hole and picnics, there is going to be a lot more people coming down a country road. It will mean a lot more litter and garbage and a danger to children," said one Hingham resident.

"The results are what we have to lean on," said Lash who explained that the traffic study has not been completed.

"A lot of the limits and rules are abused and ignored," said Francis Hall of Hingham. "Sometimes you can't even get into the parking lot by the spring. There has to be another entrance. I don't think that it is fair to ask us to bear the entire burden."

Hall also asked Lash what the "thrust" of his plans were for the inside of the park.

"It has to be a blend," explained Lash. "Most of our campers come from 50 miles away or more. We have a very high turnover. It helps to have a variety. A swimming hole would bring a lot of people in."

At peak periods in the summer Wompatuck is often not even at half capacity.

Lash explained that in some ways a swimming hole would reduce traffic while utilizing the resource of the park more efficiently.

"Because we are not offering a lot to do," said Lash, "people are using the park as an outdoor hotel to see Plymouth and Boston.

Cohasset selectman Jim Gallagher informed the Wompatuck advisory board of a unanimous vote the Cohasset group made earlier in the week to oppose any boating access from the park.

Todd Lafleur of the DEM told Gallagher,"it is too bad that you took that vote before you really knew what we had in mind." Lafleur explained that extreme measures had been taken when the boating issue was being considered. Boats would have to be carried by hand into the water. A key would be issued to each boater who would have to prove that he was a fisherman and that he did not have a gasoline moter. Also there would be a limit on the number of fishermen.

Gallagher stated that he did not mind if people fished from shore, but selectmen as a body felt that they do not want to encourage boating. They feel that as a result trash and misuse will occur in the Cohasset water supply, he said.

Other residents voiced complaints about snowmobilers on cross-country ski areas and fences in disrepair.

"To supervise as much park as there is is a tough shot," said Lafleur sympathizing for the regular staff of six that patrol the expansive park. "We have tried to set the park up so that it is obvious what areas you are supposed to use for what."

"The reality is people don't always obey the rules," replied one resident.

The advisory board has a number of recommendations suggested for the park, the most notable of which is the proposed fee for usage of the Mount Blue spring. A faucet fixture would be installed on all three spouts to avoid wasting water during nights and build up pressure to increase the flow rate. A site attendant would be stationed to assist visitors and elderly people as well as to collect the fee. The attendant would also enforce the ten gallon limit, monitor parking lot congestion and prevent excessive littering on the site.

The board is looking into the management and development of 604 acres of a former military supply depot. This would include linking existing bike paths and hiking trails with the paved roads and forest footpaths in that area.

The board is interested in further developing the Holly Pond area. Included in this would be improved access for picniking, a youth fishing program and trail linkage to the campground. The board is also looking into repairing dam, culvert and spillway structures in that area, as well as the possibility of dredging the pond and applying aquatic weed control.

The board plans to hire a year-round naturalist to design, conduct and publicize interpretative programs. They would plan to retain the seasonal naturalist to conduct programs during peak user months.

Members of the board feel that remnant portions of the Old Colony Line, which once marked off land that the Pilgrims used, should be protected and included within interpretative historical programs. Further evaluation of other historical sites is planned.

The advisory committee is also searching for ways to facilitate bicycling, horseback riding, snowmobiling and cross country skiing within the park.

Gunstock ski trip

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone reservations for a ski trip to Gunstock, scheduled Monday, Jan. 18, the Martin Luther King holiday.

The fee for this trip is $30 per person which includes motor coach transportation and an all mountain lift ticket.

Buses will leave from town hall at 5:30 a.m., on Monday, Jan. 18, and return about 7:30 p.m. that evening. Equipment rentals, for those who wish to rent at Gunstock, will be $12 and lessons are $7.

To register, please call the recreation department office at 383-6791. Reservations will be accepted over the phone, but payment must be made by Tuesday, Dec. 22. That will confirm your registration.

For those who want to rent equipment at Gunstock, please be prepared to give us the following information when you call to register: shoe size, weight and age.

Registrations will be accepted on a first call, first enrolled basis, but the trip will be limited to 47 people. Therefore, immediate registration is suggested.

The third ski trip scheduled for the 1987-1988 season is to King Ridge, and will be Sunday, Feb. 14. Registration details will be available during early January. Because the trip will be on the Sunday, of winter vacation, the cost will be a couple of dollars more than the Gunstock trip, but it should not exceed $38.

The fee charge reflects the actual per capita cost. The recreation department does not intend to make any profit, or generate any surplus revenue in the fund.

However, if anyone cannot pay the fee, they should contact Jack Worley or any member of the recreation commission.

With all Revolving Account Fund transactions, there is a great amount of paper work and financial procedure that is necessary to comply with both state and local laws, and must be completed on a strict time table. Therefore, it is greatly appreciated that payments are made within the designated time schedules established for each trip.

The department maintains a waiting list for each trip, and replacements are always found the night before a trip. Should you not be able to go on a trip you have registered for, call the recreation office as soon as possible up until 9 p.m., the night before the trip. If for any reason we are not able to fill your place, you will be refunded the lift money, but not the bus seat fee ($14.00 this year).

The recreation office will be open both at the 5:30 a.m. departure time, and again at the 7:30 p.m. return time.

If parents are not going to be at their home phone during the day of the trip, please leave a number with the recreation director, where you could be reached in the event of an emergency.

Society elects officers, directors

At its recent Annual Meeting, the Cohasset Historical Society elected Officers and Directors for the year 1988.

Serving as President for the coming year is current Society President Charles G. Fink of Summer Street. First Vice President will be John H. Mullett of Beach Street. Second Vice President is Noel A. Ripley of South Main Street. Treasurer is Robert B. James of Ripley Road, and Secretary is David H. Wadsworth of Summer Street, who also serves the Society as Senior Curator.

Incumbent members of the Board of Directors reelected to the Board for three-year terms are: Drexel Gibson, Jane McLean, Burtram Pratt, Joyce Sturdy and David Chittim. New Directors, also elected for three-year terms are Betty Grassie and Douglas Peck.

As a special feature of the Historical Society's 1987 Annual Meeting, the guest speaker was Madelyn Shaw of New York, consultant to the Society in the extensive project now going on to rehabilitate, organize and conserve its large and historically significant collection of antique gowns, associated textiles and accessories.

Shaw spent last summer in Cohasset beginning the long range project, and is scheduled to return at a later date to complete the work, ably assisted by Society volunteers. She is a graduate student at New York's Fashion Institute of Technology. Also on the evening's program was Society Curator Wadsworth who told of recent significant discoveries in other areas of the Society's museum collections, and gave an update on progress of the reconstruction of Minot's Ledge Lighthouse.

Society Board Member David Chittim announced the beginning of a major fund-raising drive, for both the Society's continuing operational expenses and to establish an endowment to ensure its future development. More than 90 members and friends of the Historical Society attended the Society's Annual Meeting.

This coming year marks the 60th anniversary of the incorporation of the Historical Society, founded in i928 as a successor to the town's Committee On Town History, itself started in 1894 to write the original history of Cohasset. Today the Society has a membership numbering about 400 persons.

Hellenic Association classes

The South Shore Hellenic Cultural Association is sponsoring evening classes for adults to learn Greek.

The classes will be held at Cohasset High School. The evening and time will be set after completion of registration.

The tuition is $40 per eight-week semester.

Father Demetrios Michaelides will be the teacher. Greek is his native language. He studied Greek extensively: Ancient, Classical, New Testament and Modern Greek in Greek High School and at the Holy Cross Greek Orthodox Seminary. He has conducted classes for adults in Greek elsewhere.

To register, call Father Michaelides, 925-1060; Mrs. Fay Papadopoulos, 383-9330; Mike Manjos, 749-2108, 740-2870.

Preparations made for Dec. 5 Village Fair

Catering to both eyes and appetites, Cohasset's 47th Village Fair, Saturday, Dec. 5 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., will again tempt hundreds of shoppers with colorful, hand-made holiday decorations of all kinds and foods fast and fancy.

As preparations for the big five-church fund-raiser being organized this year under the leadership of St. Anthony's Church, intensify with the approach of the Fair date, workers in parlors, garages and kitchens are putting finishing touches on what the booths and tables will offer.

Preparing pine cone decorations for the wreaths to be sold at the Village Fair are: (l to r) Isabelle Wilson, Committee Chairman Jean Manganaro and Anne Keating.

Wreath makers and decorators who have been meeting weekly under the leadership of Jean Manganaro are gearing up for the final week before the Fair when they will spend many hours daily in the vestry of the Congregational Church to deck the hundreds of wreaths with bows cones and other accessories that appeal to holiday shoppers. These wreaths will be sold in the Town Hall with spillover outdoors if necessary.

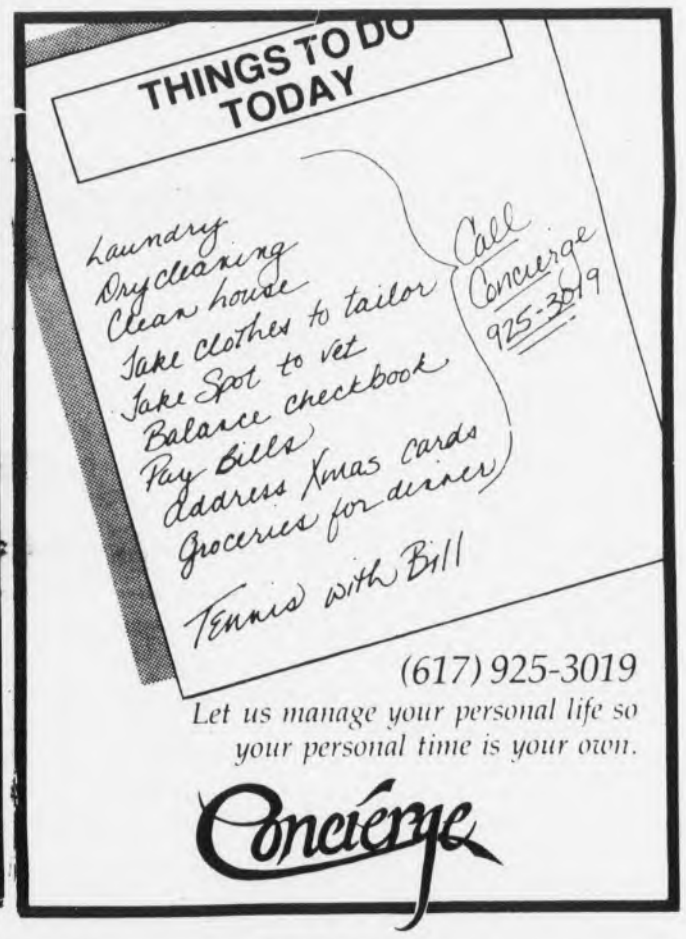
Equally busy in these final weeks are workers for the Boutique in the several churches, crafting a wide array of novelty gift items with a holiday motif that will stock tables in the Town Hall. Sheila Wallingford and Donna Blain of St. Stephen's head up the Boutique effort, with satellite group meeting and working in private homes and in the other church buildings.

In the food department, church members are being solicited by their representatives on the Fair's Central Committee for contributions of baked goods to the committee headed by Phyllis Barkas of Panagia Greek Orthodox Church which will put these items on sale in the vestry of the Congregational Church. Similarly Eugenia Gianabias of the Greek church is assembling a store of home-made and special candies that also will be on sale.

The participation in recent years of the Greek church has added the dimension of Greek delicacies to the Fair's food offerings. Jim Dedes is head of the effort to load tables in the Congregational church with trays of Greek pastries to give the Fair a truly international flavor.

Olga Sawchuk (l) and Tilli Nardo cap jars of jelly in preparation of the Village Fair.

Red velvet bows for Christmas wreaths are fashioned by this trio of workers: (l to r) Merle Graham, Noel Manion and Lee Drew.



For those who wish to "eat and run" rather than to take their food purchases away, a Chowder Bar will again operate in the Congregational Church and a Snack Bar in the Town Hall auditorium. Ralph and Susi Coley have taken on the demanding job of operating the busy Chowder Bar, assisted by a corps of workers who will be serving a steady line of customers at lunchtime. Peter Guild and his staff, in the meantime, will be busy dealing out hot dogs and soft drinks at the Snack Bar, while Marilyn Hobson and her workers will be operating the popular popcorn machine.

Altogether, say the Fair's Tri-Chairmen Lou Simeone, Kathy Pratt and Kathy Brennock, are planning an offering of items and service to meet every eye and appetite.

World Cultures: Brian Buckley, Erin McDonald, Marc St.Onge

"E" words

All the children in Mrs. Price's classes brought in their eyes, eyelashes, eyebrows, elbows and ears for the E week.

The children used their energy to clean up the environment. All are watching and marking our level of water as it evaporates. Breaking open an uncooked egg was exciting as we learned about the yoke and albumen.

Alanna Murphy brought in a paper mache eggplant. She told us to peel, bread and fry it.

The story of the Early Bird Gets the Worm was shared by Erica Dean.

Money from Portugal, escudos, was shared by Melissa Pyfrom.

Jimmy Figueredo wore his eyeglasses all day.

A pirate's golden earring was spotted on Adam Leahy.

Signs enter and exit were explained by Jennifer Meehan.

Glittery "Es" were made and worn by Eric Hanian, Erica Dean, Emily Coyne, Elja Gobes, Elizabeth Hassan and Ethan Begley.

HHS hunger banquet

The purpose of the Hunger Banquet was to illustrate the unequal conditions under which we live. According to Oxfam America, only 15 percent of the world's people eat a full meal everyday while 55 percent eat little or nothing at all. The remaining 30 percent eat meals that may fill them up but are hardly well balanced.

By simulating these conditions and learning about the factors that lead to such conditions we may better understand our world. We also hope that the Hunger Banquet demonstrated the importance of each individual contribution to making our world a better place. The money was donated to Oxfam America.

The Alternative School at CHS, which sponsored Oxfam's program this year, chose to hold a Hunger Banquet, and over a third of the student body participated.

These students paid one dollar, and were divided into three groups: 15% of the students ate a full meal, were served by others, had napkins and silverware, and sat at attractively decorated tables. These 15% represented the first world, or developed countries (like the U.S., England, etc.). Thirty percent of the students, representing the second world, or developing countries, ate a simple meal of rice with sauce. And the remaining 55% of the participants ate a little rice or nothing at all.

Students were randomly placed in these groups by the color ticket they received at the door.

More material needed

CHS' literary and arts magazine, Whispers and Shadows, held a meeting this past Wednesday, Nov. 18. The magazine is seeking art work and literary materials from students. Last year's issue was a success, and we're hoping this year will be even better!

Cohasset students view Vo-Tech

Eighth grade students from the Cohasset Junior High School recently toured both campuses of South Shore Vocational Technical High School.

The regional school, of which Cohasset is one of the eight member towns, has campuses in Hanover and in Abington.

The students were guided through both campuses by Guidance Counselors Pamela Titus and John Kosko. The students visited each of the seventeen shop areas where instructors explained the various course offerings, skills necessary for success and employment opportunities. The counselors explained the general admissions requirements and reviewed particular academic and mechanical strengths that may be useful to students contemplating application to South Shore.

Kosko pointed out that South Shore offers technical training, as well as a high school diploma which allows the student several options upon graduation. He noted that academic subjects include language arts, English, various levels of math, social studies, science and physical education. Out of each graduating class approximately 70 percent of the students find employment in their career field, 15 percent continue their education at the college level and 15 percent enter the military.

Cohasset students who are interested in applying to South Shore Vocational Technical High School may obtain an application from junior high school Guidance Director Jack Leary or by contacting the South Shore Guidance Department at the Hanover campus, 871-4153.

Field trip to Kimball's

Tuesday, Nov. 18, Mrs. Moody's kindergarten took a most worthwhile trip to Kimball's by the Sea. The children led by Kimball's manager Dan Leahy, explored every nook and cranny including workrooms, storerooms, offices, laundry rooms, the pool, the kitchen and the famous third floor. One of the many high points was visiting the suites in which Big Bird and Oscar stayed.

Victor, Kimball's chef, dazzled us with warm blueberry muffins along with fresh o.j. served by Ellie to a most polite group of children. Thanks also to all the Kimball's employees who let us explore in our "hands on" way.

Special thanks to John Foster for anticipating our transportation needs. And last, but not least, thank you Meagan Leahy for sharing your Dad for the morning.

Food drive a big success

The students of Cohasset Jr./Sr. High School have kindly and generously donated five cases of canned goods to the "Boston Can Share" food drive. Hooray for these fine students!

Prince UPC codes

Reminder! The Deer Hill PSO is still collecting Prince UPC codes for a G.E. camcorder. Please send them to school with your child or drop them off at the Deer Hill office. The homeroom that collects the most UPC codes will be rewarded with an ice cream party! Thank you!

Cost reduction

Please note — change in cost of milk for students — 15¢ per carton.

Early release day Dec. 3

Thursday, Dec. 3, will be an early release day in the Cohasset Public Schools. There will be no afternoon kindergarten sessions and other students will be dismissed according to the following schedule:

Junior/Senior High School, noon; Deer Hill School, 12:40 p.m.; Joseph Osgood School, 12:50 p.m.

Lunch will be served in the elementary schools and food service will be available at the Junior/Senior High School.

This early release day has been approved by the Cohasset School Committee to allow the staff of the elementary schools to hold parent conferences and the junior/senior high school staff to participate in a workshop entitled "A World of Difference."

Deer Hill picture retakes

Please note — picture retakes will be taken after Thanksgiving, not this week as originally planned.

Last CHS football game

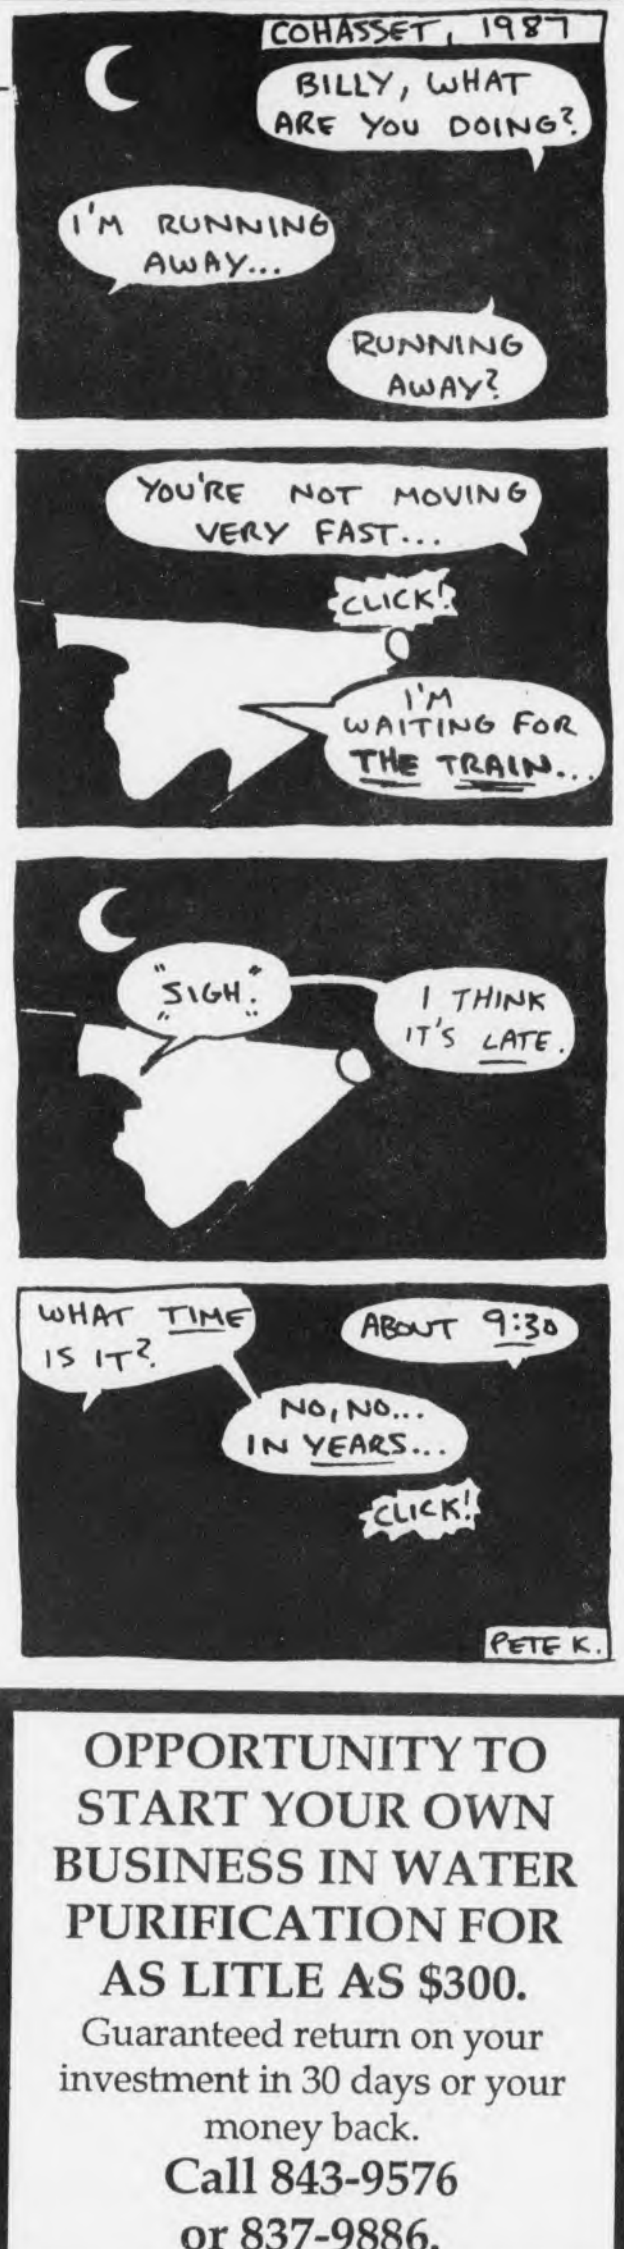
Remaining football game — Cohasset Skippers vs. Hull, Thurs., Nov. 26, 10 a.m., at Hull. Cheer our team to victory.

Sweatshirt reminder

Osgood sweatshirt reminder — all money for sweatshirts should be received in the office no later than November 30. For further information please call Kathy Walsh (9147).

Early release

Please remember early dismissal, November 25, 1987. Children will be dismissed on Wednesday, Nov. 25 at 12:45 p.m. for the Thanksgiving holiday. School will re-open on Monday, Nov. 30, 1987.



From all of us at the Osgood School — Have a happy and safe Thanksgiving.

The Art Department

Art students at CHS will be attending The Helga Pictures at the M.F.A. Boston, Dec. 3, 1987.

After school scenery workshops for Wizard of Oz have been attracting many students to the art rooms and shop for building and painting back drops and props for the all school musical.

Art I students have portraits on display at the Paul Pratt Library, Cohasset.

CHS to present Wizard of Oz musical

By Peter Kasperowicz
Mariner correspondent

Boy, the resemblance between C.H.S. students and The Wizard of Oz cast of characters is just remarkable. The Wizard himself looks almost exactly like Masculine Matt Silvia, and the Tinman is practically a Diamond Doug Moe double. Oh, and wait: I found one more. Anyone who says that Amanda Sweeney isn't a spitting image of Dorothy Gail has got to be blind.

In a recent interview, Dot (Dorothy's cool nickname) expressed uncertainty as to whether her trip to Oz actually happened.

"It's hard to tell. I'm such a dreamer, so it could very well be just a daydream. But I can remember it all so clearly, so who's to say?"

Dot also revealed some of her inner character, and did so quite bravely at that. Dot has a problem that many would be ashamed or embarrassed to talk about.

"It's kinda weird. When I'm in Oz, all's I wanna do is get home, but when I was home, all I wanted to do was travel. I think that I'll always love visiting place, especially imaginary ones. But I'll always miss reality if I leave it for too long."

When asked as to whether or not she had a boyfriend waiting for her in Kansas, the reply was sudden and concise.

"Noooooo way! I'm too young to have a boyfriend. They still have cooties and stuff. . ."

Well, that's OK, because she had her hands full with three of the most eligible bachelors in Oz; the Scarecrow, the Tinman, and the Lion.

"Those three are so weird. First of all, there's the Scarecrow. He thinks that he's stupid because he needs a brain, but he always comes up with the best ideas. Then the Tinman thinks that he doesn't have a heart, but he's probably the most emotional guy I've ever met. And, of course, the Lion thinks that he's a coward, but he fights and protects us throughout our entire trip."

So, of the four of you, do find yourself to be the only one missing something?

"Hey, like I said before, all's I wanna do is get home."

When asked if she would consider returning to Oz, she hinted that there probably would be a Return to Oz, but, "I'd like to see other places, too."

Boy, she's a complex character. Before she "sees other places", why don't you catch her, along with the rest of the gang, at Cohasset High School, Dec. 4-6. Tickets are on sale now! Buy two for only twice the price of one!

Noble lauds cable advertising

Warren B. Noble, addressing the New England Broadcaster's Association, lauded cable for its effective reach to prospects and attributed much of the recent success of his business to cable advertising.

"I run a small business that thinks big. Cable is an excellent medium to work with because it's flexible in terms of production and placement," said Noble, who is also president of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce.

As president, Noble presides over the nation's largest suburban chamber of commerce.

Noble's Camera Shops was founded in 1956 -- long before the dawn of cable.

Noble's Camera Shops has headquarters in The Lincoln Plaza in Hingham with other locations on 65 South Street in Hingham Square and on Rte. 3A in Cohasset.

Cohasset looks to state championship

By Peter Kasperowicz
Mariner correspondent

Cohasset may have another championship team on its hands. The boys soccer team has entered the state finals after defeating Medway, a formerly undefeated team.

Last year, Cohasset made it all the way to the state finals, but lost to Bromfield. This year, the team predicts a re-match, but a different outcome. They have never been stronger, thanks to an overwhelming senior class: Todd Fitzpatrick, John Linsley, Jay Marsal, Steve Myers, Dan Pompeo, Kostas Roukounakis, George Sechen, Dave Shultz, and Ian Smart. Of those nine, three made the south shore league all-stars: Fitzpatrick, Shultz, and Smart.

Oh, yeah, about the Medway game. It was a beauty. Cohasset won 2-0 in one of the most emotionally-high games ever. It was a rough start for both teams, as the slippery field resembled perma-frost. However, Medway seemed more in control than Cohasset. But only for awhile.

"It was great," Jimmy Reidy said, "They were dominating, but then we just clicked in."

Reidy modestly described the few moments before he scored. What? It went on? Oh. Are you sure?

It was a moment of confusion for both teams. Medway is not used to being scored on 15 minutes into a game. And Cohasset...well, maybe they weren't quite as confused as Medway was.

"Once that shot went in, the whole team just thought: 'We can win this game'."

A big Cohasset turnout urged the team not to let up. Wait a minute. It's freezing outside. Aren't all these fans cold?

No way. The fans got just as hot as the players did. Why? They were cheering their team to victory, and their presence was truly appreciated.

Now, Medway is not the sort of team that gives up easily. They're quite similar to Cohasset: they can pass, they have considerable skill, and they're fast. Here's a little secret: many expected Medway to win the State's. So why did Cohasset win? Aw, c'mon. After coming in second place last year, Cohasset has an easy answer.

No matter the opponent, Cohasset has demolished them all. Wednesday's match against Bromfield will be the last victim of Cohasset's incredible season.
(J. Paul MacDonald)

"We wanted to win more than them." It's that simple. They showed Medway what Cohasset soccer is all about.

Now to digress. Throughout this year, the team has developed a ritual that takes place during every win. It's called "the final nail in the coffin". It works like this: some player will score a goal, and right after that, the whole team will be able to sense that it's all over; that they've won. It's not so much the extra point on the score board that tells them; it's more their emotional response. It's like driving home, and not having to worry about running out of gas...it's a great feeling.

Well, last Sunday, with Cohasset leading 1-0, Jay Marsal was given a hammer. He raised the hammer and then let if fall on "the final nail in the coffin". It was 2-0, and the crowd could sense it. The team could sense it. Coach Dan Magner knew it: Cohasset has once again entered the state finals.

St. Stephen's Church

CANNED GOODS

The Church School and Parish are being asked to remember the hungry this Thanksgiving by bringing canned goods to church this Sunday, Nov. 22. A special offering of food will be taken up and then given to the Quincy Crisis Center for their work with those who do not have enough to eat this Thanksgiving.

THANKSGIVING EVE AND DAY

Thanksgiving will be celebrated at an ecumenical service at the Nativity-Assumption Greek Orthodox Church, 817 Jerusalem Road, at 8 p.m. on Wednesday, Nov. 25. Favorite Thanksgiving hymns will be sung and a chorus made up of choirs from each of the town's churches will sing.

Thanksgiving Day a service of Holy Eucharist will be held at St. Stephen's at 9 a.m. This will be a quiet service without choir or organ and will put us in mind of all we have to be thankful for this year.

NOMINATING COMMITTEE

The Nominating Committee begins the process of developing a slate for election to the Vestry and delegates to the Diocesan Convention and District. The members of the Committee are: Shirley Neer, Skip Berents, Paul Neelon, and me.

We will elect a Senior Warden, Treasurer and Assistant Treasurer, Clerk, at least three to serve on the Vestry, and the Delegates to District and Diocesan Convention.

So that the Parish has input I strongly urge you all to indicate to any member of the Nominating Committee the name or names of those you feel should receive consideration. Consider women as well as men for all of the above positions.

Obviously not all could be nominated nor can some of those suggested serve because of time, other involvement, etc. However, all names suggested will receive equal consideration. So please pass along your thoughts as to who might serve well in the positions mentioned above, and let us hear from you in the coming weeks.

s/ John Mullett, Senior Warden

PLEDGES TO BE GATHERED IN ON FIRST SUNDAY OF ADVENT

Our pledging of money to St. Stephen's is a gift of thanksgiving for the disclosure to us of the Eternal in the beauty of that place, in the love of that place, in the service of that place. We are called to give to many places and causes but there are none which have dedicated themselves to worship, to being centered in Christ, to growing in faith, ministry, and service as we have at St. Stephen's. Your gift of money, time, and skill, as God increasingly gives to us, enlivens this purpose.

We will have our ingathering of pledges on Advent Sunday, November 29. Please fill out and bring your pledge cards on that day or send them in by mail. On Advent Sunday as we celebrate the beginning of the season of Christ's coming, we give of ourselves to say: "Thank you, Lord Jesus, for coming into my life. May my church continue to grow in being an instrument of your coming into the lives of others." Our giving as the Body of Christ makes a difference. Please consider it carefully.

DIRECTORY PICTURES TO BE CHOSEN

The proofs of directory pictures for parishioners will be available for inspection on Tuesday, Dec. 1, and Wednesday, Dec. 2. Pictures may then be purchased in time for Christmas if you wish, or selected and readied for the directory, which will be available by the first of the year.

ADVENT POTLUCK SUPPER

Our first Advent potluck supper will be held on Wednesday, Dec. 2, at 6:30 p.m. At this dinner we will select names of "secret pals" for whom we will make or buy modest (but with lots of love!) Christmas presents. Also at this potluck we are privileged to have singers from the South Shore Men of Harmony come and perform. One of them will be our own Peter Greenman! The dinner and program will end by 8:30 p.m. Families who wish to come early to make Advent wreaths are encouraged to do so.

Plan to cook a casserole or bring a dessert enough for eight. Coffee, tea, and beverages will be provided.

SERVICES AND LESSONS

Sunday, November 29, The First Sunday of Advent — 8:00 a.m., Holy Eucharist, 10:00 a.m., Holy Eucharist and Sermon, Lessons: Isaiah 64:1-9a; 1 Corinthians 1:1-9; Mark 13:33-37.

VILLAGE FAIR NEWS

Bargain bazaar: Please drop all bargain bazaar items at St. Anthony's Rectory, Wednesday 10 a.m.-12 p.m. and Saturday 10 a.m.-12 p.m. In leaving items, please don't block rectory passageways.

Fair dinner: There will be a dinner held at St. Stephen's on Fair Day, Dec. 5 in the evening. Tickets are $12.50 per person and are still available. If you are interested in going, please contact Bill Bell 740-1664.

REMINDER: Community Thanksgiving service Wednesday, Nov. 25, 1987 at 8 p.m. at the Nativity-Assumption of the Virgin Mary, Greek Orthodox Church, 817 Jerusalem Road.

CHRISTMAS CONCERT: Tickets are now on sale at the church office for $3.00 for our annual benefit Christmas concert to be held in the Meeting House on Sunday afternoon, Dec. 13 at 4 p.m. The concert will feature the Unicorn Singers, a chamber orchestra and soloists under the direction of Margo Euler. They will perform "Utrecht Jubilate" by Handel, Bach's Cantata No. 61, "Nun Komn Der Heiden heiland" and some carols for all to sing.

This year we have designated the South Shore Habitat for Humanity, a non-profit housing ministry, as the beneficiary of our concert. To date we have 28 patrons. There is still time to become a patron of the concert by making a contribution of $30.00. Patrons will receive two complimentary tickets. Don't miss out on this opportunity to benefit a worthy cause and to enjoy some beautiful Christmas music.

HABITAT PROJECT — Wear your work clothes, bring gloves and be prepared to hammer, nail and carry heavy loads! Saturday, Nov. 28, at 8 a.m., members of First Parish are going to Dorchester, as part of Habitat Project, and help build a house. Youth Group members are cordially invited to join in and lend a hand. We will return by 5 p.m. It's a great project for you to get involved in and urge everyone who can to participate. For more information, call Chris at 837-4215.

Second Congregational Church

Minister: Gary A. Ritts, Secretary: Muriel Wheelwright, Office phone: 383-0345; Parsonage phone: 383-1422: office hours: Monday through Friday, 9 a.m.noon.

STEWARDSHIP SUNDAY is upon us! Sunday, Nov. 22 is Thanksgiving Sunday and likewise our opportunity to give a concrete thank you to God by returning our pledges envelopes (you should receive them within the next two days) during the morning's collection. Our vision and our circles are expanding, we need everyone's support. To be sure, financial support is merely a part of the need: add to that time, talent and prayers. Let us reflect a bit of God's generosity and we'll see those expanding circles swell, making some truly loving waves felt throughout our community and beyond!

VILLAGE FAIR:

Saturday night, Dec. 5. Dinner tickets are going quickly. The meal will be catered by Carmine and tickets are $12.50 per person. A fun way to relax after the fair. Call Linda Campbell to reserve your tickets, 383-0021. Don't forget to sign up on the volunteer poster in Bates Hall so we can submit our list of names of people working on the fair. Volunteers still needed to work on Friday, Dec. 4, and Saturday, Dec. 5, at the Bake Table. Call Debbie Anderson 383-6345.

EOCD official says state will help finance housing

State Secretary of Communities and Development, Amy S. Anthony has announced that additional state assistance will be available to communities where affordable housing developments are proposed. Funds offered through the state's Municipal Advance program will pay for legal and technical help so that communities can respond more effectively to requests for comprehensive permits used in the development of low and moderate income housing.

"These resources will help communities better understand how the comprehensive permit process works while becoming more actively involved as partners in the development of affordable housing," she said.

Any community in the state where a housing development requiring a comprehensive permit has been proposed, is eligible to receive technical assistance funds for legal, planning, and technical assistance. Awards of up to $10,000 will be made on an on-going basis.

"Communities will now have access to professional assistance," Anthony said

Obituary

Yvonne Hough

A funeral Mass was celebrated Monday, Nov. 23 in St. Anthony's Church in Cohasset, for Yvonne (Hetue) Hough, 70, who died Friday, Nov. 20 at the Queen Anne Nursing Home. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

Mrs. Hough was a resident of Cohasset for 60 years, and was a member of St. Anthony's Church.

For many years, she was a cashier and bookkeeper at the A & P Supermarket at Cushing Plaza in Cohasset.

Wife of the late William P. Hough, she leaves a son, William J. Hough of Norwell, and four cousins, Louise Conroy and State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, both of Cohasset, Muriel Trapp of Hull and Jean Rosano of Scituate.

Funeral arrangements were made at the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St. in Cohasset.

Cohasset reunited with an old rival

Walter Sweeney, will attest.

The football teams were led by the most beloved coach in C.H.S history, Everett Dorr.

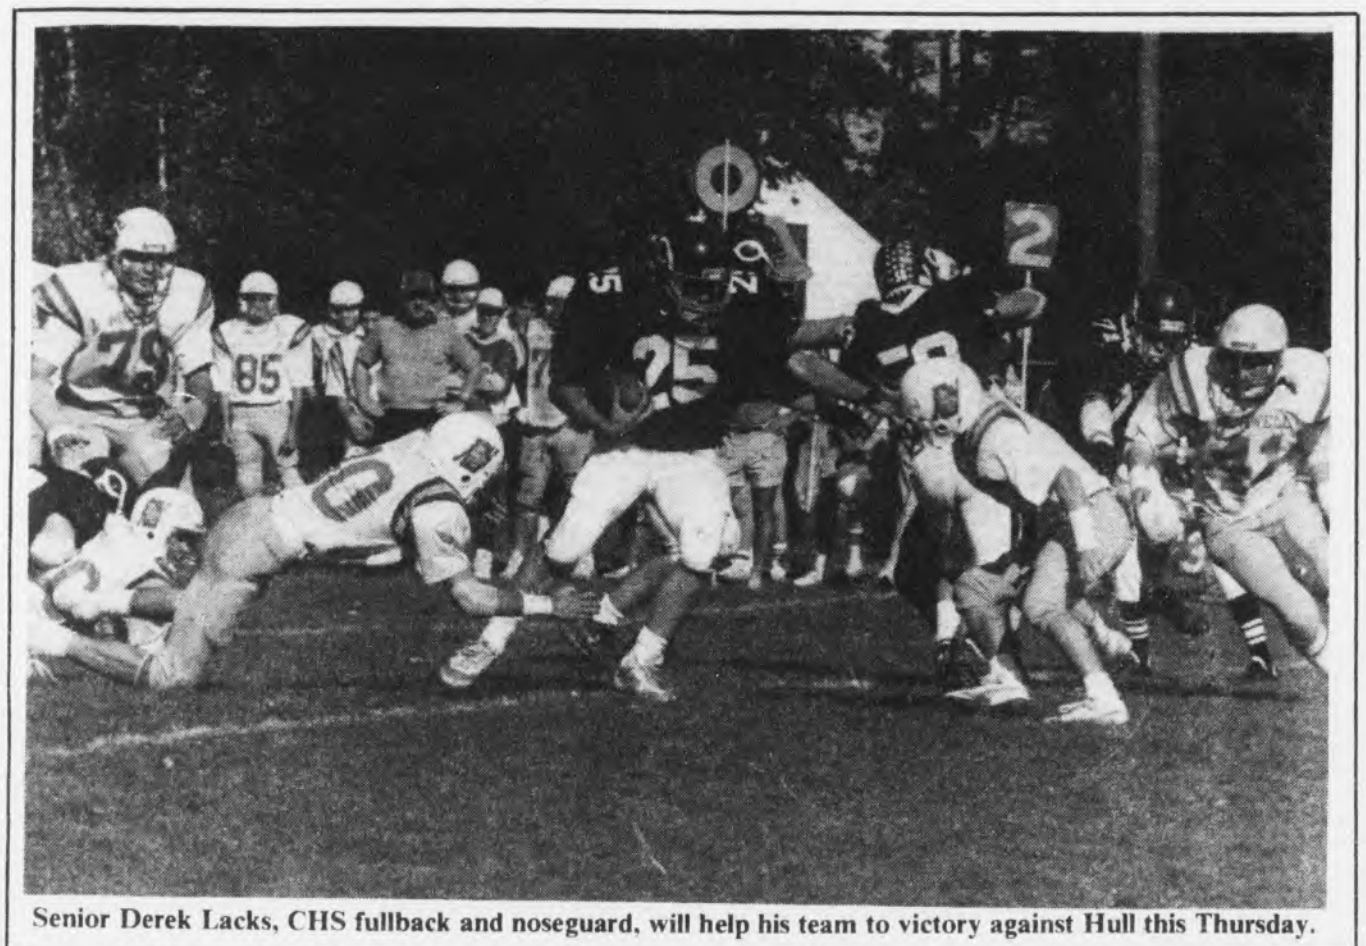
In 1968, Frank Almedia took over the reigns and at the same time there was a shake-up in the then Mayshore League. The Skippers were placed in the South Shore League along with their rival Hull as well as Hanover, Norwell, Marshfield, Middleboro, Holbrook, Abington, East and West Bridgewater and Apponoquet.

This didn't bother Skipper fans until a league edict said the Skippers were to play Marshfield on Thanksgiving Day. This sent townspeople reeling. Petitioners had little effect on league officials.

From 1968 onward, Almedia led his Skippers against Marshfield on Thansgiving. This uphill battle lasted to 1972 when a growing Marshfield was transplanted into the Mayflower League much to the delight of many bruised and battered Cohasset gridsters. Thanksgiving in effect came earlier in the year against Hull in those days.

Unfortunately in 1973, much to the protest of Skipper fans, Hull wished to keep playing Holbrook claiming they had developed a good rivalry with them while Cohasset suffered against Marshfield. Many townspeople, of course, suspected that Hull enjoyed beating Holbrook (at that time the doormat of the South Shore League) and were in fact running away from the real competition.

In 1973 the Skippers sparked off a rivalry with Duxbury. It started off slow, but under the tutelage of Coach Henderson the Skippers found their winning ways. The Skippers continued to win against Duxbury under Dennis Walsh for one year and then under the command of John Leone.



Two years ago, Cohasset finally got what it wanted and was reunited with longtime enemy Hull, as their Thanksgiving foe.

Under coach Phil Pisano and with the help of one particular standout, Bob Durkin, the Skippers have been victorious in the last two meetings. After a 34-7 trouncing of Bourne last Thursday the Skippers are in high gear.

"I think that the whole team was ready for the game the minute after the Bourne game was over," said co-captain and offensive tackle Adam Whitman. "All everyone said in the locker room after the game was, 'Hull'. It is definitely the biggest game of the year for us. Everyone is ready. We are going to try and stay in a pack. We are also going to try to be patient and obedient. If we don't we sometimes get jumpy. Hull is a strong team. It is going to be a tough game."

They are expecting nothing less than another victory in this years contest. The Mariner predicts a 12 point Cohasset victory.

Happy Thanksgiving Skipper fans!

Senior Derek Lacks, CHS fullback and noseguard, will help his team to victory against Hull this Thursday.

Sunday ban on field use gains support

By Bob Tis
Mariner staff

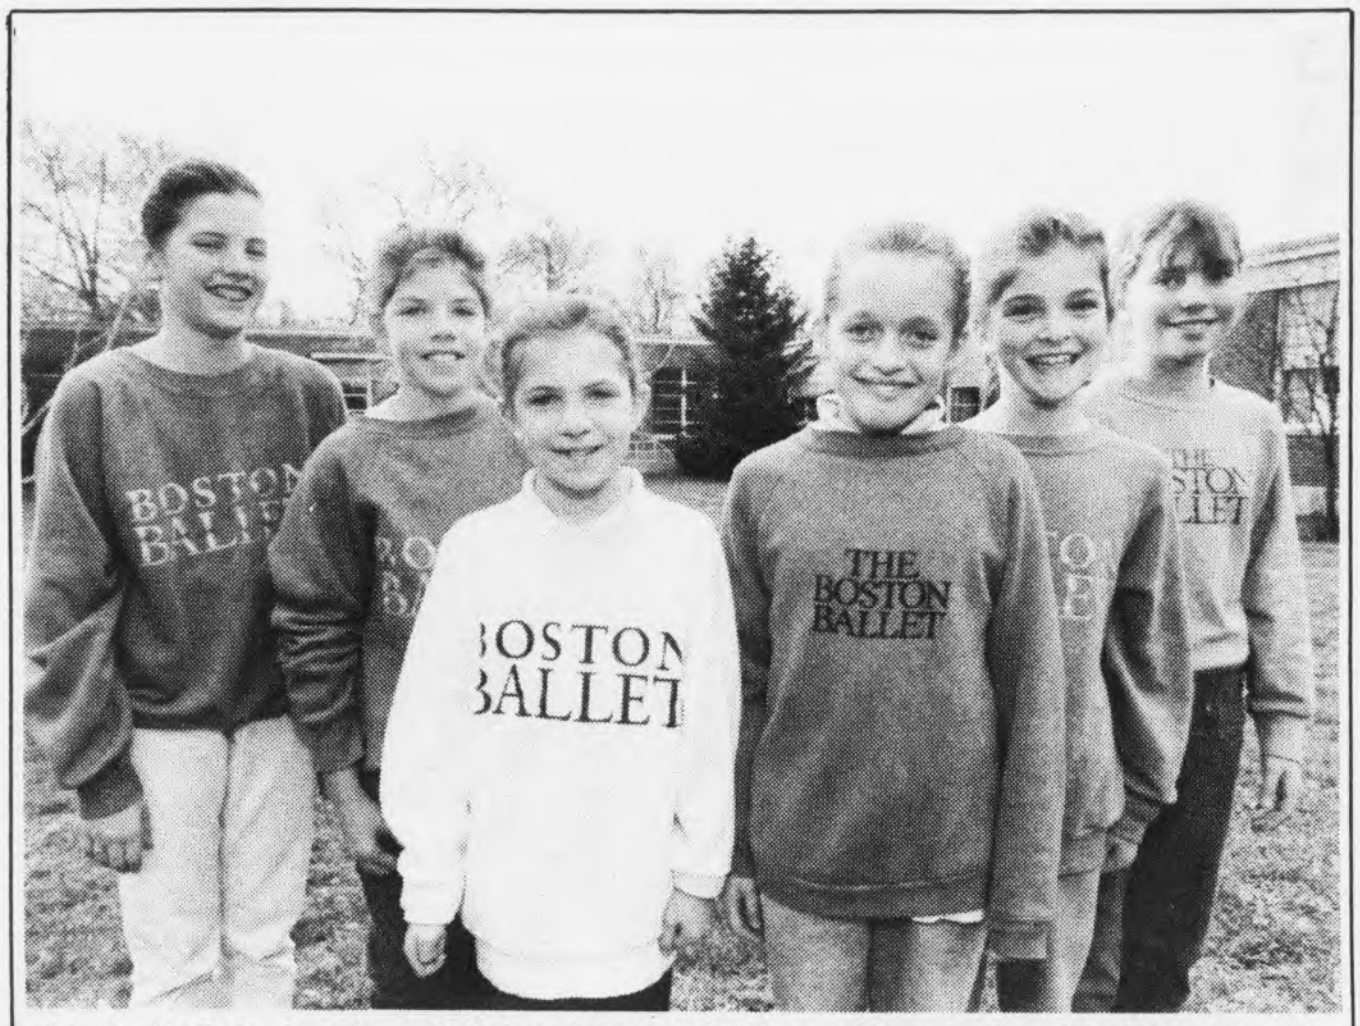
Although selectmen declined to make a formal vote on a resolution to prohibit the use of town-controlled property and fields until 1 p.m. on Sundays, local ministers were happy with their support.

Selectmen balked at voting on the resolution but decided informally to support the proposal.

"Let's get the word out," said selectman Cliff Mitman at the meeting, "that for anyone seeking a permit (for Sunday mornings) for property that we have control over, we will push hard not to issue that permit. For anyone that comes in here for a permit, we need to be convinced that the only time they can do this is Sunday morning."

The main voice of disaproval came from selectmen Martha Gjesteby who was concerned with the Constitutionality of the issue concerning violation of Church and State laws.

"I was moderately pleased," said Rev. Edward Atkinson of the First Parish Church. "They said that they would be considerate. They just didn't want to tie their hands. It would effect a huge number of people and it is a rigid policy. I think that they were very considerate."



Atkinson has not received a big response from townspeople.

"All of the response has been excellent," said Atkinson. "There has been no negative feedback."

Atkinson's plan calls for a complete ban on the permitted use of town fields and property by organizations and clubs.

"I hope this becomes a national movement," he explained to selectmen. "I am not here to to ask you to force people to attend church," he continued. "But I am talking about leaving families free to do whatever they please on Sundays."

While visions of sugarplums dance

Six ballerinas dream of Nutcracker roles

Just when most of us have finished devouring the remaining pieces of turkey, those visions of sugarplums have begun to appear.

No sooner have the drumsticks disappeared, when the familiar strains of Tchaikovsky's music is heard in the background. It is time for The Nutcracker.

For six ballerinas from Cohasset, that time will not arrive soon enough. Each year, hundreds of anxious girls and boys hold their breath and audition for the 234 available roles in the Boston Ballet's most famous production.

These six girls were lucky and talented enough to be selected as cast members this year. They are: Courtney Schultz, Karla Kennedy, Melissa Weier, Keeley Dwyer, Michelle Equi, and Alyssa Cross.

For them, the merry Yuletide season has arrived.

As they busily travel from Cohasset to Boston and back, there is little time to think about much else. Schoolwork suffers a bit, they admitted, as their schedules stretch to include homework, rehearsals and performances.

But the rewards are many for the young ballerinas as they reap a lifetime of memories in just a few weeks. As Courtney said, "once you get up on stage at the Wang Center, it looks like there are two million faces looking back at you."

Alyssa is a student at Hingham's Derby Academy. The remaining dancers are all schoolmates at Deer Hill. This year's performances are an encore for everyone but Keeley, 9, who is a fourth grade student.

When asked if she is nervous about her premiere performance, Keeley answered quickly. "No, not nervous. I feel fine."

Courtney, 11, is a soldier in The Nutcracker. She is joined by Melissa, 10, and Keeley. Karla, 11, a sixth grade student, was selected to portray "a Chinese," a prized role which demands her appearance in the first and second acts.

They are all students at the Boston Ballet and at the Ballet Workshop in Hingham, an auxiliary branch of the parent Boston company.

Karla has already begun her performances, with her debut last week in the company's Worcester production. Saturday was her last performance there, as she heads to the Boston stage. Her role as a Chinese dancer in Cast A begins Dec. 3 and ends Dec. 17. The remaining Cohasset dancers will appear on the Wang Center stage beginning Dec. 15 for 12 performances through Dec. 23.

Regarding last week's performances, Karla said, "I got out on stage, and really didn't remember anything I was supposed to do, but I did it. I felt blank."

Her friends agreed, recalling their hard work from last year. "Before, I used to go to the rehearsal stage in

Dog poisonings investigated

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

The dog officer is investigating reports that at least three dogs in the Summer and Elm streets area have been poisoned in the past week.

Dog Officer William Quigley is also investigating an incident which occurred Monday night on Summer Street when an opened package of hamburg meat was left at the front door of a couple who owns two dogs.

Paul Crimmins of 86 Summer Street said he was inside his home with his two Dobermen pinchers when he heard a noise in the driveway. When he opened his front door, there was "about two pounds of hamburger at my front door."

The Summer Street resident said Tuesday, "It was like finding a gun at your door. Imagine who could have done this. We're living in fear."

Last-second heroics steal crown from Skippers

The Cohasset High School soccer team must have suffered from a horrible sense of deja vu this week when, once again, last second heroics closed the road to the state championship right when the Skippers were about to cross the threshold.

At one point the Skippers were only one second away from the championship that eluded them last year versus the same opponent, Bromfield.

The Skippers, sporting an impressive 20-2-2 record this season, took the field at Worcester Poly Technical Institute with confidence. Dave Shultz opened up the scoring for the Skippers taking a feed from Ian Smart with only 1:57 expired in the game. Eleven minutes later, Smart capitalized on the rebound of a screaming shot on the Bromfield goaltender by Ned Chase, putting the Skippers up by two.

Nineteen seconds later, Bromfield managed to arrange a complete change of momentum. After winning the face off, Bromfield's notorious number 10, Matt Roupp, latched onto a pass and sent it flying into the Skipper net. Three minutes later, Roupp deposited an unassisted goal into the Skipper net to tie the score.

Before the half was over, however, Cohasset climbed back on their feet and Jim Reidy followed up on a Smart break and the Skippers went into the half with a one goal advantage. The year before the Skippers lost to Bromfield 3-2 in overtime. Things were looking up, however. Heads up ball control and cat-like reflexes from goalie Joel Reidy kept the Skippers in obvious control of the game.

The Skippers held the 3-2 lead that would have assured them of a state championship for 39 minutes and 59 seconds of the 40-minute second half. With one second left, Skipper victory plans were squashed when Bromfield's John Sciple put foot to ball in the midst of a massive confusion in front of the Skipper net and before anyone could say "I don't believe it," the game was in overtime.

Cohasset's week . . .

Volunteers sought

The board of health is currently seeking volunteers to serve on a watershed protection committee. A former committee has been inactive since April 1986 when a watershed protection act was passed by the state.

Board members are concerned that no immediate reaction plan is available in case of an emergency to our water supply.

"We are totally vulnerable," said William Baird. "There are no diversionary methods. We should be in a design phase. We need to tell the town what monies we need to protect our water supply."

"There are a number of places in the town where the town ought to be taking some periodic samples," added Baird.

The board is seeking a committee of four to six people.

Rotary fundraiser

The Cohasset Telephone Directory and Buyers Guide has been an ongoing scholarship fund project since 1947. Last year the proceeds allowed the Rotary to present over $18,000 in scholarship funds to Cohasset residents attending institutions of higher learning.

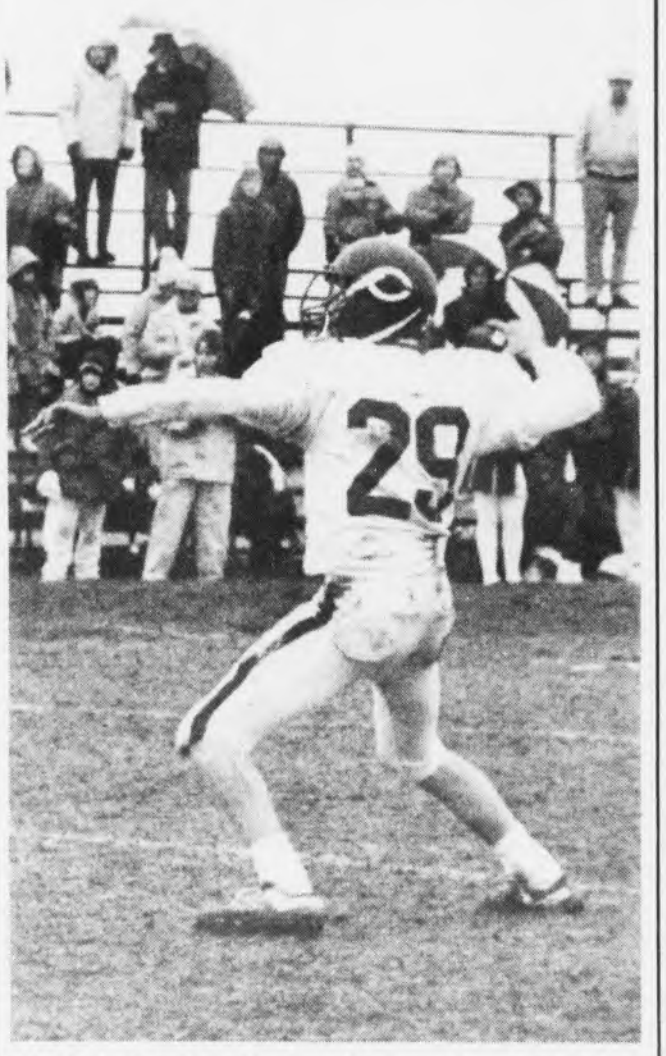
Donations and advertisments for next year's phone book may be sent to the Cohasset Rotary Club P.O.Box 36, Cohasset, Mass. 02025. An envelope is enclosed in this year's phone book for your convenience.

Income tax guides offered

U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds (D-MA) announced the availability of two new Internal Revenue Service (IRS) guides to recent changes in the federal income tax code.

"Many of the provisions of last year's Tax Reform Act are obscure or confusing," Studds said.

"The IRS has compiled two common-sense guides to help us all through the maze of changes. Each offers practical, condensed summaries, with clear charts and tables to compare and contrast the new and old laws," he said.



Congressman Studds said Publication 920 is designed to assist individual taxpayers, and Publication 921 addresses the tax needs of businesses.

The IRS booklets can be ordered by calling, toll-free, 1-(800) 424-3676. The guides can also be obtained by writing to: Forms Distribution Center, P.O. Box 25866, Richmond, VA 23260.

Clergymen pleased . . .

Atkinson told the Mariner that all eight members of local clergy support his resolution.

"The last thing that I want to do is ask a kid to choose between football and going to church. It is not fair. It is not fair to ask the child to have to choose," said Atkinson. "I don't schedule church services on the night of town meeting," Atkinson joked.

Atkinson is seriously considering opening up this resolution to a national scale.

"We thought going to the selectmen would be a good first step. I am still studying the issue."

Atkinson has contacted clergy in Hingham and Scituate and found them to be quite receptive to his ideas. He is considering working with local congressmen to make this into a national issue.

Atkinson and other representatives from local clergy will meet with the school committee on Dec. 7, at 7:30 p.m.

"I think that the meeting with the school committee will be every bit as important as the meeting with selectmen," said Atkinson. "They are one of the biggest offenders. I have spoken with Superintendent Hart and he has been quite receptive. But already I feel that there are a few things that are not quite to our satisfaction. It should be an interesting meeting."

Atkinson also said that he hopes that the school committtee will go on record voting for a specific policy.

The Reverend Cliff Cutler was also pleased with the selectmen's position.

"I think that my main concern is for families. I feel that there should be some unscheduled time for families to get together. We have to watch the calender and leave some time to be together. We have been overscheduling," said Cutler.

"I thought the selectmen were receptive. I also thought that the remarks made later by Charle DeSantis of the soccer league were encouraging," added Cutler referring to DeSantis's promise to try to end Sunday morning scheduling in the Cohasset soccer league.

Cutler played down a possible church attendance bias toward the resolution on the part of the local clergy.

"I would just like to see families choose to spend time together, whether they go out and kick the ball around or what. There has to be a balance between work and rest. I think that we have lost a senseof rest in the world today. When there is no balance life gets chaotic," said Cutler. "When you lose that balance, and I must say I think we have lost it, you hurt yourself. You damage yourself as a community as well."

Rev. Gary Ritts of the Second Congregational Church was somewhat disappointed that selectmen neglected to take a vote on the issue.

"I was disappointed but it appears that we might have gotten further than we expected," said Ritts. "It was helpful in raising some consciousness," added Ritts.

Ritts explained that his group was intentionally staying away from the religious aspect of the issue and concentrating on family time.

"It was a good first step going to the selectmen. It makes us realize that this might be the reaction we are going to get in the future," said Ritts. "Our position would be one day clear," said Ritts who explained the clergy members did not want to discriminate against residents of the Jewish faith.

Ritts plans on meeting with Larry Shultz president of the Cohasset soccer league to discuss possible termination of Sunday morning practices.

"They have been pretty good about it," said Ritts who explained that they sometimes hold practices in an indoor facility in Weymouth on Sunday mornings.

"I am sure that the place is highly booked," said Ritts.

Looking Good is Easy

As landfill tests continue, residents grow impatient

By Bob Tis
Mariner staff

The battle continues.

The board of health once again has found itself between a rock and a hard place as far as the Cohasset Heights landfill is concerned.

On one side is a small group of residents who have stacks of documentation and direct evidence that the landfill is polluting the watershed area. The noxious smell emanating from the landfill between 3 a.m. and 6 a.m. is not just a figment of the imagination for late night travelers on Rte. 3A. The Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) has determined that the odors frequently smelled along 3A do originate from the landfill.

Although the tests were not conducted when the odors were being detected the DEQE discovered that several compounds exceeded acceptable limits, including benzene, toluene, trichlorethylene and tetrachlorethylene. All chemicals you definitely don't want to see in your breakfast cereal.

The board of health is sympathetic.

On the other hand the board has been tied into legal knots.

Pressed into the subject of closing the landfill at Monday night's meeting board of health chairman John Burns told the audience, "We need more justification. We have previously lost court cases. You are drifting away from the topic at hand and I am not going to permit it."

"We have already been sued," said board member William Baird. "The previous board has been sued and had to recant everything that they did. We are not going to go through this again. I think (atty. Micheal) Leon is doing a good job. We have a good attorney and two task forces working on this. We are doing the best we can."

Monday night's discussion focused on the ongoing testing for damage to the watershed which is presently being performed. Engineers for the town (CDM) are investigating fractures in rock which might provide a direct pipeline from the landfill into the town's water supply. Another town-hired engineer (HMM) suggested a method in which a diamond core drill would bring out sections of rock that could be examined for fractures. CDM's method is a little more direct, simply drilling down and testing for water every twenty feet or so.

"What CDM is doing will accomplish everything we need to know," said Baird.

"If you went with the diamond core you could still pump for water every twenty feet," added Peter Whitemore a local environmentalist.

The board decided to go with the original opinion of CDM. They did confirm, however, that they will continue to employ HMM for other testing.

"If there is a potential for the rock to bear water we are going to do more," said Burns. "If we find water below 20 or 30 feet, then we can be reasonably sure there is a connection. First we want to find out if there are cracks in the rock and next if the water in them is contaminated. What we have decided to do is to get this testing behind us as soon as possible."

Burns refused to answer what he admitted was the "begging question." Will the board close the dump if contaminated water is being leaked into the water supply?

"I don't want to answer that," said Burns attempting to explain the position that the board has been forced into. "If you start to theorize and make hypothetical situations you weaken the position of the board."

As tests continue, aimed at gathering more information to determine the health questions at Cohasset Heights Landfill, some local residents become impatient with what they conceive to be an ecological time bomb.

"Every test leads to two more tests, with two more sets of results and two more engineering firms," said Whitemore.

Residents at Monday's meeting were also concerned that this next round of studies will only lead to the next round of lawsuits. Residents also assert that board members have had legal advice against making any public statements, thus leaving many residents completely in the dark.

"Lawyers aren't supposed to be governing the town," said Whitemore.

"I think it is important that the town's attorney pursue it more aggressively," said David Bigley. Their attorney (the landfill's) has certainly been very aggressive in keeping the dump open.

"Frankly I am not surprised," said Baird referring to the findings by the DEQE representative. "The vapor given off is heavier than air. It can flow down that hill like it is water," said Baird comparing the vapors to the chemical effect that dry ice produces.

Baird has a photo ionization machine that can test the air for chemicals. According to Baird, however, the machine takes in a total organic sample but cannot test specifically for benzene or the other gases. Baird added that if residents smell noxious fumes coming from the landfill they can contact the fire department.

Order winter bird seed by Dec. 4

Part of the fun of birdfeeding is noticing the variety of birds that visit the area. Do you know the types of birds you are seeing? With the aid of a good bird guide book, birds can be identified through their size, shape, color and feeding habits.

The shape and size of beaks and claws help determine the kinds of foods they eat. Some birds, such as the chickadee, hold the seed between their feet and peck at the shell until they can eat the meat inside. Others, including the grosbeak and cardinal, simply crack open the shell with their large strong beaks. Nuthatch fly to a tree, tuck the seed under the loose bark and hammer it open. Some birds eat at the feeder, others, such as junco, eat on the ground. By offering a variety of food, more types of birds will appear. Remember to offer water daily.

South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell is holding its winter bird seed sale. Pre-order by Friday, Dec. 4; pick up on Dec. 12 and 13. Credit card orders may be placed by phone, or order in person during the hours below.

Seed offered includes Black Oil Sunflower (25 lb./$7.80); Striped Sunflower (25 lb/$8.70; 50 lb/$16); Regular Mixed Seed (25 lb/$5.45; 50 lb/10.25); Special Mixed Seed (20 lb/$5.80; 40 lb/$11); Cracked Corn (25 lb/$3.95); Sunflower Hearts (25 lb/$16); Thistle (10 lb/$11.95).

South Shore Natural Science Center is on Jacobs Lane in Norwell, just off Route 123 and less than a mile from the Hanover/Rte. 3 interchange (exit 13).

Bromfield repeats as champions . . .

"It was a great game," said Magner. "It went back and forth. I think it was a case where we packed it in early."

"You can't do that against Bromfield," continued Magner, referring to a Skipper tendency to sit on the lead and play defensively. "You just can't pack it in in any sport, at any time. We tried to sit on it and that is what happened."

"It was a great effort by both teams," said Magner, who had no remorse about any of the last minute goals. "All the goals were fine goals."

"There is no question about it," added Magner. "It was a heartbreaker.'

It was also a tough way for this Skipper team to end their season. Many individual records were set. The 20-2-2 mark is the best team record by a Skipper soccer team. This team also scored more goals, 97, than any previous Skipper club. They also racked up an amazing eleven shut-outs behind spectacular defensive performances from Jim Gallagher, John Linsley, Ned Chase and Joel Reidy. Stand out performances were noted by Jay Marsac and Brian and Dan Pompeo.

Cohasset regrouped after words from coach Dan Magner and once again took control of the game. Both teams, noticeably worn from the intensity of this match, used skill and experience to their advantage. Cohasset struck first. Taking advantage of a penalty situation, Todd Fitzpatrick was able to power the old pelota past the Bromfield goaltender on a feed from Dave Shultz.

It looked like another sure win situation for the Skippers. Another penalty situation occurred this time in Bromfield's favor. Unfortunately , with two seconds left to play in overtime, guess who, number 10, Matt Roupp, fired a strong shot from 10 yards out past Joel Reidy.

The second overtime period pitted two worn but determined veteran fighters against each other. Each one refusing to quit, entirely intent on going the distance, despite the anguish. Six minutes went by and the score remained locked at four.

The third overtime was much the same. Two minutes into the final overtime, there he was again, Matt Roupp, brutally applying the final blows that sent the Skippers flying to the canvas with his fourth goal of the day.

Ninth graders examine choices at special program

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Armed with a fortune cookie and a key to success, some ninth grade students this week learned how they can make a brighter future for themselves.

It was all part of a special program presented for two days by New England Telephone. "Choices" is the corporate world's response to the alarming increase in high school dropouts and declining test scores by the future workforce.

Tuesday and Wednesday morning, Bob Joy, assistant staff manager for the company, led a ninth grade through discussions and exercises designed to motivate students to continue their education. "We try to explain to the kids that there is value in staying in school, by using self-discipline and time management, they learn they have control over their lives," he said, noting that a business professional may bring a unique perspective to the student, rather than a teacher or parent.

Joy quickly introduced himself to the class Tuesday morning, explaining to the students he was not a teacher. Over the past 23 years, he has risen through the ranks of NETel, first as a repair man, now as a member of the management team.

"The business community is concerned with the quality of employees coming out of school now," he explained to the students, emphasizing that they have choices to make for their future.

He began the hour-long session Tuesday morning with a quote from Eleanor Roosevelt. "The choices we make are ultimately our responsibility." Joy explained that although others may suggest things to you, it is the individual who makes the ultimate decision for himself. "You're responsible for that," he said, and the benefits may be good or bad.

He then handed fortune cookies to each of the students which contained special written notes inside. Among the one-word inscriptions were: family, health, education, appearance, school, success, goals, size, attitude, friends, etc.

The class divided into three groups and discussed the messages. They were asked if they had control over the messages contained in the cookies. After writing down the list of words, the students agreed they had control over 18 of the 28 factors in their lives. Things such as religion, family, heritage could not be changed or controlled. But the students agreed any individual can alter his appearance, his self-esteem, and his self discipline.

"Did you realize you had that much control over your life?" Joy asked. "There are a lot of things you can do to control your future."

Among the most important driving forces in one's life, the students said, were education, health, parents and motivation. Joy said self discipline is also ranked among life's compelling forces. "Controlling yourself, not to do bad things - doing what has to be done when it has to be done. That's self discipline," he explained, noting there are times, even now in his professional life when he has procrastinated and completed a project too late.

Showing the students a 'decision table' chart, Joy explained that each day everyone must make decisions which affect their lives. The more you say no, and the more negative responses you give, "eventually you won't like yourself. You will need to change," he said. "And to change that self discipline will not happen overnight.

"There is no such thing as a bad kid," he said. "There are just bad habits we get into. The more we say no to these decisions, the easier it gets."

The telephone company executive then handed out a paper which had two clocks on it. The students were told to calculate the number of hours they spend in school, doing chores, sleeping and doing homework. The number of hours were added for an entire week. the results amazed the students.

In one week, the students averaged about 68 hours of free time. That is the time they do not devote to school, homework or sleeping. "That's all kinds of time you have for yourself," he told the class.

When the individual students calculated their free time, numbers like 86 hours, 81 hours and 56 hours per week were heard.

"Whatever you want to do with your time is your decision, and what is good for you. We all waste time, and we all use it differently," Joy explained. "But time is valuable and we don't want to waste it. Trying to fit something into your schedule is not always easy. And in the business world, you don't like everything you have to do, but you do it.

"Think about what you can do in your free time, because you can do it. Use your time wisely. Don't you think there is more time you could use to do your homework?"

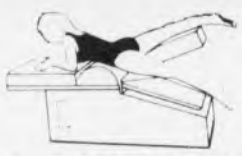
Joy explained he is a "Choices" volunteer - noting that when he returns to his desk in Boston, "there are still papers in the 'in' box I have to do. But this is really rewarding. If we can get one kid to listen, to understand how important it is to have a good education, then it's really worth my time.

"I don't want to see these kids limiting themselves by limiting their education," he said, adding that he finds his success at the telephone company, "very rewarding."

At the conclusion of the two-day session, the students are sent away with an official key to their success. "By the ninth grade, these students have realized there are choices to make. And those choices will make a difference in their future," he noted.

First Parish concert

The Annual Christmas Concert at First Parish in Cohasset will be held Sunday, Dec. 13, at 4 p.m. in the Meeting House on the Common.



The concert will feature the Unicorn Singers, a chamber orchestra and soloists under the direction of Margo Euler. They will perform "Utrecht Jubilate" by Handel, Bach's Cantata No. 61, "Nun Komn Der Heiden Heiland" and some carols for all to sing.

The beneficiary of the concert this year will be the South Shore Habitat for Humanity, a non-profit housing ministry. Patrons will receive 2 tickets for a gift of $30.00; tickets are $3 available in advance through the church office or may be purchased at the concert.

PANIC/ANXIETY DISORDERS

There exists a devastating anxiety condition known popularly as Panic Disorder. This condition has proved to be terribly disabling. Without warning, or in the presence of feared situations and settings, individuals are overwhelmed with feelings of severe anxiety, dread, panic, fears of death, spells of dizziness, and disorientation. Other symptoms include heart palpitations, tingling or numbness to the hands or feet, ringing in the ears, and a feeling that one is losing control, and even going "crazy".

If untreated, Panic Disorder yields to agoraphobia which finds people housebound, too afraid to leave their homes.

What is often confusing about Panic Disorder is that the person presents with both physical and psychological symptoms. Thus people who suffer from these symptoms tend to go from doctor to doctor to be examined for every possible disease, finding that they are in good physical health.

Often such people are labeled as hypochondriacs by the clinician, and their families. The fact is, they suffer from endogenous anxiety, a condition which has a strong biological component, and an equally profound psychological profile.

Having successfully treated many such patients, I am pleased to report that effective treatment is available. While each patient is treated individually and specifically to his/her condition, the usual course of treatment consists of counseling/psychotherapy designed to precisely address the disorder; as well as the administration of medication, when necessary, in conjunction with a physician who is knowledgeable about such medication.

Anxiety represents a usual and expected response to stressful situations, new situations, and the unknown. If the level of anxiety is excessive, however, relative to the situation, this is a signal that something is wrong.

Heightened levels of anxiety or panic are not only terribly painful emotionally, but can, if chronic, contribute to physical illness such as cardiovascular disease.

Similarly, individuals with chronic disorders such as colitis, diabetes, heart disease, migraines, and hypertension can become extremely anxious, even panicked, regarding their physical condition.

As a psychotherapist in private practice, I have come to specialize in a relatively new area of mental health called Behavorial Medicine. It includes the treatment of major and minor anxiety disorders, panic disorders, phobias, emotional components of physical disease, eating disorders, addictive disorders, stress and its physical and emotional components, sleep disorders, and depression.

☐ George L. Marlette of Cohasset, a third year student at New England School of Law in Boston, recently joined the staff of the New England Law Review. He is in the process of authoring an article for the scholarly legal periodical, published four times each year by students of the law school.

Marlette is the son of Ellen J. Marlette of Rustic Drive, Cohasset, and is a 1979 graduate of the Holderness School in Plymouth, New Hampshire. He earned his bachelor's degree from Gettysburg College in 1983.

As a law student, Marlette has earned Dean's List grades and recognition as a New England Scholar. He received a book award from the American Jurisprudence Publishing Company during his second year of study when he was named the top student in his Evidence class.

Marlette is working part-time for the Brockton law firm of Keith, Reed, Wheatley and Frenette while in school. He expects to receive his Juris Doctor degree next May and plans to sit for the Massachusetts bar exam next summer.

☐ Congratulations are in order for Wendy Thayre, daughter of Fred and Maureen Thayre! Wendy is now a lawyer, something she sure has worked long and hard to achieve. Has a nice ring to it, Attorney Thayre. . .

☐ Dorothy Bates was missed around town this weekend, but she didn't miss our town! She spent Thanksgiving down south with her daughter Rachel and her family. Here's hoping that the weather down there was a little better for the football game than it was in freezing Hull. We are sure to get a full report upon Mrs. Bates return.

☐ School enrollment may be down for the immediate future, but we sure can report that it will be going up shortly. Three little girls were born in Cohasset during the month of November! On November 6th Nancy and William J. O'Hara had a baby girl, on November 8th Susan Palladino and Edwin Brown also had a girl, and on November 11th Karen and Paul Laugelle had a girl. Before we know it they'll all be in the same kindergarden class!

☐ This is the weekend to do your Christmas shopping, and it can all be done right in Cohasset. The Village Fair begins at 10:00 (held on the Common, the Community Center and in the Second Congregational Church and Unitarian Parish House. The Beechwood Congregational Church is holding its annual Snowflake Fair on Saturday too. Both fairs are guaranteed to be lots of fun for young and old, with tons of treasures for you to purchase at reasonable prices. All kinds of goodies too (be sure to try the Beechwood glass candy), and the chowders cannot be beaten. The ladies involved in these fairs have been working long and hard to make them a success, do your part and support them. It will be worth your while.

☐ Jennifer Meehan has her own special red ribbon in time for Christmas, and she got it the hard way . . . "She earned it". Jennifer won the ribbon in the YMCA Swim Meet and it was her first red ribbon (we'll bet its the first of many). She isn't even six years old yet, can you imagine what we will be reading about her when she gets older? She takes ballet lessons, wants to play soccer and basketball on the days that she is free . . . she is sure to be a star!

Instructor Claire Gurnett goes through physical therapy with Mr. Tolarico at the Community Center's exercise session for the physically disabled.

☐ Helene Lieb and Ed Lappen proudly announce the birth of their daughter, Mia Dawn Lieb-Lappen, who was born on Nov. 1st at Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston.

☐ The only good thing about Margaret Dillon retiring as the art center director is that now she will have the time to devote to making artistic things of her own! We hope that we will be able to see her artwork. Perhaps she will enter into the art shows! Margaret deserves a standing ovation for all of the time and effort that she devoted to the Art Center! And, having the members' gallery named in her honor is a grand tribute to a fine lady.

☐ Congratulations to the football team's Thanksgiving Day win over Hull. They certainly worked hard to earn victory, and CHS gets the trophy for another year. Sorry to report that the "older" team didn't fare so well, they lost to Hull last Saturday. In spite of the loss, and a few key injuries, a good time was had by all.

☐ Hats off to Robert A. Leonard of Bancroft Road, who was recently inducted into the Massachusetts Voter Hall of Fame. Mr. Leonard has voted for more than 50 consecutive years!

Happy twentieth birthday to Laura Pompeo. Here's to a great year for you, Laura, and may all your wishes come true.

☐ Don't forget to attend the production of the Wizard of Oz this weekend. Amanda Sweeney is said to be superb in the role of Dorothy, and all of the other roles are well-played also. The show goes on December 4th-6th.Surely you are free one of those nights!

☐ Although they didn't win it all, we can't call them losers by any means! The CHS soccer team gave all they had against Bromfield, and lost with one second left on the clock. The boys and their coach did a super job and are to be commended for their efforts. They are champs in the eyes of the townspeople, we are proud of you all.

☐ This weekend is sure to be a full one for all, but take time to call me with your news.

We have some great 'horse' news to share with you.

☐ Brooke Sheerin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Sheerin, received recent honors from area horsemens' councils. Brooke and her pony Just Another Gypsy, called Happy, will be presented with Championships in Pony Hunter and Equitation from the South Shore Horsemens Council. Brooke and Happy competed in a series of shows sponsered by the Council to accumulate points. Brooke has also been notified of winning the Champion Pony Hunter and Reserve Champion in Equitation for the Mass. Horsemen's Council.

The dynamic pair have also been informed of awards in Equitation and Pony Hunter from the South East Hunter Association where they placed fourth after competing in over 20 shows. In addition, Brooke and Happy, although not officially recognized, placed sixth in New England in Medium Pony Hunter and Equitation 11 and under.

Brooke and Happy are trained at River Wind Farm in Pembroke by Carl Catani. They have worked and traveled New England together for the past three years.

And Abigail Adams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William recently competed in several prestigious, national equestrian events.

Abby was invited to participate in the USET Young Riders Trial at the team headquarters in Gladstone, New Jersey, Abby competed and won USET events during 1987 to achieve this honor. Although she was not a finalist, Abby did place as high as 30th in 2 days of events.

Abby and her horse Waltzing Wave also qualified for and competed in the AHSA Hunt Seat Medal Finals and the ASPCA Maclay Medal Regionals. These events required winning three blue ribbons each during 1987. No small task when riding against 30+ riders for the honor of a blue ribbon!

On a local level, the pair finished in the top twenty at the New England Horsemens Council Medal Finals held at Mt. Holyoke. In addition, Abby and Wave were just awarded the Reserve Champion Award for South East Hunter Association in Junior Hunters. And, they will receive honors from the American Horse Show Assoc. for placing 4th in Junior Hunters in Zone I.

Abby is already headed for another stellar year with her trainer, Carl Catani of River Wind Farm. She has already qualified for the 1988 ASPCA Maclay by achieving her three wins in just over two months.

Catani said, "Abby makes a pretty and effective picture on Wave. She's a very dedicated rider-always practicing. We hope to qualify her on a national level in the Junior Hunters as well as equitation.

"And, we're going for either a bronze or silver USET Medal. With some riders I'd be afraid to say that. Abby is a sure shot!"

Individual decision

A few weeks ago, a controversial subject was raised by the clergymen of Cohasset. They proposed that town officials ban the use of town fields and property on Sunday mornings.

Selectmen did not heartily agree with the request, although at least one supported the proposition in principle. No vote was taken when the matter was brought before selectmen, although the board agreed they would discourage persons from requesting permission to use town property on Sunday mornings, ie. the town common.

Rev. Edward Atkinson and his peers argued that Sunday morning is the only time left to spend with their families. Free time in the weekday is nonexistent, they said, and families need at least a few hours to communicate the week's events, to worship together, or to attend a family function.

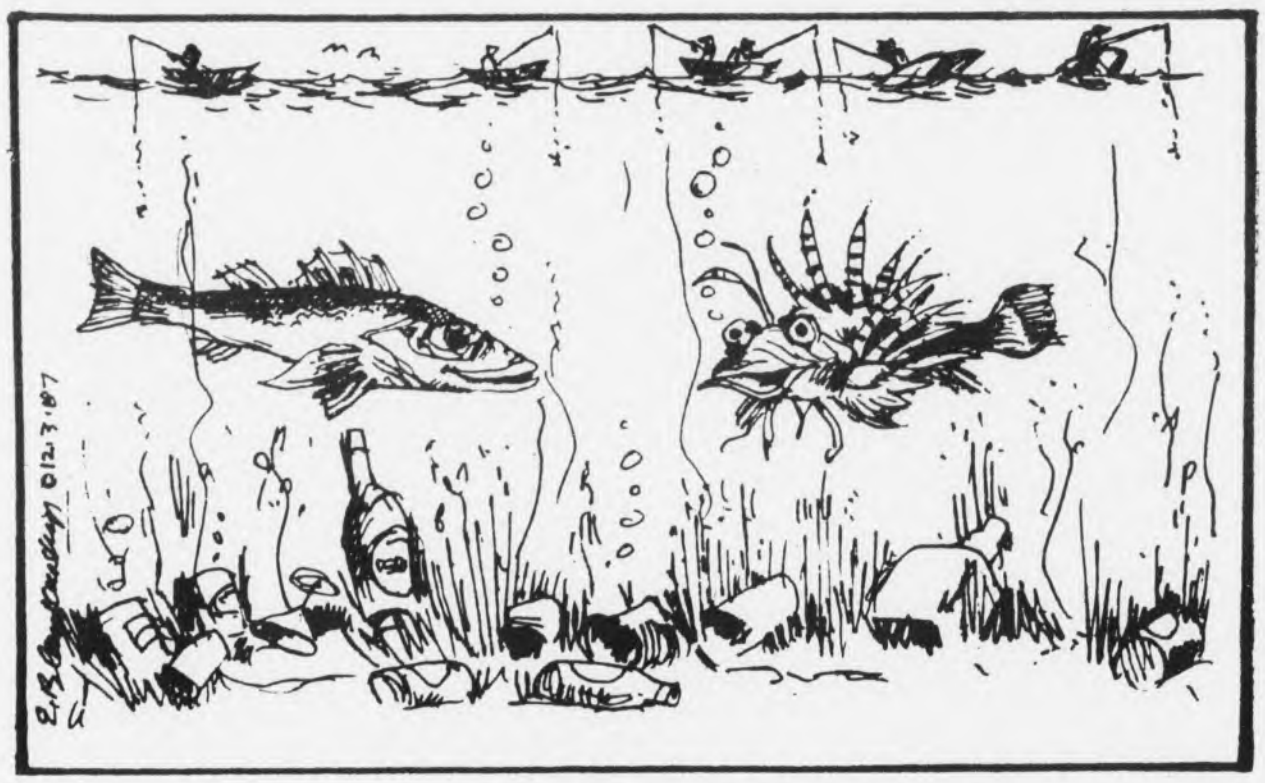
The clergymen emphasized their proposal was not a ploy to draw more people into their services or to Mass. They told selectmen it was an individual's decision to choose how they spend their free time - the important thing is that the time should be free from commitments that would separate family members.

Sports, they argued, are the main reasons children are severed from the remaining family members on a Sunday morning. The fields in Cohasset are in full use on the Sabbath, they said, and this should cease. A child should not have to make the choice between worshipping with his family or fighting for a league championship.

It's a difficult proposal. There is certainly merit in keeping holy the Sabbath day, although that day is not the same for all people living in Cohasset. Jewish people observe a Saturday Sabbath, while many Catholic families enjoy a family Mass on Saturday evenings.

And many people would argue that the only time they truly have to spend with their entire family is while watching a son or daughter on the soccer or football field.

And yet, in these days of two or three-income families, we do not have enough time together. The days when Dad came home for dinner to sit down with the entire family are gone. Now, most families rush through separate dinners as if they are in a cafeteria line. There is little communication over the dining table.



The concept is a good one, most would agree. Being together with the family, enjoying each other's company, talking for at least a few hours while the rest of the world speeds by, is an admirable achievement.

But for our clergymen to make this an official request by town officials is a step too far in a well- deserved direction. The pulpit rightfully belongs inside their church - and not within our town hall.

This proposition should be brought before the congregations of Cohasset. Families should discuss the proposal and make an individual commitment to spend more time with each other. It is an idea worth considering, and we hope many families take up the challenge.

But there is no reason for our elected officials, selectmen or the school committee, to voice a public opinion on a concept that is clearly personal.

NEWS ITEM — Cohasset: Selectmen vote opposition to state move promoting boating and fishing on the town's reservoir in the Wompatuck State Park. Unanimous vote in opposition prompted by concern over pollution threat. 'We're just trying to protect the water for Cohasset,' says selectman. Fear boaters dumping beer cans and more, in the waters

"...Sure, the litter's on the upscale side, Dom Perignon, Chivas Regal... but would you believe I used to be a perch...?"

Moderator: vote followed procedure

To the Editor,

I am the Cohasset Town Moderator and am writing in response to the editorial in the November 19 issue of the Mariner on the recent Town Meeting vote to renovate the Police and Fire Station.

For your information and that of your readers, Cohasset has a By-law governing the conduct of Town Meetings, which contains provisions relating to voting at town Meetings. However, there is nothing in the By-law specifically covering the situation which occurred at Special Town Meeting on October 27, when the initial vote on the Police and Fire Station renovation was 160 - 81 (2/3 being required).

The By-law also provides, however, that in parliamentary matters generally, the handbook "Town Meeting Time: Practical Handbook of Parliamentary Law" shall govern the proceedings of Town Meetings in matters not specifically covered by the By-law itself. "Town Meeting Time" clearly provides that the Moderator is under no obligation to declare a vote on a particular question before a Town Meeting if he is in doubt as to the vote. In such circumstances, the Moderator can order that a new vote be taken. Once the vote has been taken, the counted vote as declared by the Moderator may not be questioned.

The initial vote on the Police and Fire Station issue was so close as to call into question the accuracy of the count. I discussed the matter at the time with Town Counsel to determine the proper course of action. In view of the doubt surrounding the vote, I decided that the only sensible thing to do was to have a second vote on the question. The second vote resulted in a vote of 166 in favor to 77 opposed, more than the 2/3 needed for passage.

I feel very strongly that as Moderator, I acted in this instance consistently with the powers accorded Moderators under Massachusetts laws to conduct Town Meetings.

William D. Weeks
Cohasset Town Moderator

Larger agenda behind day of rest?

To the Editor:

I read the front page article in November nineteenth's Cohasset Mariner regarding the establishment of an official day of rest with a certain degree of alarm. Being a Sabbath observer myself (my day of rest is on Saturday) I agree in principle with a day of rest. I am also wholly in agreement with the idea that town sponsored activities should not directly interfere with local worship services.

It is clear from the article however that there is larger agenda behind this issue. The concepts of this becoming a "national movement", of Cohasset being a "pioneer," the express threat of "an expensive political action" leave no doubt in the mind of this reader as to what is being considered here.

The logical extension of such a policy might be the closing of the beach and the harbor on Sundays as well, Selectman Gjesteby's concern that such a practice might be unconstitutional is well raised.

We in America are lucky to live in a land where freedom of religion is guaranteed by our constitution. The doctrine of separation of church and state stands squarely against the establishment of a state religion. The selectmen need to give this seemingly innocent request careful consideration lest we all become embroiled in a potentially "expensive political" and possible legal action.

Donations support Sandy Beach efforts

To the Editor:

Sandy Beach, Cohasset, had a very successful 1987 season and has received many good reports from beach-goers that the beach was clean and well-managed.

The association that runs the Beach spent considerable money this year to attract an adequate number of lifeguards and maintenance people. In addition, almost $6,000.00 was spent on heavy equipment to clean the beach of winter storm ravages and then again after a big July storm.

Sandy Beach is not supported by the Town or by money paid by townspeople for parking stickers. The cost of employees, beach cleaning, safety equipment and supplies, insurance and utilities, are borne largely by contributions solicited from 2,600 households in Cohasset. Last year about 18% of these households helped to support the Beach.

To those of you who have supported the association this year, we are grateful. If you have not yet made your contribution there is still time to send your tax deductible contribution to - Treasurer, S.B.A., Cohasset, MA 02025, before year-end and help reduce our current year's operating deficit.

The beach is a fine recreation resource for Cohasset and we want to continue to make it a clean and safe facility in future years for your enjoyment.

The Trustees,
Sandy Beach Association

QUALITY AUDITING CAC MARK OF INTEGRITY

Creations for everyone at Dec. 5 Village Fair

The 47th annual Cohasset Village Fair will greet throngs of holiday shoppers Saturday morning, Dec. 5 at 10 a.m. with more than 20 popular attractions.

From the opening until the 3 p.m. closing, a parade of shoppers will make their way through the offerings in the Town Hall, the Congregational Church, the Unitarian Parish House, St. Stephen's Church and on the Common itself, to sample the many familiar features of this long-established benefit operation.

Helping them to know about "specials," to guide them to attractions such as the Secret Room for children shoppers in St. Stephen's Church on the rock, and to urge them to buy raffle tickets before it is too late. There will be a bell-ringing Town Crier (Nicholas Manganaro) masquerading as a Snowman. He will guide children shoppers into St. Stephen's Church, and warn everyone to purchase raffle tickets before it's too late.

One exception to the 10 a.m. starting time this year will be an advance sale of wreaths Thursday and Friday from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the Congregational Church, where workers will be putting the finishing touches on these traditional holiday decorations. Faced with the possibility of cold weather for their outdoor wreath sales Saturday, the committee opted for a limited advance sale.

Standard fair features in the Town Hall will be the sale of hand-crafted gifts, novelties, children's clothing, plants, cheeses, grabs, popcorn and the ever popular Snack Bar. There, too, will be ticket sales for the raffle, offering chances on many attractive prizes headed by a color TV set.

Next door in the Congregational Church, there will be tables piled high with home-made cakes, breads, pies, pastries, cookies and candy, as well as appealing Greek delicacies provided by the participating Greek Orthodox Church. Also in the Congregational Church will be the luncheon Chowder Bar.

Across the Common, in the Unitarian Parish House, a wealth of used but useful articles and hundreds of books will fill Trueblood Hall for bargain hunters. In St. Stephen's Church on the rock, youngsters will find their own special Christmas shopping arrangements in the Secret Room, where admission is limited to those under 12, and gift articles for their parents will be offered at reasonable prices . . . and gift-wrapped ready for the tree.

On the Common itself, Santa Claus, in his sleigh and evergreen bower, will be welcoming children beginning about 10:45, while nearby a Clown will be filling and selling helium balloons and teen-agers will be organizing children's activities such as face-painting to occupy tots while their parents shop.

The Fair will close in the evening at the Village Fair Dinner in St. Stephen's Church, featuring a gourmet menu by Carmine. Tickets at $12.50 are being sold by representatives in the individual churches.

Co-Chairs of the Central Committee organizing the Fair are Kathy Pratt, Lou Simeone and Kathy Brennock of St. Anthony's Church which has the leadership role this year in a rotation with the other four participating churches: Congregational, Unitarian, Episcopal and Greek Orthodox.

The organizers cite the cooperation they have had from scores of parishioners, beginning with the other representatives from the individual churches to the Central Committee that included Linda Campbell and Debbie Anderson, Congregational; Gail and Bill Bell, Unitarian; Jean Syrmopoulos and Helena Panesis, Greek Orthodox; Shiela Wallingford and Donna Blain, St. Stephen's; Lisa Smith, Secretary, and Jane Hamilton, Treasurer.

Wizard of Oz appears at CHS

Amanda Sweeney sings a smashing "Somewhere Over the Rainbow" as Dorothy during the CHS musical "Wizard of Oz." The musical will be presented Friday and Saturday at 7:30 p.m., and Sunday at 2 p.m. at the high school.

The cast of "The Wizard of Oz" is getting rave reviews prior to the opening of Friday night's production. Here rehearsing their scenes are: Derek Lacks, the Lion; Amanda Sweeney, Dorothy; Doug Moe, Tinman; and Peter Kasperowicz, Scarecrow. (Photos by Kym Marcella)

Neighbors discuss ways to make schools the best

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Like a conversation between friends, neighbors met Monday night to share the good and bad news about Cohasset schools.

A first-of-its kind educational forum brought together administrators, teachers, and parents to discuss their concerns and goals for the Cohasset schools.

Participants in the planning session urged Supt. Stephen Hart to schedule additional public forums in the future.

Among the concerns expressed by the participants were the need to better maintain school facilities, and methods necessary to improve communication between the schools and the majority of residents who do not have children in the system.

As Supt. Hart explained, these discussions held Monday night in the high school cafeteria will be a starting point for a more defined strategic planning committee. He envisioned a 15-member committee comprised of administrators, teachers, students and parents, meeting to discuss specific goals for the system.

The 50 parents, teachers and administrators who attended this first session were divided into three smaller groups. In the individual groups, led by one administrator, they shared their thoughts about Cohasset schools. Praise and concerns for the system were shared equally among the participants.

In one group, led by Cohasset High School Principal Mary Ellen Gallagher, a variety of topics were discussed. Among the residents' primary concerns was a need to better maintain our schools and school property.

Richard Silvia, a member of the school facilities committee for the past six years, talked about the responsibility of that group. It is an independent committee which was appointed by selectmen to work with the school administration and superintendent. Their concerns include the school buildings, windows, roofs,and the fields which are "partly the responsibility of the town, and partly the reponsibility of the schools," he explained.

The member continued, "The committee hasn't been too dynamic. There's a little feeling that we should take more of a leadership role. Things like the fields really need help even though it fell at town meeting." He noted the committee should be "pushing more on maintenance."

School committee member Diana Kornet explained that big-budget items such as field renovations have been put on hold since the inception of Proposition 21/2. "We're no longer in an expansion mode," she stated.

Teachers also expressed concern with the maintenance of the schools. High school French teacher George Fortin said his classroom has leaked for 20 years. Supt. Hart explained those window repairs are scheduled in the next phase of a capital improvement project in the schools.

He noted," If I had a million dollars, there are a lot of things I'd like to do. But I would rather spend the money on education. If I had to make a choice between windows versus a new science facility, I would not choose the windows.

"Although windows are needed, there'll be a greater effect on our students to have a new science facility."

As Betsy Walsh Connolly said," You should never be put in that position."

An elementary teacher in Hingham, she added,"Our school buildings here are not representative of the economic condition of this town. Hingham spends a lot more - we have new carpeting in the classrooms every four years. Should we put more pressure on our school committee or at town meeting? The schools should be our number one priority. "

Taffy Nothnagle of Atlantic Avenue noted the town just spent "a fortune on the town hall and a police and fire station. We need to say our buildings (schools) deserve a lot more than town hall."

And one Cohasset teacher, Marie Price, said that a lot of teachers here "simply make do with what we have. We beg, borrow and steal and never say a word to anyone. So a lot of outsiders don't know about the things we are doing without. Is it time for an override of 2 1/2? The children need much more and this community does not know it."

The superintendent responded by saying that school budgets are controlled by how much money is available. Eighty percent of the school budget is for salaries, with only nine percent for "other things" such as teaching materials and learning aids. Cohasset allocates the same or a lesser percentage of its town budget to schools than most surrounding communities, he said.

"We have to look at the larger picture," he stated. "Most people do not want to vote to increase their taxes."

Supt. Hart suggested that people view the local schools from a "bigger picture." He noted that in his visits to other school systems, Cohasset's schools appear well maintained in comparison.

Some residents suggested the public needs to be better informed about the plight of its school system. Dorothy Wondolowski, a teacher at the high school, suggested a "wish list" be published, containing items for classrooms and teachers. But Fortin quickly added, "it goes beyond a wish list. These are necessities we need."

In answer to another question, Supt. Hart said a new series of synchronized textbooks are now being used in grades one and two, with the third grade scheduled for next year. "Generally, the textbook situation is fairly current. There is a regular replacement of texts," he said.

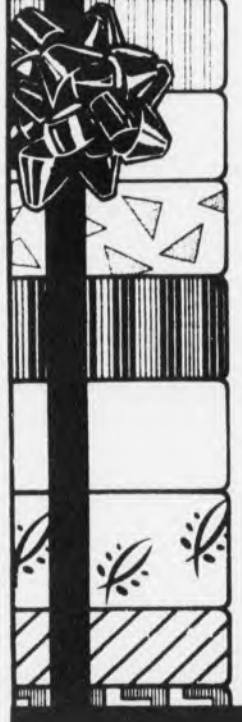
School committee member Nancy Sandell suggested that the K-12 curriculum be reviewed, and that a curriculum coordinator may be necessary. The creation of teaching teams in the seventh grade this year has been praised by parents and students as an effective way of maintaining a sequential curriculum, while keeping students in smaller, more familiar groups.

Wondolowski suggested that the schools immediately consider employing a science coordinator, particularly to establish a smooth transition between grades six and seven. Walsh Connolly noted that many educational experts agree there will soon be a science and mathematics teacher crisis, with less college graduates applying for those positions. Most classroom instructors are uncomfortable teaching those subjects, she added, noting that new texts are being devised now that are "teacher friendly, but expensive."

In-service teaching programs could also help in this area, committee member Sandell stated. Teachers could attend specialized workshops in various subject matters.

Although grant money is sometimes available for these programs, Supt. Hart noted that the money is not made easily available to communities like Cohasset with few low-income families.

It was also suggested during the informal discussion that Cohasset should more frequently request the assistance of college-aged student teachers. They would provide the classroom with a second professional to assist the teacher at no cost, and they would give the experienced teacher an "added spark," according to Price, an Osgood kindergarten teacher.



Supt. Hart noted, "Some things in our school system can change. But we can also pay teachers $20,000 more and that doesn't mean they are $20,000 better. But, in the long run, to attract the best people we have to start now to improve education." Better pay for teachers, and well-maintained classroom facilities will be incentives for teachers to "do above and beyond," he stated.

Thanksgiving feast

The fifth and sixth grade open space of Deer Hill School reenacted the Pilgrims and Wampanoag Indians daily life in the 1620's. We have gone to Plimouth Plantation and the Mayflower. We have put information together for you in 1987. It took place Nov. 23 for the students of Deer Hill, and Nov. 24 for the parents of the kids in the presentation. Approximately 140 guests attended the presentation an<' a small feast afterwards.

In-service for school staff

Dec. 3, staff members of the junior/senior high school will discuss the legal aspects of AIDS in the public schools.

Panelists include: Commissioner Kathleen Allen-Mass. Commission Against Discrimination; Deputy General Counsel, Stephen Eisenstadt-Mass. Dept. of Public Health; Dr. Steve Golden-Cohasset Family Practitioner;and Dr. Robert Sceery-Cohasset School Physician.

The discussion topics will include: discrimination against student or employee, school attendance, the Handicap Law, confidentiality-who has the right to know?, and medical questions or concerns. The audience will include the school administration, teaching and supportive staff, custodial staff, food service personnel, available elementary school staff and PSO reps.

Artist of the month

As part of the artist of the month program, students at the Deer Hill School created sand paintings in order to acquire an awareness of American Indian Art. Mrs. McDonald, a fourth grade teacher arranged for several of the sand paintings to be hung at the Goodale Insurance Company on Main Street. The artist of the month program is very grateful for this opportunity to have the student's work displayed and hope that onlookers will enjoy viewing the art work.

Health education grant

Tuesday, Dec. 1, Dr. Lonnie Carton from The Learning Center, and Mike Gill, Cohasset's Health Education Coordinator, visited the Osgood School to speak with classroom teachers. The topic of discussion was grant money which the school system will be receiving for the purpose of enhancing our elementary school health education program.

Thanksgiving play

The Deer Hill leadership group presented a Thanksgiving play to the kindergarten classes at Osgood. The play, written by Megan Bruns, had as its theme kindness to others. The other members of the cast were Wes DeSantis, Elizabeth Deveney, Jon Ford, Chris Kondrat, Michael Riley and Kim Ward.

Christmas music concerts

Thursday, Dec. 17, the high school's music department will be holding its Christmas concert.

Expected to perform are the Jazz band, the Junior chorus, the senior chorus, the junior band and the senior band. The performance begins at 7:30 p.m.; and there is no admission fee.

The senior chorus is performing on Cohasset Common December 13 (Sunday) in the middle of the afternoon.

The senior chorus is also performing at FaneuilHall Marketplace in Boston at 5 p.m. on Wednesday, Dec. 16.

'Oz' tickets on sale

Rehearsals for CHS' production of The Wizard of Oz are well underway, said Bryan Marks.

Tickets are selling well, and people may call the high school at 383-6945 for ticket information.

Special thanks from Mr. Marks goes to Colleen Lucas (art teacher) and Tom Hughes (shop teacher) and their students for their outstanding contributions in terms of sets, painting, and design.

Mr. Marks would also like to recognize the teamwork of the four lead players: Amanda Sweeney (Dorothy), Peter Kasperowicz (the Scarecrow), Doug Moe (the Tinman) and Derek Lacks (the Cowardly Lion). He is pleased with the professionalism and showmanship of this ensemble. They work hard and well together.

Show dates are: Friday, Dec. 4, Saturday, Dec. 5 at 7:30 and Sunday Dec. 6 at 2 p.m.

Performances will be held in the high school auditorium. Tickets are $4 each. The cast anticipates a good show and hopes everyone will come to enjoy it!

SSCOOT drives disabled to theater

Disabled persons on the South Shore will attend theater performances at Nickerson Theater this season through the efforts of SSCOOT (South Shore Coordinated Transportation, Inc.), Nickerson Theater, and Jack Conway Company.

"Project Re-Creation" was launched recently when six persons in wheelchairs attended the afternoon matinee performance of I'll Be Back Before Midnight at Nickerson Theater in Norwell.

"The theater tickets are being donated by Nick Nickerson, owner of the theater, and Jack Conway Company is paying for the cost of transportation" according to Sharron Beals, SSCOOT's Director.

SSCOOT is a private non-profit paratransit organization organized and incorporated two years ago to serve mobility impaired South Shore residents.

SSCOOT's seven vans and one minibus provide services primarily in Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Holbrook, Hull, Milton, Norwell, Quincy, Randolph, Scituate and Weymouth.

Cohasset worship . . .

First Parish

Music and Worship Committee: The Music and Worship Committee is planning to publish a booklet of lenten readings to be distributed to the congregation before Ash Wednesday. The readings will be collected from our membership, either something they themselves have written, or a selection from another author which they have enjoyed. The selections should be 200 words or less. If you would like to contribute a reading, please contact the church office or a member of the Committee.

The Music and Worship Committee will meet Sunday, Dec. 6 at 8 p.m. in the Parish House.

Village Fair News: If you have ticket stubs for the drawing to be held at the Village Fair, please get them to Vivian Mulligan on this coming Sunday morning or call her at home, 383-9141. Also see Vivian if you wish to turn in the money for tickets taken on consignment.

Ministerial Relations Committee: The Ministerial Relations Committee will meet Tuesday, Dec. 15 at 7:30 p.m. in the Parish House to discuss the minister's role in religious education. The committee consists of Ir Bloomfield, 383-1360, Jack Mason, 383-6577 and Colin Studds, 383-6956. We welcome any comments on this or any other issues.

Christmas Poinsettia: Once again we are looking for donors for poinsettias to decorate our chancel table Christmas Sunday and Christmas Eve. Please call the church office, 383-1100, or Megan Phelps, 740-2766.

Second Congregational Church

News of the Parish:

Stewardship Drive at full steam. About 50 pledges returned so far! Send those cards and letters in! Reminder phone calls to be made soon. If you did not receive or have misplaced the stewardship letter 1988 preliminary budget, and envelope, please contact the church office and we'll mail one right out!

Youth News:

Junior Deacons to reschedule food drive, postponed due to a winning Cohasset High School soccer team! Trip to see the "Black Nativity" to be planned for Sunday afternoon, Dec. 20; for youth from 9th - 12th grade.

Junior High types raked three lawns this past Sunday! Special thanks to John Campbell and Gordon Hislop for their advisory duties; but most especially to Mac Campbell, Shona Hislop, Jessica Pyfrom, Heather Lyons and friend Danielle. Well done, good and faithful servants!

News of the wider community: New Friends program of the Social Service league of Cohasset acknowledges the feeling of loneliness we all experience at times and the need we all have for friendship and realizes that because of age or for physical reasons, it is not always possible to get out to meet people. Therefore, the New Friends Program introduces people who are in their homes to a New Friend.

The primary purpose is to offer friendship through regular one-on-one visits. Visiting time is an opportunity for conversation—listening and sharing. Sometimes New Friends offer assistance with shopping or errands, share a meal at a restaurant or take part in some other recreational activity.

It is truly a rewarding experience and we are constantly looking for new visitors as well as for those people who would like to be visited.

For further information, please contact Bobbie Fowle at the Social Service League office: 383-0771.

Annual Christmas Concert at the First Parish Meeting House (on the Common), Sunday, Dec. 13, at 4 p.m. Featured will be the Unicorn Singers, a chamber orchestra, soloists, and carols for all to sing; directed by Margo Euler. Tickets are $3, patrons welcome at $30. Proceeds to be donated to the South Shore Habitat for Humanity.

Cong. Sha'aray Shalom

The Social Concerns Committee of Congregation Sha'aray Shalom, 1112 Main St. Hingham, will sponsor a special program called American Jews and their Relationship to the Constitution. The program is being presented as part of Shabbat services at 8 p.m. Friday, Dec. 4.

Harry Hartog, past president of the Greater Boston council of B'nai B'rith, will be the feature speaker. The public is invited to attend.

Beechwood Congregational

The Beechwood Congregational church invites neighbors, friends and members to worship Sunday at 10:45 a.m. The pastor is Stephen S.J. Hall. Adult child care provided downstairs following the children's sermon.

Children in grades K-8 are welcome to attend Sunday school from 9:30-10:30 a.m. Sunday school is open to children of all denominations. We teach basic Christian beliefs. As usual, guests are always welcome.

Video tapes of the beautiful Emma Damon concert held in October are now available. These tapes can be a constant reminder of the lovely concert in October that marked a memorial to a great lady. Give one as a Christmas gift.

You've been waiting all year for it . . . now it's here . . . the annual Snowflake Fair . . . Sat., Dec. 5 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Of course there'll be the famous Beechwood fish chowder along with Flossie May's special corn chowder . . . christmas trees, wreaths, and poinsettias along with arrangements on the plant table . . . . All types of fancywork hand made by those busy church supporters . . . ornaments . . . white elephant (maybe you will find that special treasure there) . . . homebaked food, cakes and cookies, homemade candy, fudge and yes, the now world famous (well famous to the region) beechwood beachglass candy. Come early and get that special gift you are looking for, or just drop by, have coffee and donuts and say Helloo.

Advent and Christmas sermon topics:
Dec. 6th - "Why Jesus, Why Then"
Dec. 13th - "The Anatomy of Hope"
Dec. 20th - "Christmas Starts With Hope"
Dec. 27th - "A New Beginning"

Church phone, 383-0808, Pastor Hall, 545-6800 (work) 545-3810 (home).

Six ballerinas await the stage . . .

Hingham, and think that's what Boston would be like. But at the Wang Center, there must be about 20 million faces looking at you. And then there's the balcony loaded with hundreds of people staring right at you."

Melissa remembered when she was selected last year as a pretty Polichinelle, "I was really excited. I yelled, 'whoopee' and jumped up and down. " This year, her experience allowed her a more sedate response, but she is as excited to perform as when she first stepped upon the stage.

Although they were not rejected, the tiny dancers realize the heartache it must be for others to be refused a part in the ballet. "When I was trying out, there were about four girls who were asked to leave," Melissa said.

"Sometimes, they just say to them, 'maybe next year.' A lot of the kids cry," Courtney added.

Together, they remembered the occasion when they walked off the wrong wing of the stage, or how cold it was to dance after the fog machine was used during the dream sequence dance. "Somehow everything looks alright, even though mistakes are made," Karla admitted.

In the snow scene, flakes of the white powder that falls from above the curtain inadvertently appear during other scenes, they offered with a giggle.

Keeley listened as her friends recalled their fond moments in the limelight. "I've never been in The Nutcracker," she emphasized, "but I've seen it three times."

The dancers agreed the festive event puts them in the proper seasonal mood. "Especially when it snows, being in The Nutcracker really makes it seem like Christmas," Melissa said.

They will treasure the memories of dressing beside a principal dancer as he is fitted with the familiar nutcracker headpiece. They will recall busily preparing for their scenes, while idolized ballerinas prance backstage in beautiful costumes.

"If you're early," Melissa noted, "sometimes you can get their autograph."

"And," Courtney added, "before they go onstage, sometimes you can ask them to stand for a photograph."

The small performers are allowed to slip out of costume after they have finished their evening performance. Then, they are allowed to watch their fellow artists in the remaining production. After a matinee, the girls will replace their elaborate costumes with sweat pants and sweaters and dine with their family in Boston. "But we still keep on our makeup," Melissa explained. "And once we get back for the next performance, they just brush up the makeup a bit."

Although they are all girlish squeals and giggles now, some of the young performers envision a career on the stage. Courtney said she "definitely" will pursue a life of dance.

"And we all want to be Clara someday," she confided. "That way, you get to see the whole show."

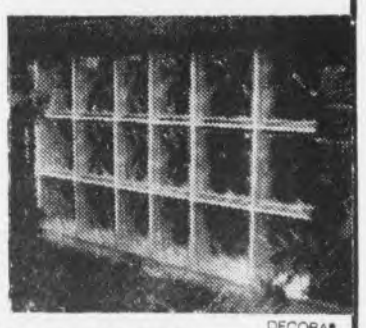
Local residents were given an early treat last month when Laura Young, a principal dancer with the Boston Ballet and a veteran of 500 Nutcracker performances, came back to her hometown.

Donald and Sheila Evans, board of trustee members of the Boston Ballet, invited several residents to meet Young at their home. After posing for photographs and signing autographs, Young was told about the six Cohasset girls dancing in this year's cast.

According to Regina Schultz, Courtney's mother, "Laura thought that was great. She said the four Cohasset soldiers would comprise one-third of the entire regiment. She told the girls they could come to her dressing room for an interview with her. She said Deer Hill would be the password."

Village Fair book sale Dec. 5

Saturday, Dec. 5, at 10 a.m., the doors to the Village Fair will open at the First Parish House on North Main Street.



There will be extraordinary bargains, rare books, new books, old treasures, wonderful children's books, records and many outstanding sets. This is a fine opportunity to buy those hard-to-find Christmas gifts - especially today, when book prices are so high.

Of particular interest is a rare First Edition of E.B. White's Charlotte's Webb in fine condition. There will be a Special Silent Auction for this unusual book.

Be sure to stop by the Cashier's Desk at the Book Sale at any time to leave your name, phone number and the amount of your bid in the Silent Auction Box. The drawing will be at 2 p.m. Ties will be broken by a lottery.

Garden Club prepares for Dec. 10 Yuletide tour

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will decorate seven unique homes built in 1727, 1860, 1890, 1900, 1950 and 1980, and located from Jerusalem Road to those hidden by rustic pine trees and rocks. Proceeds from the long-awaited Yuletide tour will benefit the South Shore Art Center, the Community Center and the Historical Society as well as scholarship programs. The house tour will be held Thursday, Dec. 10 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Complimenting the seldom-opened homes and estates will be unusual floral designs by members and noted flower show judges including Mrs. Hollis Gray of Sudbury, Mrs. James Grinnel, Mrs. John O'Toole, Mrs. Stephen N. Bobo, Mrs. Jeffrey R. Power of Cohasset, and Mrs. John J. Hickey of North Scituate. Other leading arrangers and coordinators for the other homes (partial) will be: Kathy Morgan, Mrs. James M. Graham, Jr., Mrs. James G. Erickson, Mrs. James G. Storey, Mrs. Raymond J. Hanian, Mrs. Peter Roy, Mrs. Donald Larson, Mrs. Peter L. Berg, Mrs. George M. Sechen, Mrs. Donna Mullin and Mary Fitzmaurice of Hingham, Mrs. Carl E. Barrie of Marshfield Hills and Mrs. Robert V. Laney of Duxbury.

Mrs. David R. Replogle is coordinating the boutique that will feature holiday decorations — a festive note to the newly renovated Cohasset Community Center located across from the historic Cohasset Common. The gourmet collation also will be served by garden club members at the Community Center, headed by Carmen Schramm and Marge Libby.

Another highlight of the tour will be "Attracting Birds to Your Garden" coordinated by Boo Leach, Noel Manion, Doris Swain with consultant Tina Watson.

The tour will include a colonial home built in 1727 with six original fireplaces, two beehive ovens, wide plank floors and hand hewn beams. The cozy library was the original kitchen, the "borning room with its antique quilt-hung beams and a recent addition that will feature a Christmas tree adorned with prized ornament collection.

Arlene Ferreira and Donna O'Connor, chairmen of the Community Garden Club's house tour, prepare the Cohasset homes for the Dec. 10 event.
(Alan Chapman photo)

The newest home on the tour was custom-built of tile, glass and synthetic-free fabrics accented by the owners watercolor paintings and rare collections.

A home built in 1895 overlooks Little Harbor and has the warmth of many rooms, window seats, fine woodwork surrounded by comfortable antiques. Just prior to the Civil War this shingled home was later joined with an adjacent house and is now a large elegant dining room. The kitchen and playroom will be decorated with a candy wreath accented with cookies; gumdrop house and gingerbread men. Since the Chicago Symphony Orchestra was housed in this turn-of-the century Victorian home, the recently-renovated home will be decorated with a music motif that will compliment the chintz and green and peach colors used throughout the home.

Visitors will be swept away on a magic carpet to the Mediterranean when they enter the home that was built in the 1900s and view Little Harbor from every room of this architectural gem filled with treasures from all over the world.

Finally, you will go back in time to an English cottage complete with a tea table, Christmas Cake with marzipan icing, swags or kissing boughs and Christmas Friendship Tree decorated with antique ornaments, golden ginkgo leaves (rare Chinese Tree), dried blossoms of blue lace hydrangea and antique papier mache angels accented by tiny white lights and swags of gold beads. Coordinators are Polly Blanchard, Janet Vanderweil, Phyllis Cray, Hope Warren and Margery Doughterty.

view Benefit, will outline a festive English holiday dinner and her unique recipes will be given to all who attend. Mary Hickey noted that the English do not use wreaths or poinsettas but holly, mistletoe, greens, laurel, lemon leaves, ivy carnations, fruit and rosehips.

President of the Community Garden Club, Phyllis Peck, who also is a Flower Show Judge, noted that a descriptive program with information and a map will be provided each person and that there will be hostesses to answer questions at each home. Jane Goff and Betsy Good head this committee.

Tickets must be reserved in advance by calling the Community Center 383-0088 or ticket chairman Denise Desmond (383-6446) or Rita Strong (383-0939). Donation is $15 and includes tour of seven homes, collation and boutique. Judy Volungis and Polly Logan head the Public Relations Committee, added that the tour will be held rain or shine and suggested walking shoes for attendees.

King Street

Delight in one of Cohasset's original homes. Built in 1727, John Burbank, his wife, and 13 children lived here for 63 years. Burbank was responsible for urging the separation of early Cohasset from Hingham.

This "Colonial Home" has 6 original fireplaces, 2 beehive ovens, wide plank floors, and hand hewn beams. Enjoy the cozy library that was the original kitchen, the "borning" room with its antique quilt-hung beams, and the more recent addition — a huge living room, where the Christmas tree is adorned with a prized ornament collection.

Jerusalem Road

This is the newest home on our tour; a seven-year old custom-built house of tile, glass, and synthetic-free fabrics.

The masterful use of these fabrics gives the family's home the joyful beauty of an English flower garden. Sparkling crystal, old coin silver, cobalt and cranberry glass delight the eye. Notice how a rainbow of watercolor paintings brighten the all-white walls.

Jerusalem Road

This spacious home was built on Nichols-Wheelwright land in 1895. Known for years as the "Barry Cottage," it was a summer place until the 1950s. The house enjoys a commanding view of Little Harbor.

The owners have expanded and updated the house to serve the needs of a growing family. Note the skillful blend of comfort and antique of today and yesterday.

Jerusalem Road

This gracious shingled home was built in 1860, as America struggled with the Civil War. It, intriguingly, was two houses, now connected by the large elegant dining room. To the rear of the main house stands a small building which was originally the laundry house.

The owners have updated their large home for their growing family. In addition to the elegant foyer, living and dining rooms, admire the warmth of the "upper deck" off the kitchen, and rejoice in a "Child's Christmas" in the playroom.

Nichols Road

This marvelous turn-of-the-century Victorian home boasts a large wraparound porch, and a country lane setting. Built, initially, as a guest cottage for the estate of Cyrus McCormick, inventor of the reaper, it housed the Chicago Symphony Orchestra when they came to play for the McCormicks.

The owners have renovated the entire house utilizing the best of modern conveniences while retaining the grace and elegance of a bygone era.

Nichols Road

This charming Cape Cod home expresses the owner's many interests. The home literally bursts with wonderful things on which to feast the eyes. Rare orientals, antique silver, fine china and old wicker vie for attention with antique furniture, English hunt prints and exquisite old needlepoint.

Make note of the creche, santa, and sleigh, displayed by the family since 1870.

As you leave the house, don't miss the special "attracting birds to your garden" display, featuring bird houses and a heated bird bath.

Beach Street

This beautiful Mediterranean villa is aptly named "The Arches," as they are used repeatedly in the architecture. The house was built at the turn of the century as a summer home and remained that until the 1970's. It stands imposingly on the rocky shore of Little Harbor and offers magnificent water views from every window.

There is a delightful eclectic feeling in this home, from the country kitchen, to the baronial dining room, to the cozy sun room that is the heart of the house.

INTRODUCING
Dr. Ronald E. Wuotila
Chiropractor

Please allow me to introduce myself to the town of Hanover and it's surrounding communities. I am originally from the South Shore area and graduated from Palmer College of Chiropractic in Davenport, Iowa. I have received extensive pre and post graduate training at the Gonstead Clinic of chiropractic in Mount Horeb, Wisconsin which specializes in the treatment and care of patients with structural problems of the spine. My practical experience includes six years of clinical work treating patients for various spinal related conditions utilizing X-ray analysis and a specific adjusting technique.

Being a licensed Chiropractor in the state of Massachusetts, I did an extensive demographic study of the South Shore region and decided the town of Hanover was centrally located to service patients from many communities. My new office is conveniently located on Route 53, one and one half miles south of the Hanover Mall exit 13. To aquaint you with our newly opened office and all that Chiropractic care has to offer, my staff and I would like to provide to you or another family member, a spinal examination absolutely FREE. This examination (a $35.00 value) will include an orthopedic test, neurological test, blood pressure check, spinal alignment check, examination for restricted or excess motion in the spine, muscle strengthness test, and a private consultation with the Doctor to discuss the results.

Senior center news. . .

Supplemental Security Income recipients received a welcome reprieve late last week from the Reagan administration policy that would have reduced their SSI benefits. Health and Human Services Secretary Otis Bowen moved to suspend an order to Social Security offices that would have counted donations of food, clothing, shelter and fuel oil as income for purpose of determining SSI eligibility. And the Senate passed legislation (S.-1793) to establish a permanent policy excluding such charitable gifts from the computation of SSI benefits, retroactive to October 1, '87.

The HHS policy of counting such non-cash benefits as income came as a result of the Sept. 30 expiration of a 1983 law that discounted the value of donations in determining eligibility for SSI benefits. Both the House and Senate were in the process of making the 1983 law permanent when HHS issued its policy to Social Security offices around the country. For more information call the Senior Center at 383-9112.

SOCIAL SECURITY NEWS

Hospice Care Under Medicare— Medicare hospital Insurance can help pay for hospice care if a doctor certifies that a person is terminally ill, Medicare officials reminded. In addition, a person must sign a statement choosing hospice instead of standard Medicare benefits for the terminal illness.

Hospice care is a special program of care designed to provide pain relief, symptom management, and supportive services to terminally ill people and their families.

Medicare can pay for a maximun of two 90-day periods of care and one 30 day period. However, if a patient still needs hospice care after that hospice periods are exhausted, the hospice must continue care unless the patient no longer wants hospice services.

During the hospice period, Medicare pays the full cost of all covered services for terminal illness. There are no deductibles for co-payment except for part of the cost of outpatient drugs and inpatient respite care. Respite care is a short-term inpatient stay which may be necessary for the patient in order to give temporary relief to the person who regulary assists with home care. Inpatient respite care is limited each time to stays of no more than five days in a row.

For respite care, the patient is responsible for five percent of the cost up to a maximum of $520 during a period that begins when a hospice plan is first chosen and ends 14 days after such care is cancelled.

The Health Care Financing Administration publishes a pamphlet, Hospice Benefits under Medicare, which is available at the Social Security Office in Quincy, Ma.-or call Ed Molley at 773-7411.

ADRIAN'S JEWELRY SHOP
Locally owned and operated by Adrian Del Rosso for over 24 years

In every community there is one store we can depend on all year round for any number of occasions. We speak, of course, of the jeweler and the firm he represents. Christmas, birthdays, engagements, weddings and anniversaries are just a few of the times in your life when you want to give something special to someone you care for.

There can be no doubt the people to see for these occasions are Adrian's Jewelry Shop, located at 140 Pleasant Street in South Weymouth. Phone 335-2671. Their inventory of gold earrings, bracelets, necklaces and charms is endless. The selection of men's and women's engagement and wedding rings is exquisite. Diamond, emerald, ruby, pearl and onyx are a few of the stones found in a variety of settings.

They also have a complete line of Sterling Silver Jewelry. Watches in famous brand names such as SEIKO and LONGINES are available in a price range for almost everyone. A complete selection of cameo's, Cleopatra necklace, scrimshaw can also be found in their fine store. Adrian designs, repairs fine jewelry, as well, watches and clock repairs.

Mastercard, Visa and American Express are excepted. Gift Certificates are available plus a convenient layaway plan with only 10% down.

The only thing you have to know about Jewelry is Adrian's. Come in and sign up for their $500 shopping spree. Drawing will be held Dec. 24th and announced on WJDA. Open Sundays. Refreshments served Sundays only - Mon. thru Sat., 9-9, Sunday 12-6.

Dog poisonings under investigation . . .

Although the meat was not analyzed because of the prohibitive cost of the tests, after conferring with neighbors, Crimmins is convinced the surprise package had some connection with the nearby dog poisonings earlier this week. "It cost hundreds of dollars to have it tested. Besides, no one leaves meat at your front door for no reason," he said.

A dog owned by the Michael Bliss family of Summer Street, and another dog in the neighborhood were poisoned Sunday. At the same time, the two dogs, who Bliss said run through the marsh together behind Elm Street, appeared to have the similar symptoms of internal poisoning.

From the reaction of the two dogs, Health Agent Joseph Godzik, who is also a veterinarian, said it appears the animals somehow ingested some form of organic phosphate. That is the compound found in insecticides or herbicides.

The source of the poison has not been found, he noted, explaining it could be from someone's newly-fertilized lawn, a container recklessly thrown away, or even an intentional act by an individual.

Barbara Bliss explained that her dog appeared to be very nervous and agitated on Sunday. Although the family first suspected Nassa had been hit by a car, they ruled that out when she began to experience muscle spasms, twitching and vomiting. The dog was brought to a Marshfield veterinary clinic when she was put on intravenous, valium and barbituates to control the seizures.

The second dog was experiencing the same reaction and was also brought to the same veterinarian for treatment. Both dogs have survived the incident.

"We at first thought this had never happened to us before," Bliss said. "But someone did tell us another dog in this area had been poisoned this fall. And then we remembered an instance earlier this fall when Nassa reacted in a similar manner, although in a much milder form. We thought then she may have been hit, but she was all right. Looking back on that, we're wondering now is she actually got into something, or if someone is trying to harm these dogs."

Bliss also noted that within 24 hours, a third canine in the neighborhood experienced the same symptoms. "It makes you stop and think what's going on. It would be awful if someone was trying to kill these dogs," she said.

Bliss and Crimmins admitted their dogs are allowed to run loose without a leash.

"Everybody's dog in this town runs loose," Crimmins said. "There's no real leash law, and when you call the dog officer, the only thing you get is a recording. But that's probably the problem. We let our dogs run loose and someone's mad."

Although Crimmins said he called the police Monday night, an officer whom he could not identify told him there was nothing he could do about the meat incident.

Health Agent Godzik said he received a call from one of the neighbors who explained her dog had been poisoned. "At least it appeared to be poisoned," he cautioned. "Another dog in that neighborhood had similar symptoms which appear to be poisoning. From the symptoms and the therapy prescribed, it appears to indicate poisoning by an organic phosphate.

"My initial feeling is that it might be an herbicide or pesticide sprayed on someone's lawn; the dog walked on the lawn, then licked his paws. That is not uncommon," he said, noting that it has been more than one month since commercial lawn companies have sprayed with the substance.

"We want to keep an eye out for anything we see in the marsh behind Elm Street. Perhaps someone dumped a container of the stuff in there and the dogs licked it. If anybody is walking through the marsh, they could have thrown it in there. That's another possibility," he said.

A third possibility, according to the health agent, is that the dogs may have been intentionally poisoned.

Bliss said she is keeping her dog in the house, and taking the pet for short walks on a leash.

"At first I didn't think so, but it's beginning to look suspicious," she said Tuesday. "And that means every animal in this town is in jeopardy, even the cats. It's pretty awful to think that someone would do this, but it's really awful to see what these animals go through when they've been poisoned."

Crimmins also vowed to keep his dogs inside, at least temporarily. He stated, "This is something I'll have to live with - the thought that someone's trying to kill my dogs. When someone comes right to your door to murder your pets, that's scary."

Rec. Dept. plans Gunstock ski trip

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone reservations for a ski trip to Gunstock, scheduled for Monday, Jan. 18, Martin Luther King Holiday.

The fee for this trip is $30 per person which includes motor coach transportation and an all mountain lift ticket.

Buses will leave from Town Hall at 5:30 a.m., Monday, Jan. 18, and return about 7:30 p.m. that evening. Equipment rentals, for those who wish to rent at Gunstock, will be $12, and lessons are $7, for those who wish to take one.

To register, please call the recreation department office at 383-6791. While reservations will be accepted over the phone, it is a payment which must be made by Tuesday, Dec. 22, that will confirm your registration.

For those who wish to rent equipment at Gunstock, please be prepared to give us the following information when you call to register; shoe size, weight and age.

Registrations will be accepted on a first call, first enrolled basis, but the trip will be limited to 47 people, hence, immediate registration is suggested.

The third ski trip scheduled for the 1987-1988 season is to King Ridge, and will be Sunday, Feb. 14, 1988. Registration details will be available during early January. Because the trip will be on the Sunday, of winter vacation, the cost will be a couple of dollars more than the Gunstock trip, but should not exceed $38.00.

Anyone who is faced with a financial burden because of the fee, should contact Jack Worley or any member of the recreation commission.

With all Revolving Account Fund transactions, there is a strenuous amount of paperwork and financial procedure that is necessary to comply with both state and local laws, and must be completed on a strict time table. Therefore, it remains essential and is greatly appreciated that payments are made within the designated time schedules established for each trip.

Because ski trips coincide with the time of year that people are most apt to become ill, we maintain a waiting list for each trip, and replacements have always been found even with last minute notice the night before a trip.

Should you not be able to go on a trip you have registered for, call the recreation office as soon as possible and up until 9 p.m., the night before the trip. If for any reason we are not able to fill your place, you will be refunded the lift money, but not the bus seat fee ($14 this year). However, it is most probable that we will be able to find a replacement for you.

The recreation office will be open both at the 5:30 a.m. departure time, and again at the 7:30 p.m., return time.

If parents are not going to be at their home phone during the day of the trip, please leave a number where you could be reached in the event of an emergency, with the recreation director the morning of the trip.

Blue Hills ski lessons

The Cohasset Recreation Department will conduct registrations for ski lessons to be held at Blue Hills on Thursday, December 3, from 2:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m., and again Thursday evening from 6:00 p.m. to 7:30 p.m., at the recreation office, first floor, Town Hall.

The fee for this year's 5 week, 1.3 4 hour per week lesson and transportation will be $58.00 per person, and $92.00 per person if equipment rental is needed at Blue Hills. Checks must be made payable to "Town of Cohasset". Classes are scheduled to begin on Thursday, January 7, 1988, and buses will leave from Town Hall at 3:20 p.m., and return at about 6:45 p.m.

Alzheimer's meeting

The Alzheimer's Disease Support Group of the South Shore, Inc., will meet Wednesday, December 9, 1987, at 7:30 p.m., at the Hersey House, 229 North St., Hingham for a discussion of coping with grief during the holiday season.

The guest speaker will be Dr. Sherry E. Johnson, grief therapist, lecturer and author of the forthcoming book, "After a Child Dies; Counseling the Bereaved Family."

ADSGSS, Inc., is a grantee of South Shore Elder Services. Meetings, held twice a month at Hersey House for peer support and educational programs, are open to all. For more information call 749-5417 or 749-1767.

Ballet holiday festival

The Children's Ballet Workshop of Hingham has been invited to participate in the third annual "Let's Celebrate" Winter Holiday Festival to be held at the Museum of Science Dec. 5 at noon.

Also on the same evening, students will be joining the Plymouth Philharmonic Orchestra for their Holiday Pops Concert at 8 p.m. Nan Cogswell Keating will be directing excerpts from Peter Tchaikovsky's "The Nutcracker" Ballet for both occasions.

The following dancers will be performing:

Party Boys: Ben Sigsby, Tom Sigsby, Brett Costello, Keegan Dwyer, Patrick Dwyer, Chad Wolfe, Robyn Gabriel, Keeley Dwyer, Meredith Equi, Deirdre Costello, Erin Conroy, Christiana Briggs, Alyssa Cross, Elaina Parlee.

Chinese: Kelley Ekas, Matt Neenan.

Spanish: Maura Weldon, Jennifer Keating, Laura Keating.

Hoops: Hannah Butler, Jennifer Brown, Laura Miceli, Michelle Boyle, Johanna Horn, Vicki Delmonico, Megan Stone, Matt Neenan.

Marzipan: Allison Costello, Marcella Ellerbrook, Maura Weldon, Kelley Ekas, Maggie O'Donnell.

Polichinelle: Sarah Case, Deirdre Costello, Erin Conroy, Torrey Androwski, Anne Kittler, Demi Lersch, Julia Welsh, Cara Sullivan.

Mrs. Keating is also pleased to announce the Children's Ballet Workshop has become the Official Affiliate School of Boston Ballet School. This year, twenty-five of her students will be participating in the Boston Ballet's Christmas Special "The Nutcracker". The young students at the Workshop have an unusually high success rate. This is the result of long hours of practice and the high expectations of both Mrs. Keating and the students themselves.

For the second year, a young man from the Workshop, Ben Sigsby of Hanover, will be Fritz, the most honored part for a young boy. Allison Costello and Michelle Boyle will be angels. Denise LeBlanc and Karla Kennedy will be Chinese Dancers. Jennifer Brown, Sarah Edson, Hannah Butler, Michelle Boyle, Deirdre Keeley, Christiana Briggs, and Tom Sigsby will be party children. Keeley Dwyer, Megan Stone, Meredity Equi, Melissa Weier, Micha Burns, Jerri-Lee O'Donnell, Deirdre Keeley, Alyson Clark and Courtney Schultz will be soldiers. Sara Buba, Alyssa Cross, Deirdre Costello, Elizabeth Santoro and Elizabeth Murry will be Polichinelles.

White Christmas Dec. 13

The fourth annual Cohasset White Christmas, sponsored by the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, will take place Sun., Dec. 13.

Santa Claus will arrive at Cushing Plaza, Rt. 3A, Cohasset at 11 a.m., by helicopter. After an hour and a half of photo sessions with children, and pony rides, Santa will proceed on to the Town Common by fire engine.

At the Cohasset Community Center there will be more photo sessions; on the Common there will be games, the moonwalk, and lunch!

WATD will cover the White Christmas event from start to finish. . .assisting the Chamber in awarding over 100 raffle prizes to lucky winners! At the end of the day, the Cohasset Common will be lit!

Come and share in some of the surprises the Chamber's saving for the great day! Marie Higgins and Fran Coffey are co-chairmen of the Chamber event. Higgins can be reached at 383-6365, Coffey can be reached at 383-1704.

Antonelli watercolor exhibit

The South Shore Art Center, Inc. is presenting current watercolors by Esther Antonelli at the Quincy Cooperative Bank on Route 3A in Cohasset.

This show is the seventy-fifth in a series of New England artists whose work is being exhibited by the bank. It will continue through December. The Quincy Cooperative Bank is actively serving the community by giving artists the opportunity to show their work and the public a way of purchasing quality work at reasonable prices.

Antonelli, a Quincy resident, attended Mass College of Art and the Boston Museum School. She was a commercial artist and jewelry designer in the past. She now devotes full time to painting at her studio and on location along the New England coast, at St. Maartens, Bermuda and Mexico. She will soon be on her way to join Roz Farbush and her painting group in Taxco Mexico.

Morning Musicales Dec. 10

The next concert of the Boston Morning Musicales will be held on Thursday, Dec. 10, at 11 a.m. in the Oval Room of the Copley Plaza.

The performing artists will be The New York Vocal Arts Ensemble, "Absolutely delightful concerts. . . .impeccable musicianship and great joy in performance" according to The New York Times.

Mrs. N. Frank Neer, Jr. of Cohasset, is chairman of the Musicales, which are held for the benefit of Tufts University's Boston School of Occupational Therapy.

Holiday movies

The Paul Pratt Library will present three holiday movies for children, grades 1-6, at the library at 1:30 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 3, an early release day.

The films are: The Christmas Gift, A Christmas Story, and Benjamin and the Miracle of Hanukah. The program is free; however, because of limited space, no child will be admitted without a ticket.

Tickets must be picked up beforehand at the library's circulation desk for Saturday, Nov. 28 - Tuesday, Dec. 1. There is a limit of 75 tickets. The program will last about an hour.

Republican Club concert

The Hanover High School Chorus will present a Christmas concert at the meeting of the South Shore Republican Club Monday, Dec. 14 at Norwell Grange Hall, Route 123 at South Street.

The club's annual fundraiser, a Christmas boutique, will continue at this meeting.

Members are asked to bring handcrafts, baked goods or white elephants. In charge are Elsie Akscyn of Brockton and Marie MacLeod of Whitman.

Scituate members are in charge of a light Christmas luncheon at noon. A 12:30 p.m. business meeting will be followed by the musical program.

Troop 28 news

Michael and Nicholas Lelecas, Jr. Assistant Scoutmasters and William Anstead, Senior Patrol Leader, from Cohasset's Troop 28, are preparing for the International World Jamboree BSA.

It is being held at the Cataract State Park near Sidney, Australia. They will be leaving Dec. 18-Jan 10. Their journey will take them from Boston to California, Hawaii for two days, New Zealand, then to Australia.

They will be hosted by an Australian family for the Christmas Holidays. After the Jamboree, they will tour Australia. Scouts from all over the world will participate in the Jamboree. The boys will have many stories to tell of their journey to the "Land of the Down-Under".

Troop 28 Needs You!

That's right, you can be a big help to Troop 28 and to the town of Cohasset by simply helping to recycle your returnable cans and bottles. At the Cohasset dump, by the large bin for recycling papers, is the can and bottle recycling area set up with the help of Troop 28.

You will not only be doing your good deed for yourself but for Cohasset and Troop 28 Boy Scouts. Come on and pitch in to recycle!

Easton: Voke students deficient in reading, math

Many kids entering South Shore Vocational High School are deficient in mathematics and reading, Superintendent, Clifford Easton told regional school committee members at Wednesday evening's meeting.

"Some students do not meet requirements to go into a credit-bearing class," Easton said.

Easton introduced to the South Shore Regional School District Committee, which met at the Hanover campus, ideas to strengthen reading and mathematical skills of students entering the high school. These ideas are part of a draft drawn up by the guidance department and administrative services, consisting of program additions and changes for the vocational high school.

One suggestion in the plan is the implementation of a stronger developmental reading program, which Easton said, "is an area of considerable concern to our guidance department."

Enrollment of students from the eight participating towns of Abington, Cohasset, Hanover, Norwell, Hanson, Rockland, Scituate and Whitman has decreased by about eight percent between last year and this year.

Easton also said during the meeting that he would like to see quality students enrolling at the vocational high school.

ENERGY MANAGEMENT PROGRAM
Teaming-up
Together, we can save energy and money

Eastern Edison Company
AN EASTERN UTILITIES ASSOCIATES COMPANY

Helping to plan your energy future.

Introducing Eastern Edison Company's "T*eaming-up*" Energy Management Program, a simple, efficient, cost-effective approach to managing your energy use. With rebates and other incentives, our "T*eaming-up*" Program lowers your energy costs. And by reducing demand for electricity, "T*eaming-up*" reduces our long-run need to build expensive new generating units. Together, we can help ensure reliable, economical power — for today and tomorrow.

"T*eaming-up*" is a common-sense, multi-faceted approach to energy management. Its several programs allow you the flexibility to choose those that best suit your individual needs. Working together and utilizing the experience and resources of Eastern Edison, we can design a system that conserves energy and saves you money from programs such as:

For our commercial and industrial customers

ELITE - Efficient Lighting Rebate Program
Saving money can be an illuminating experience! Rebates from 50¢ to $2.50 for replacement lamps, ballasts, and fixtures and assistance in paying for a low-cost energy audit (where required) help you to take advantage of today's state-of-the-art lighting technology. And that means lower electrical and maintenance costs!

EGAP - Emergency Generator Assistance Program
A sure-fire way to generate energy savings! We'll pay you cash dividends to run your emergency generator when power demand is greatest. For 100kW of connected load, that payment can be $2,000 or more! Plus, you'll be exercising your emergency generator at the same time.

For our residential customers

WAT41 - Electric Water Heater Conversion to Rate 41
Hot water at a cost that won't leave you cold! By rewiring your existing electric water heater to qualify for our low-cost "Rate 41" you can save money. It's that simple. There's no cost and no hidden charges. We'll make the calls, and we'll pay the bills. YOU keep the savings!

WRAP - Electric Water Heating Conservation Program
Keep your energy costs under cover! We'll insulate your water heater and install water-saving showerheads...at no charge! The net results are an increase in efficiency, significant energy savings, and lower costs. And it's free!

FILTER - Swimming Pool Energy Management Program
Keep your head and your energy costs above water! Beginning in June, 1988, we'll pay you up to $40 during the summer just for letting us re-program the time clock on your swimming pool filter so that it runs during our off-peak hours. This won't affect your pool use...but it will save you money and energy!

For our commercial and residential customers

AIRCON - Air Conditioner Incentive Program
Save some cold cash on your electric bills! By providing incentives to contractors for installations of central-air-conditioning systems and add-on heat pumps, we can help provide you with the most effective and economical units available. This program will begin in the spring of 1988.

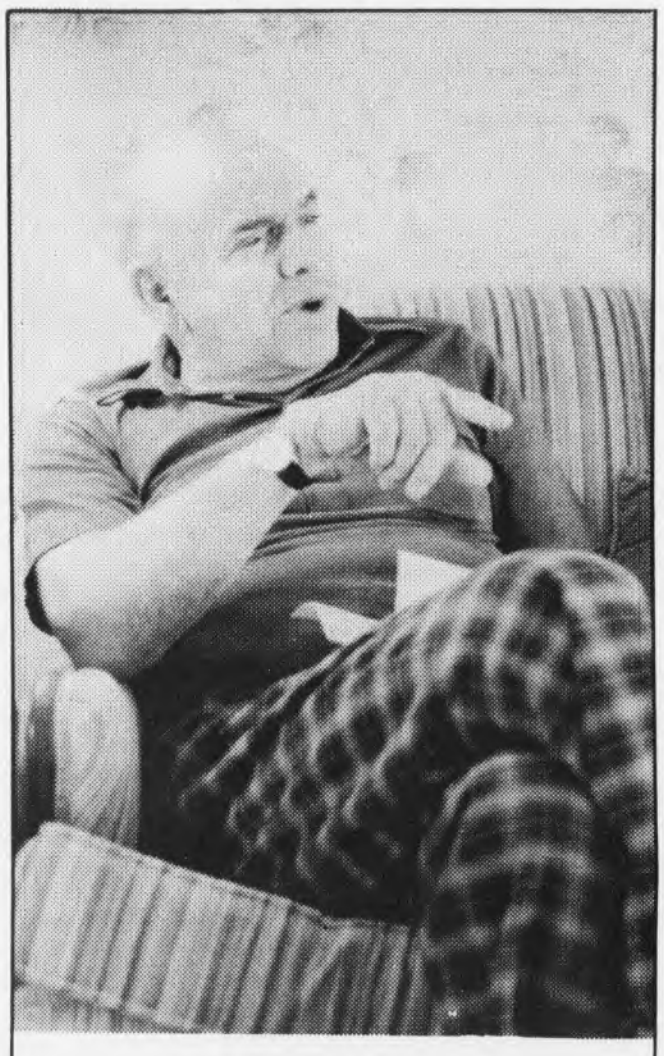
A perfect voting record that began in 1937



By Bob Tis
Mariner staff

Robert Leonard of Bancroft Road more than made his mark on the town of Cohasset.

Leonard was recently awarded a citation from Secretary of State Michael J. Connolly for having a perfect voting record for the past half-century.

"Your patriotism has been a source of strength and vitality for our democracy for many years, and it has not gone unnoticed," said Connolly in a letter to Leonard.

"It has been a wonderful privilege," said Leonard about his fifty years of votes. "I have been very lucky health-wise. I have also been in the right place at the right time." Leonard has historically been a democrat but is presently a registered independent.

Robert Leonard

Fifty years of consecutive voting is quite a record, especially considering that for most of those years absentee ballots have not been available and for many years feet were the only dependable mode of transportation.

Leonard's voting career started one month after his 21st birthday in 1937. He entered politics for the first time in 1938 when he asked town meeting for a new truck, an expenditure in those years on par with the police/fire renovations of the present. Town meeting, convinced by his stirring oratory, approved the truck, and a political career of over fifty years of service to democracy and dedication to the community began.

Three years later he beat Elmer Pratt by 411 votes for a seat on the planning board, which was victory by a landslide in those days. Aside from service on town boards Leonard supervised democracy in Cohasset serving over 12 years as an election officer.

With half a century of voting experience, Leonard has seen it all as far as local politics is concerned.

He recalled an election for the position of selectman when a friend of his, Tom Churchill beat the current state representative's father, Nathan Hurwitz by one vote. Leonard, who played basketball with Hurwitz, had lost a board of health election to Hurwitz a few years earlier by another slim margin.

A lifelong independent plumbing contractor and presently the plumbing inspector for the town, Leonard has seen all sides of this once very isolated hamlet.

Leonard recalled swimming with long-time resident Manuel Marks and a few kids whose family only lived in town for two summers; Jack and Joe Kennedy. Leonard later cast a vote for Jack Kennedy in 1960, only one of the votes Leonard has cast for succesful politicians.

Leonard has, in fact, cast votes for every winning president since 1940. If Gallup knew about Bob Leonard he would be a much more successful pollster.

Politics is not something new to Leonard's family. He recalled in the 1940's he had a cousin on the board of health in Scituate, Cohasset and Hingham. Leonard's father Manuel and Russel Tower were the first students to graduate from the Ripley Road school where all 12 grades were taught under one roof.

Leonard remains immersed in local politics.

"Currently we are very busy in my office," said the plumbing inspector. "Right now we have 72 jobs pending. This includes some big jobs as well including the Stop & Shop, Wheelwright farms and some condominiums. There is an awfully lot going on in Cohasset."

Leonard, who has greeted President Reagan and former Governor King in Cohasset, has some clear-cut views about what is going on in Cohasset.

"In previous years the town voter has been able to say his piece at town meeting. Now the lawyers and other extremely fluent people in politics do most of the talking. A lot of times a man with good ideas is not given a chance. Even if he is prepared often times he gets bewildered and people end up laughing. The meeting shouldn't try and rush them through," said Leonard.

Leonard also feels that big appropriations at town meeting should be handled in a different manner.

"Sometimes people don't like to be seen publicly voting for or against something. I think that those items should have a secret ballot or better yet a referendum at the town election. I think it is very important that everyone get a chance to vote on those questions," said Leonard.

Leonard also has problems with the annual town meeting always being held on a Saturday morning.

"People work all week and they want to sleep late, worry about their boat or play golf on Saturdays," said Leonard. "I can see Saturday afternoon but I think a Monday or a Tuesday evening is much better."

Leonard believes that the town is run very well.

"I don't think it matters much if there are three or five selectmen," said Leonard. "That doesn't have that much of an impact."

"People in this town don't want this and that on 3A. You must have taxable property," said Leonard, a firm supporter of low-income housing in Cohasset. "You can't have your cake and eat it too. You have to give a little."

Leonard has been a fixture at the town hall over the last five decades. He has worked for five different building inspectors; Jim Litchfield, Bob Dennis, Ed Poskus and Don Robbins.

"I have loved them all," said Leonard. "They have always treated me well."

Leonard is looking forward to his office moving from the third floor to the first floor in the new town hall.

"I have watched people, many of them quite elderly, climbing up those stairs for quite some time," said Leonard of the ancient town building. "They are so proud to walk up and pay their taxes. Often times they have to stop between floors and rest. But they are so determined. It is a wonderful thing to see."

Leonard would like to see the planning board enact a ten-year plan similar to the ones that Leonard put into operation during his tenure on the board.

"With a ten-year plan they can spend money on something different each year instead of having to deal with everything all at once," said Leonard.

"Good common sense," according to Leonard, is the most important quality that members of the town boards should possess.

"I think that it is great that people want to serve on these boards," said Leonard. "They should be qualified. I also believe that for all that these volunteers, for all the time they put in, that the town could well afford to give these people a nice meal out."

This being the case, the town owes Robert Leonard a debt it will never be able to repay for over fifty years of dedicated service.

Officials want to see more recycling at dump

By Bob Tis
Mariner staff

As usual, things at the Cedar Street landfill are piling up. However, with the dump's limited life expectancy and the less than positive reassurances about the trash to energy system, experts agree there is only one direction to look-- towards recycling.

"Yes, I would like to see more recycling," said dump impresario Joe Laugelle. "We have got to do something. Only a certain number of people recycle. I would say only between 30 and 40 percent."

"I explained to the board of health that there is only about three years left. We have to find an alternative. You should have to provide a spot for townspeople to take the debris that is lying around their house. As it stands right now we have a crisis situation on our hands. That is exactly what it is, a crisis."

"I have studied it. If we preserve what we have now, the town will always have somewhere to take it's trash. If there are strikes or problems with a new system, we can scrape a little dirt back and be in business again," said Laugelle, a veteran of 26 years of employment with the town.

The item that piles up the fastest is newspaper. Unfortunately, often times, especially after a weekend, the paper bins will fill up completely.

"I encourage people to take it back home," said Laugelle. "They come and take away the paper once a week. The bottom line is that there is no market for paper."

According to Laugelle, paper once sold for $45 a ton during the Fifties. Paper is not quite as coveted anymore and sells for between $1 and $2 a pound.

The true unsung heroes at the dump are the Boy Scouts. The Scouts have been involved with recycling since 1950, long before it became the trendy thing to do.

"We are looking into other things to do now," said Scoutmaster Merle Brown. "Things have really improved up at the landfill, but lately it hasn't been as good," said

Senior Center volunteers honored

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

The numbers are pretty impressive, but people are the primary reasons why the Council on Aging's senior center succeeds.

Eighty-nine of those reasons were honored at a special holiday luncheon Tuesday afternoon. The volunteer drivers of the Senior Shuttle van, senior center office help and program instructors were served an elegant luncheon at Kimball's By the Sea, courtesy of general manager Dan Leahy.

The volunteers who average 320 round trips each month, were honored for their service to the Council on Aging during the past year. This was the second year the luncheon was held in their honor.

It was noted by keynote speaker Emmet Schmarsow, from the state Executive Office of Elder Affairs, that "it is far greater to give, and the reward you get from volunteering is the reward of giving."

Tony Finnegan, an active volunteer contributor to the senior center, was absent from Tuesday's proceedings. But his wife Edna, another senior center volunteer, read from his text and explained that senior center

No new piers in harbor — bids are unimpressive

Monday night was a time for the selectmen to do a little house cleaning at Cohasset harbor.

After considerable discussion the board voted not to grant the award for a new pier in the harbor to the low bidder.

According to Harbormaster Steve Osborne, the low bidder, Total Marine Concepts of Scituate did not meet all of the specifications.

"They have only made one set of floats and they are unimpressive," said Osborne. The harbor committee set the specification that the company to be awarded the bid must have been in business for at least five years.

"We independently looked into many different floats," said John Pfaffman chairman of the harbor study committee. Pfaffman explained that they decided to bypass the idea of continuing with the more inexpensive wooden floats because of the amount of maintenance involved. Pfaffman also explained that the concrete floats that they had decided upon would be able to remain in the harbor year round.

However, Pfaffman was not happy with the low bidder's docks.

"I was not impressed. They were at various angles. I was unimpressed with the the iron fixtures used to hold the parts together. They were rusting as were many of the bolts. It is their first venture into floating docks," said a skeptical Pfaffman. "I think that we would be putting ourselves and the town into jeopardy. Much of what we see wrong with this is the reputation of the company."

Selectmen unanimously awarded the bid for the new pier to Concrete Floatation Systems Inc. of Plymouth for a bid of $10,584.

"The conclusion hinges on the fact that they didn't meet the specs," said selectman Cliff Mitman. "The other aspects of the company are immaterial."

Harbormaster Steve Osborne asked for a pay hike for his night patrol and his casual day laborers. Osborne said that the present pay scales for the unsupervised positions were not able to compete with what kids could receive as a starting wage at a fast food chain.

"As much as we would like to see them earn a good wage," said Rocco Laugelle, "we just cannot compete with private companies."

Osborne held that their ability to operate independently and often without supervision made their job more complicated than just casual labor.

Selectmen told Osborne that there was no limit to the number of assistant harbormasters that he could appoint. In the past, former harbormaster Harry Ritter would appoint workers to the position of assistant harbormaster so that they could receive a pay increase.

John Pfaffman warned the board that the Coast Guard will be making life a little more difficult for the yachting crew in the future.

"They are worried that recreational boating is getting out of hand. They will be using breathalyzers and radar guns.

"I would like to have someone I can depend on, " said Osborne. "It is not that I can't depend on the ones that I have now. It is just that I have very little assurance that

White Christmas arrives Dec. 13

By Bob Tis
Mariner staff

Wake the neighbors and alert the kids, Santa Claus is coming to town.

He will be arriving by helicopter this Sunday, Dec. 13, for the fourth annual Chamber of Commerce holiday celebration. The theme of this year's extravaganza is, "White Christmas."

Festivities begin at 11:00 a.m. at the Cushing Plaza parking lot where Santa will arrive direct from the North Pole to greet children of all ages. Santa will be accompanied by some of his Reindeer who have been in the area doing some promotional work, as well as a giant snowman and some of Santa's elves.

Four ponies will be giving young buckaroos rides at the Plaza. Santa will be available for pictures and will present candy to youngsters.

A refurbished antique fire engine will pick up Santa and whisk him away to Stop & Shop plaza where the fun will continue.

At approximately 1:00 p.m. Santa will arrive on the Town Common via fire truck.

"We want to make sure that everyone knows to go down to the common at 1:00 because there will be quite a few surprises," said Marie Higgins co-chairman of the event.

The town green will take on a carnival setting on Sunday. There will be a moonwalk and games of skill as well as a fish pond where everyone can win a prize. Pony rides will be going on all afternoon and radio station WATD will be broadcasting live from the common.

(See page 6)

Cohasset's week . . .

Golden on energy

State Sen. William B. Golden, D-Weymouth, will be the featured speaker at a meeting of Citizens Urging Responsible Energy (Cure) at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 17, at the Old Town Hall in Duxbury.

The senator will discuss alternatives for replacing the energy that would be lost if the Pilgrim Power Plant were closed. The public is invited to attend.

Stop & Shop sign OK'd

The board of appeals bartered and compromised with Kenneth Sawyer of University Brink Sign Co. and finally agreed to a 192 square-foot main sign for the new Super Stop & Shop.

The company's standard sign is a 300-square-foot sign with bright red letters. The town's present zoning bylaw allows for only a 25-square-foot sign. The approved sign will be burgandy instead of red and illuminated from within.

The appeals board would not approve a request to allow eight 16-square foot signs that would advertise specific departments including a bakery, a bookstore, and a florist.

One reason the board stated for approving the large sign was that if there were numerous smaller stores their 25 square-foot signs would all add up the the size of this larger one.

One-way decision

The possibility of future parking problems at the Town Hall during renovations convinced selectmen to make Highland Avenue a one-way street during business hours.

Highland Avenue will become one-way between Jason and Long roads from 7 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday.

"It is a problem and it really hasn't started yet," said selectmen Rocco Laugelle.

Wayne Sawchuck a local contractor suggested that a 30 car parking lot be graded before the ground freezes.

Erik Belz, 2, of Cohasset holds tight to his new truck — a purchase at last weekend's Newcomer's Club party in Scituate.

Sawchuk said that this lot would provide space for contractor's vehicles during the renovation project.

Bjorkland plans approved

The appeals board finally gave in and approved a special permit for Steve Bjorkland to build a 1,500 square foot storage garage capped by office space at 15 Marion Way. A direct line dividing the highway business and residential zones runs directly through Bjorkland's property. Bjorkland's home is also located on the property. The present zoning bylaw prohibits commercial buildings within 100 feet of a residential home. Bjorkland has been seeking approval for this home/office building well over a year.

Firefighter facts

Fire Chief Daniel Brock informed selectmen this week that, for Cohasset to maintain the rating that residential insurance is now based on, the town would have to restore the manpower to the 28 firefighter level and build a second station on 3A among other things.

The chief sent selectmen a letter in response to recommendations of ISO Commercial Risk Services Inc., detailing the improvements in the fire department during the past year.

"I recommend that the board of selectmen take a positive attitude toward the town's fire service," Brock told selectmen. "The board of selectmen should be aware that cutbacks since the rating of 1980 will adversely effect the town's insurance rates. Significant changes as the reduction in force from 28 to 24 firefighters, the reduction in the number of stations from 3 to 1, and the reduction in pumpers from five to three all reduce the effectiveness and the rating for Cohasset's fire service. There is the possibility that the rating may drop to a 6 not just to 5."

Selectman were surprised by arrival of this letter.

Hydrant warning

— IMPORTANT —

It is illegal to plow snow over a fire hydrant or in any way to obstruct a hydrant.

"Violation of this section shall be punished by imprisonment for not more than one month or by a fine of not more than $1000 or both," according to state law.

Violators will be prosecuted.

Recycling at dump . . .

Brown who is also distraught with the drop in the price of paper.

Eagle Scout projects have been responsible for the entire recycling area at the Cedar Street landfill. Scouts have built the shack where reusable items can be swapped as one enters the landfill.

"It is called take it or leave it," said Arthur Lehr chairman of the recycling board. Lehr explained that many items such as bicycles, lamps, rugs, spare parts of any kind and just about anything else are available at the shack.

Scouts have also been responsible for a ramp that allows glass and aluminum recyclers to perch above the recycling machine. A scout is now seeking approval from the health board to work on a landscaping project.

Lehr estimates that his recycling efforts save the landfill several hundred tons of material a year. Lehr does not know how many years of life the recycling has saved the dump, but we can be sure it has been quite a few.

"In the beginning the initial intent was to raise money for the scouts," said Lehr who began with a paper drop off in a Main Street garage.

"We expanded into glass, aluminum and white metal," explained Lehr. "Something new that we are doing to save the dump further is a composting operation. We pile up leaves and the tractor moves them around. When they get down to compost, it is free for the taking."

According to Lehr, his leaf pile is now as big as a house from the fall rakings. "Any publicity we might receive would be great," said Lehr. "We need it bad. It is really a critical situation at the dump."

Lehr explained that the money aspect of recycling has, "all dried up."

"It is not a money-making thing anymore," Lehr continued. We just do it to keep as much as possible out of the dump."

According to Lehr, the problem is, "getting rid of the material on the other end."

"The price is way down on paper and aluminum. I believe that the government should get involved and ask companies to use recycled goods instead of cutting down new trees."

Lehr explained that all of the surrounding towns are now charged for paper pick up, but because of his many years of doing business with the Sugarmen Company of Quincy they still pick it up for free.

Lehr and his board estimate that only about 20 percent of the people that use the dump actually recycle. Lehr said that a lot of people deposit their paper and then throw everything else away including bottles and cans.

Cans and bottles with deposits on them are collected and returned. Glass and aluminum are crushed and recycled with all of the proceeds going to the Boy Scouts.

Selectmen agreed that Osborne could set up a new pay classification that would fit in between casual labor and night patrol as far as pay was concerned.

In other harbor news selectmen indicated that they will be seeking an agreement with the Department of Environmental Management regarding the dredging of the harbor sometime next week.

Looking Good is Easy

Council on Aging honors volunteers . . .

volunteers saved the town almost $24,000 this year. Nine office volunteers saved the town $4,792 this year; 29 program volunteer instructors saved $5,720; 68 van drivers saved $12,240; and 12 unpaid phone callers saved $1,050.

"That is a substantial savings when you realize the amount the town does not have to pay out in tax revenue," she stated. In behalf of her husband, she said, "I recommend you get to know each well and be proud of your many contributions to the town. As far as I am concerned, you are the nicest people in the town. You make Cohasset the envy of the South Shore."

Prior to the luncheon, Rev. John J. Keohane, chairman of the Council on Aging, blessed the gathering of friends and neighbors. "We thank God for our friends and remember the many who are friendless. We ask to bless our gathering and the food and ourselves to his service. We remember that the volunteer work you do is helping in the Lord's service."

Sen William Golden, a former resident of Cohasset, told his former neighbors it was a joy to be back in his hometown during the holiday season. "I associate this season with Alice Daunt's kindergarten class, or June Simeone's homeroom cookies," he laughed. Regarding the importance of senior volunteers, Sen Golden said, "I get so many calls from people in need. There is no way we can ever meet all their requirements. Our only hope to meet those needs rests with you.

Bidding his farewell to the volunteers, Sen Golden noted, "every time I come to Cohasset I wish I never left."

Gerard Keating, a member of the Council on Aging, expressed the counil's gratitude to the volunteers. "We are probably the only community in this area that has a program as active as ours that is run strictly by volunteers." He noted it has been a longstanding goal of the council not to become a financial burden to the town.

"We are attempting to operate efficiently and cost-effectively," he stated. "To you volunteers, the Council on Aging is very grateful for driving on weekends, holidays and Sundays. We are deeply indebted to you all."

Kathy Bryanton, director of the senior center, read a letter from a woman who used the town-sponsored van this summer for trips to physicians and stores. Because she is handicapped, the SCOOT van was made available to the elderly resident.

Among the Council on Aging officials who honored their volunteer workers Tuesday were: (l to r) Rev. John Keohane, chairman, Emmet Schmarson, EOEA official, Jane Hamilton, treasurer, Kathy Bryanton, senior center director, Gerard Keating, and Sen. Bill Golden. (Kym Marcella)

The woman said, "I would not know what to do without the senior van. It is my only means of transportation to my doctors, to the grocery stores and to the different malls. The drivers are always helpful and friendly. Lastly, I feel I have made very good friends in Cohasset while riding on the van."

As Bryanton told the honored guests, "she feels you've given a tremendous amount to her, and she and I thank you for it."

The last speaker at Tuesday's luncheon was EOEA official Schmarsow. An outspoken advocate of statistics, Schmarsow told the volunteers that state grant money is forwarded to the town for needed programs "because you've earned it. Since the beginning of the Council on Aging, you have spread your wings with programs that are serving phenomenal numbers. The people you service is the fastest growing segment of our population. The fastest growing of that number are the old, old - the frail elderly.

"The average age of the people you service is 78 years. You're helping them lead a more active life. You're keeping them alive," he stated. Cohasset senior center volunteers average 550 hours per month, three times the state average.

I have seen much larger communities give 30 hours of volunteer work per month. You have shown your commitment through people. We couldn't live without volunteers," he continued.

Statistics show that $8 million is saved in this state each year by volunteer service to the community.

Schmarsow noted that grant money provided Cohasset is actually returning money to the community. "And we are delighted to give that money back," he stated, noting that he will be in close contact with Council on Aging personnel as they apply for additional grants.

"The people you serve need your service," he said. "We say thank you. There is not enough money in the state treasury to pay you for what you are doing."

Thomas Burke, a Sunday shuttle driver, said in behalf of his crew of drivers, "we have gained a real rewarding experience. It has been a joy, not a toil."

And in behalf of the Council on Aging members, Keating told the volunteers, "thank you for making the life of the senior citizens so much easier and better."

The following volunteers were honored Tuesday by the Council on Aging:

Historical gifts perfect present for holidays

The Cohasset Historical Society offers a selection of Cohasset-related historical items worth careful consideration as gifts in this holiday season.

The definitive history of the town, first published in 1898 and recently reprinted by the Society is Rev. E. Victor Bigelow's monumental "Narrative History of Cohasset", first volume. This uniquely written narrative traces the history of its community from first beginnings up to the date of publication.

It is the fascinating story of a small New England farming and seafaring village which has grown into a modern 20th century suburb. The Bigelow History is illustrated with early photographs of Cohasset and contains several unusual maps of the town showing its development through the three centuries following the first settlement.

A second book offered by the Society is the recent Society paperback reprint of Edmund Pomeroy Collier's fascinating "Cohasset's Deep Sea Captains". Written by the son of one of Cohasset's most illustrious 19th century "Deep Sea Captains" (Capt. James Collier) this unusual book gives a wealth of information about many of the seafarers who journeyed to all parts of the world but called Cohasset their home. "Deep Sea Captains" is an informative as well as interesting glimpse into an important age now long past, and tells the story of a true American adventure in which this town played and important and fascinating part.

Of the two Cohasset historical books offered by the Society the Bigelow "Narrative History" sells for $20 plus $1 tax, and the Collier "Deep Sea Captains" is $8.50, tax included. Also on the list of "stocking stuffers" offered by the Historical Society are Pairpoint glass cup plates picturing the famous lighthouse on Minot's Ledge. Available in green, cobalt and clear colors, these exquisite hand-made works reproduce an early 19th century art form; small but finely made glass plates used in an age when "teacups had no handles" and required an additional small plate upon which to set the steaming hot teacup. The Society's Pairpoint Glass Minot's Light Cup Plates cost $6 with $.30 tax, and slightly imperfect plates of second grade, in the same colors as well as in amethyst and amber shades, are available at one-half price.

New this year to the list of holiday gift ideas are a limited number of Historical Society canvas tote bags. Of medium size, these canvas tote bags were specially made for the Society by Goodwin Graphics of Cohasset.

All the holiday gift items are available through the Cohasset Historical Society. For further information please call the Society at 383-6930. The Bigelow "Narrative History" and Minot's Light cup plates (first grade only) also are available at Fleming's, Elm Street, Cohasset Center.

White Christmas . . .

At 4:00 p.m. the official lighting of the common will take place. All of the cherry trees surrounding the duck pond will glow with white lights throughout the Christmas season. Following this there will be a carillon concert from the melodic bells of St. Stephen's church.

A professional ice-sculpter from Hugos will be on hand Saturday. He will arrive with a block of ice and transform the block into a work of art right before everyone's eyes.

All day long tickets for the Chamber of Commerce raffle will be on sale. Local merchants have donated quite a bundle of prizes. Lucky ticket holders might be spending an all expense paid weekend in Atlantic City, dining out at Boston's Long Wharf or enjoying a Celtic's game at the Garden. Five hopefully hungry shoppers will receive gift certificates from the Stop& Shop. A $150 skateboard will be raffled as well as a generous supply of home heating oil.

Fran Coffee of the Red Lion Inn, and a co-chairman of the "White Christmas" committee, will be supervising lunch which will be available on the common. Coffee plans to have hamburgers, hot dogs, pizza, some of his famous Red Lion Inn chowder as well as a few surprises.

Weather permitting an ice show by profesional skaters will take place on the common's duck pond. A choral group from the high school will also be performing a host of Christmas hits.

Last year, despite a bitter cold day, over 1000 people braved the elements to greet Santa.

"We are expecting a bigger crowd this year," said Higgins. "It is a good chance for everyone to get together."

"Right now we are praying that it doesn't rain," said Coffee. "It is a good time of year and it is all for charity. It should be a lot of fun."

Selectmen's briefs . . .

Fair housing snafu

Selectmen have set a meeting with the housing authority members for January 4, to try and clear up fair housing agreement snafu. The housing authority recently refused to sign the agreement because of what they felt were illegalities in the wording. Executive Don Andrew estimated that if all goes smoothly, the document could be accepted by the Executive Office of Community Development by mid February. Andrew was unsure of any repercussions that might occur from the document's tardiness.

Transfer requests

Selectmen grudgingly approved two transfer requests on Monday night. By a vote ot 3-2, with Martha Gjesteby and Jim Gallagher voting in the negative, the approval was given for $3,900 for additional funds for an audit. Selectmen also agreed to pick up the tab for a Nov. 14, 1986 accident because insurance investigators found the town to be negligent. The sum of $1,603 will be payed because a chain in the driveway of a town salt shed was not flagged or painted. Selectmen also approved the sum of $78 for the abatement of ambulance bills.

Officers elected

The Cohasset Common Historic District Commission has elected their new officers for 1987-88. The commissions new chairman will be James Murphy. Donald Evans will be vice-chairman and Hubert Van Der Lugt will be secretary.

The commission also informed selectmen that one of their conditions for approval to the town hall addition was that the temporary handicap ramp in front of the town hall be removed. James Sandell, the present chairman, told selectmen that the ramp should not be removed before the completion of a permenant ramp and that he hoped there was no confusion.

Limited hall use

A memorandum from building inspector Don Robbins informed selectmen that during renovations the number of people in the town hall auditorium should be limited to 60. Robbins, who conferred with the fire chief, suggested that the board, "severely restrict the use" of the auditorium by outside organizations.

New boating policy

In a letter to mooring owners, harbormaster Steve Osborne, informed boat owners of his new policy concerning all boat owners. Beginning April 1, 1988 an annual 20 percent of the moorings will be inspected by Osborne. The first group will be those mooring owners whose last name begins with A through H. It will be the mooring owners responsibility to contact the harbor department and let Osborne know when he can have his mooring hauled.

In his letter Osborne suggests that boat-owners employ a mooring contractor to perform this job. He also states that if the boat owner wants to do the job himself, Osborne will be able to assist.

All moorings will be placed on Government Island for an inspection and will have to conform to mooring specifications before going back into service.

At the November 17, Harbormasters Association meeting in Sagamore, Cohasset harbormaster Steve Osborne was nominated and approved by the members to carry out the position of Secretary for one year. Osborne will attend the Monday evening meetings throughout the year.

Shellfishing ban

The town has received notice that the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering have extended the prohibition for shellfishing permits for an additional 30 days. The area in which digging is prohibited is "the waters and flats and all tributaries thereto of Cohasset Harbor south of a line drawn west from the foot of Glades Road on Scituate Neck to Windmill point."

A musical success

The Wizard of Oz was performed to capacity crowds this past weekend.

This all-school musical was enthusiastically received by audiences, and aside from a moment or two of confusion when the scarecrow fell of his post during Saturday night's performance, all went smoothly.

The cast extended their thanks to the following: Coleen Lucas, Tom Hughes, Bryan Marks, Collen Foley, and Andrea Millis, to name a few. All in all, it was a great success, and congratulations are due to all who worked so hard on making the show so wonderful!

around town

Black Rock Beach is deserted this time of year — but before you know it — sunworshippers will return.

☐ Our whole town should be "bustin' their buttons" as the Fall Sports season comes to an end! For being one of the smallest schools in the league, get a look at this! We had seven football players make the All-star team in the league: Craig Mulcahy, Adam Whitman, Mike Meets-Glen Froio, Derek Lacks, Peter Sandbloom and Matt Maloney (the last two boys made the team both offensively and defensively)! Matt and Peter also made the Boston Globe All-star team for their offensive prowess. In soccer, boys, there were six of CHS' finest named to the All-stars: Joel and Jim Reidy, James Gallagher, Todd Fitzpatrick, David Shultz, Ned Chase and Ian Smart. Not only that, their coach, Dan Magner, was named Coach of the Year for our division by the Boston Globe! A much-deserved honor indeed! Girls Soccer had four girls on the roster: Jen Coley, Kerry Kirkendall, Katie Lord and Vickie Kelley. Field hockey gals were given to you a few weeks ago. Lets hear a big round of applause for these athletes, be sure you tell them what a good job they have done when you see them. You can bet you'll see their names in the future.

☐ Hats off to Martha Dellorfano and Patricia Dellorfano who achieved Second Honors for the first marking period at Notre Dame academy in Hingham. Both of the girls are members of the class of 1988.

☐ When you see him, be sure to give him best wishes and tons of hugs Roger Pompeo that is! Roger's birthday is coming up soon, and it could be the last one that we will be allowed to talk about (he's getting to THAT age). A human dynamo that is loved by all that know him, we sure do wish him health and happiness and continued success in his future.

☐ Our little town will surely miss Mercie Nichols! She was always in the background doing something special for the people that she knew needed a lift, she was always smiling, and she was always willing to do anything she could to make our little world a better one. She will surely never be forgotten.

☐ Julie Nussdorfer, daughter of Daniel and Jayne Nussdorfer of Cohasset, is on the Fall Honor Roll at the Stoneleigh-Burnham School in Greenfield, Massachusetts. Julie received Second Honors with an 85 percent average.

Julie is a sophomore at the school and a member of the school's Riding Club.

☐ Doris Golden called with an invitation for all to share. Doris is having a Christmas Cookie Swap on Tuesday, Dec. 15th from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. at her home on 2 Bound Brook Lane. It works as follows: you bring two dozen of your favorite Christmas Cookie recipe and, when you leave, you take home two dozen assorted cookies that have been baked by the others that are there. Bring a friend (make sure that she brings two dozen cookies too) and have a lovely time. An added bonus is that you will be able to see Doris' beautifully decorated home, something that is always spectacular during the holidays. Have fun, and happy munching!

A tug of war

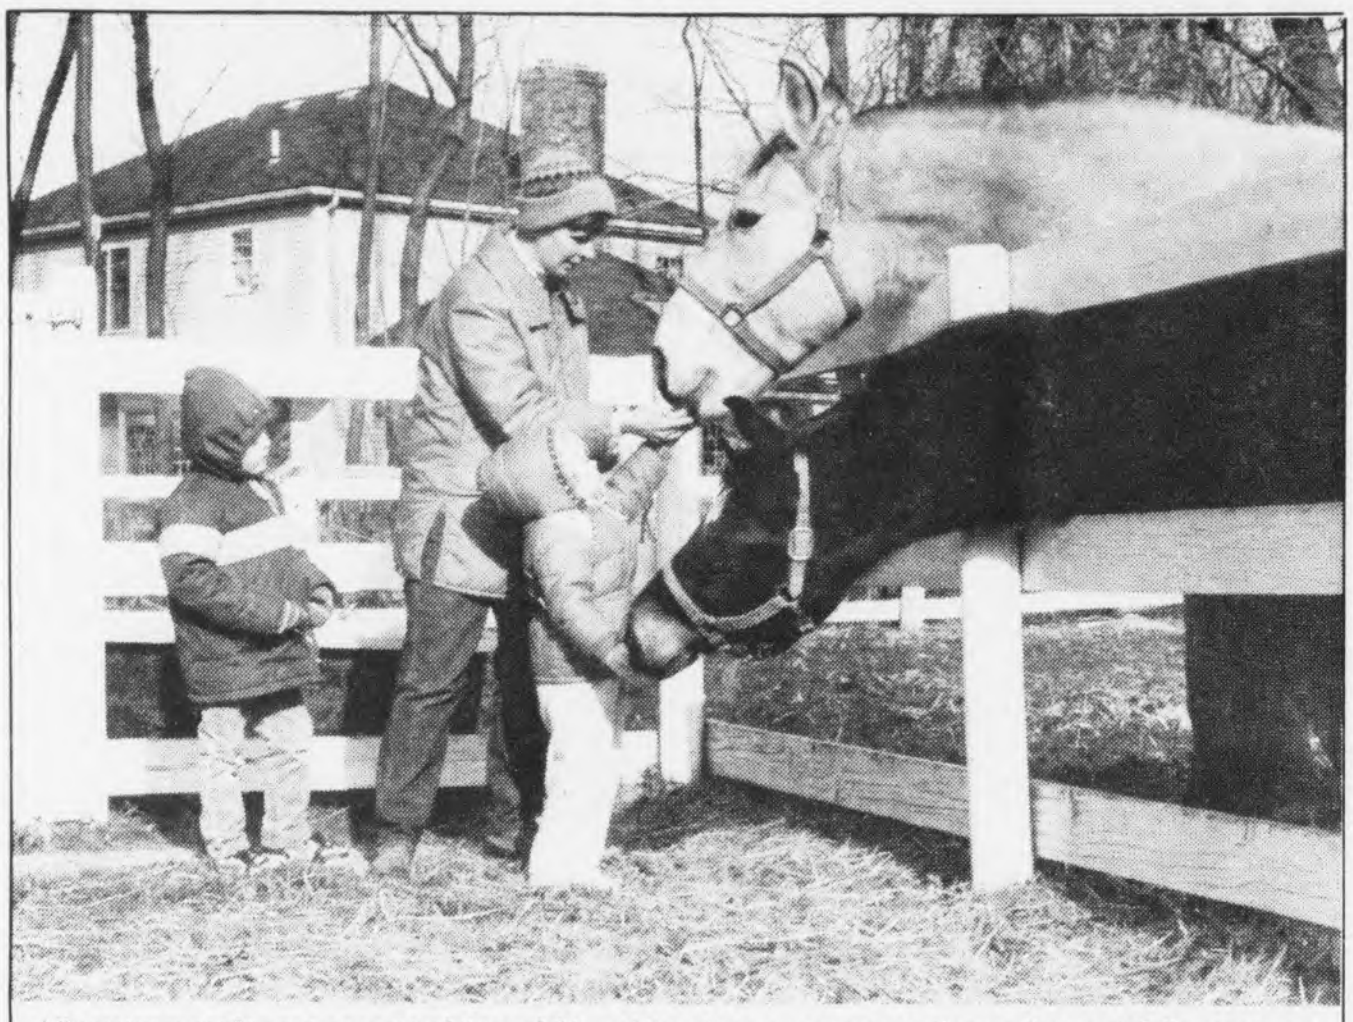
It is a subject that will not die. This week, the battle has been depicted as a choice between Jesus Christ and Santa Claus, although that is reducing the problem to its most simple, sensational form.

The dilemma this week is a proposal by local clergy to ban the use of town property by organizied groups on Sunday mornings. And, right in the middle of the dialogue, steps the annual White Christmas in Cohasset, the Chamber of Commerce's family holiday festivities.

Unfortunately for the Chamber organizers, they scheduled their activities months ago - long before this proposal was aired to the public. It takes months to arrange a visit from Santa, particularly when his arrival is by helicoptor. They did not know at the time that Sunday activities would be officially frowned upon.

Now, some may argue that common sense should dictate that no organized activities should take place on the traditional morning of worship. But, we're sure for many Chamber members, as well as a number of residents, Sunday morning is not their Sabbath. For some, Saturday is their day of rest with the family.

For those of us who publish weekly newspapers, a brief respite from our schedule is available on Thursday mornings. For a certain ad representative we know, Tuesday afternoon is a great day to relax and talk once again with family members. Late Sunday morning, in fact, may be the best time for families to attend White Christmas festivities - especially for Catholic families who have already met their worship obligations by attending Saturday evening Mass.



We don't mean to be facetious about a serious subject. A day of leisure, of quality time with the family, are the most important hours in our busy week. And worshipping with your family is perhaps the most rewarding way to spend that time.

But the hard-working members of the Cohasset chamber, an organization that in its brief existence has given so much to enhance the quality of this town, should not be chastized.

They worked hard to bring this day of family fun into our town. We can think of no better way, aside from some time spent in prayer, to be with your family. It will surely be a wonderful, special time for children and parents.

Perhaps the local clergy could be more flexible in their hours of worship - scheduling an earlier morning service or a late afternoon service in addition to their traditional times. Just as the Catholic faith offers a variety of Mass times, maybe the other churches should initiate a similar schedule. Rather than cutting into the family time of our local clergy, who certainly enjoy White Christmas as much as anyone else, a second worship service could be held Sunday evenings or early mornings. Perhaps a selected church family could officiate at the second service - similar to the way in which the Unitarian Church functions in the summer. That would leave families free to attend church, and to spend the remaining time together, participating in any activity or non-activity they choose.

We hate to see Sunday's day of fun reduced to a tug-of-war between the secular and the religious. We ask all families to attend whatever service of worship they choose, and to spend the remaining time with their family at White Christmas or any other event they prefer. There is no need to choose between religious obligation and community spirit. Have a wonderful day, wherever you are.

All creatures need to put on some winter weight, and these horses are no exceptions as they gratefully accept any delicious donations. (Kym Marcella photo)

Clarification on Sunday resolution

Letters

To the Editor:

The Cohasset clergy appreciate the extensive coverage the Cohasset Mariner has given to our resolution concerning the scheduling of Sunday morning activities. There seem to be several points of confusion, however, with regard to the issue the clergy are attempting raise for public debate and action.

Your headline, "Sunday ban on field use gains support" it seems to me is unnecessarily inflammatory bringing to mind zealous clergy advocating book burning and driving plays and movies out of the neighborhood. What we are asking is not so much a ban as it is consideration and cooperation in the scheduling of organized activities so that they will not come into conflict with one another. The "White Christmas" event announced on page 26 of the Mariner provides an excellent case in point. Here we have the Chamber of Commerce placing an activity designed to attract children to a shopping plaza at 11:00 a.m. on Sunday morning at the very same time the churches of the community will be trying to educate children about the birth of Jesus which Christmas celebrates. It is as if I had planned a birthday party for my child inviting the neighborhood children to come to my home and then my next door neighbor went out and hired a brass band and Bozo the clown to attract the children away from attending my party. Selectman Mitman correctly interpreted the spirit of our resolution when he indicated a willingness in the future to ask those seeking to use town property on Sunday mornings if there was not an alternative time their activity could be scheduled. We believe that in most cases alternative times are available.

Furthermore it should be understood that we did not ask for a "ban on field use" with regard to individuals or groups of people acting as individuals as seems to be indicated in your editorial. Any citizen of the town should have access to public lands, and if persons choose to play a game of tennis or sail a boat or gather for an informal game of softball or soccer using public property on Sunday morning they have every right to do so. The Cohasset Sailing Club for example is open on Sunday mornings for individuals who wish to go sailing, but does not schedule sailing races or children's classes at that time. Our concern is with organized sports or other activities where the person's choice is really foreclosed by pressure to be "part of the team," and where in fact their right to participate in the activity at other times may be jeopardized by a failure to participate when a game or practice has been scheduled on a Sunday morning.

In reporting debate on our resolution an important distinction must be made between the statement regarding Sunday morning activities in Cohasset which seven of the town's clergy signed and the larger philosophical and political proposition of a national day of rest which I alone set forth. Mr. David Mittell Jr.'s commentary in the second section of the Mariner reflects confusion on this point. Our resolution mentioned Sunday morning as a time when all of the religious congregations in Cohasset currently hold services of worship, but we are not suggesting that this time frame apply in other communities. To the contrary, under the broad discussion of a universal day of rest Mr. Cutler of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church clearly stated that any day of the week might be chosen. Two of the seven clergy signing our resolution are not "Christian clergy" and none of us wishes to be dogmatic or sectarian in our approach to this complex issue. We are flexible and wish to see the rights of all religious and non-religious groups protected while asking that more respect be shown to the place of religion within the community in planning the various activities which lay claim to our time and support.

Neither a common day of rest or our specific proposal to give more attention to the time of church services in scheduling the use of town land in Cohasset raises a Constitutional issue as Selectman Gjesteby suggests. Government has long held the authority to structure our common calendar, to declare times when business and governmental activities are to be suspended and to determine when and how government property shall be used. Our interest is not in creating conflict, but to encourage cooperation and respect for the various institutions at work within our town. There needs to be time for education, for sports, for business, for government, but we believe a healthy society also makes time for family and religion, and clearly recognizes that need in the planning of our community calendar, and the use of our town properties.

Complaint about dump odor

To the Editor:

(This letter was written to William F. Cass and James Miller, directors of The Department of Environmental Quality Engineering Ed.)

Dear Messrs. Cass and Miller:

I read with dismay articles in my local newspaper reporting that DEQE considers the Cohasset Heights Landfill to be a properly managed facility. Twice each weekday I pass along Route 3A near the landfill site. Frequently, the air surrounding the landfill site (perhaps for a quarter mile before and after the road leading from Route 3A to the site) is permeated by a nauseating chemical smell. While I have noticed this smell since moving to the South Shore in December of 1986, I am writing now because the odor has intensified and occurs more frequently (every day from 9 through 13 November). I find it hard to imagine that DEQE could consider this landfill, which produces such repulsive, unnatural smelling odors, to be properly managed.

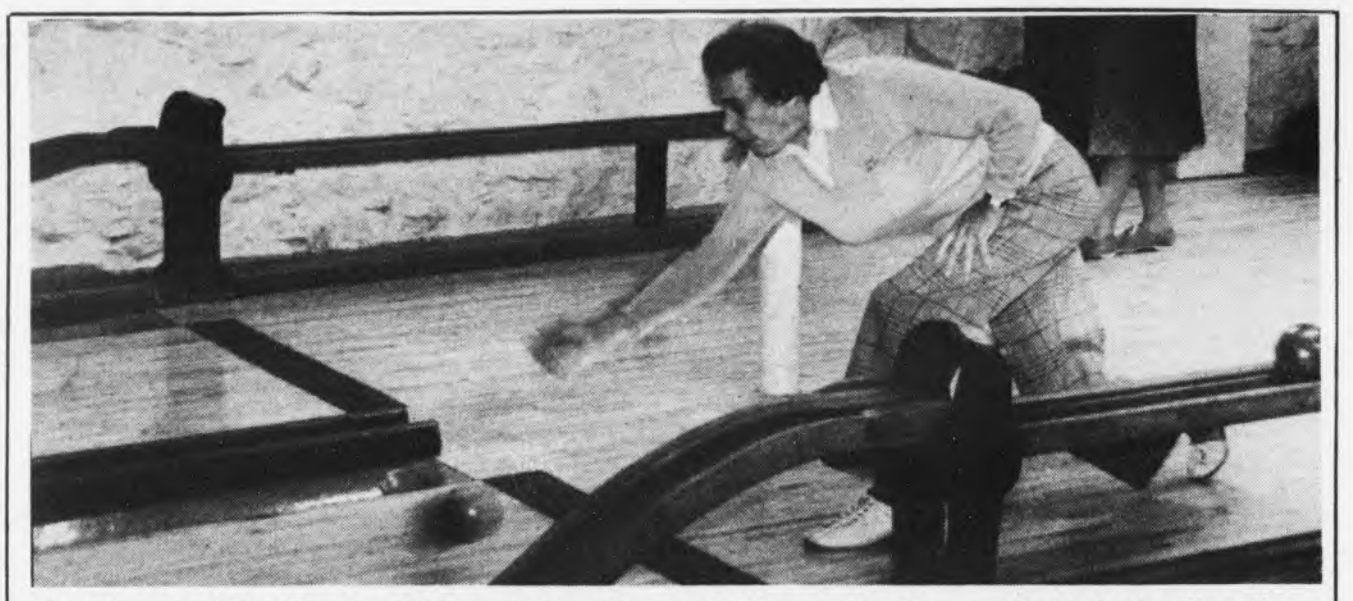
Cohasset Council on Aging is pleased to announce that the Executive Office of Elder Affairs will award the sum of $2,763.00. The Grant was allocated from the Elder Affairs FY 1988 Formula Grant Program.

The Cohasset Council on Aging, through the acceptance of this award, agrees to conduct and operate programs in accordance with the original grant application. This grant will be used for programs in senior exercise, equipment and supplies by the Council.

THE NUTRITION STUDY

The U.S.D.A. Human Nutrition Research Center on Aging at Tufts University is conducting a study to determine the effects of exercise on glucose metabolism in adults. Some individuals are more likely to develop diabetes as adults and exercise is believed to have the potential to reverse this process to further evaluate the changes of glucose metabolism with age.



The Human Nutrition Research Center is now looking for adult volunteers over the age of 50 to participate in an exercise training program. If you are slightly overweight, currently not exercising, have a family history of diabetes, you may have a higher risk of developing diabetes. Please call the H.N.R.C. at 556-3300 and volunteer to improve your own health as well as others. Ask for information on Study #088. You will receive a stipend of $700.

STORM POLICY

On snowy days, activities at the Cohasset Senior Center and van transportation may be cancelled. Listen to Radio Station (1300) W.J.D.A. between 7:30 and 9:30 a.m. If the Cohasset Public Schools are cancelled, there will be no transportation. The COA Office will observe the same hours as Town Hall.

HOLIDAY PARTY

Mark your calendar! Friday, Dec. 18th. Council on Aging is planning a fun filled Holiday Party at the Senior Center, 3 No. Main St. Trim-a-Tree at 11:00 a.m., Light Lunch at 12 Noon, and goodies served at 1:00 p.m. All are invited!

Betty Pearce of the "Roaring 20's" unwinds and lets the ball loose at the Community Center bowling alley.

The Senior Strutters depart for their next walking destination. On this day, the Strutters were on their way to Nantasket Beach for a brisk stroll. (Dave Sullivan)

Sen. Golden files bills for legislative session

State Sen. William Golden, D-Weymouth, has filed several environmental action bills for next year's legislative session.

One would provide financial assistance to cities, towns, and districts in order to remedy damage from combined storm and sanitary sewers which frequently spill pollution after periods of heavy rain.

The intent of this bill is to avoid increased water and sewage costs to rate payers across the state.

Another bill seeks to prohibit the Department Of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) from approving groundwater discharge permits or operational permits for any privately owned or maintained small sewage treatment plant facilities until the DEQE establishes regulations to control the siting, operation, replacement, financial responsibility, and ownership of such facilities.

Golden said he hopes this legislation will provide towns with the guidelines and authority to implement new technologies regarding package sewage treatment facilities.

"The bill provides for local participation in the regulatory process and, in fact, this participation is essential to its successful and consistent implementation," he said.

An additional bill which Golden filed would establish a separate fund for environmental action.

The fund would build from civil penalties through judicial enforcement proceedings by DEQE brought against polluters.

Amounts credited to this fund shall be used, subject to appropriation, soley to provide grants to municipalities and non-profit groups for activities to preserve, enhance and protect the local environment.

Golden also co-sponsored the following legislation:

- a landbank bill which would create a dedicated fund for the financing of open space and affordable housing:
- legislation to regulate the production of plastic waste;
- legislation to increase the funding for the office of Coastal Zone Management,
- legislation to regulate nuclear power,
- legislation to promote recycling and composting of solid waste, and
- a bill to enhance local control of growth and development through local zoning.

"The rapid expansion of growth and development has resulted in an urgent need to enhance our ability, particularly at the local level, to control the impact of such growth on public health and the environment," said Golden.

Golden addresses Silver Haired Legislature

State Sen. William B. Golden, D-Weymouth, addressed the Silver Haired Legislature (SHL) at the annual legislative session last week at the Park Plaza Hotel in Boston.

The senator sponsored two bills on their behalf in the last legislative session and congratulated the members for their hard work and dedication in working together for passage of this legislation.

Senate No. 122, an Act providing representation of the elderly at the county level, was enacted as Chapter 197 in the General Laws of 1987.

Senate No. 791, an act relative to special homestead protection for elderly and disabled persons, was enacted as Chapter 194.

At the luncheon Golden outlined the expanded protection the Homestead Protection Act will now provide to the elderly and disabled.

Golden also discussed new legislation which he has authored or cosponsored and filed in order to give elderly citizens additional rights and resources.

Senate No. 680, was sponsored by Golden in conjunction with the Silver Haired Legislature in 1986 and then refiled.

This month for continued consideration, is intended to provide a 5 percent discount on the premium for every motor vehicle liability insurance policy issued to persons between the ages of 50 and 65.

Those individuals eligible for the discount will have to have been awarded a certificate of satisfactory completion of the American Association of Retired Persons 55 Alive/mature driving program or another state-approved driver improvement course.

Senate No. 538, cosponsored by Golden last year and refiled this year, would provide assistance to the working, disabled, and elderly poor.

Stop in during the White Christmas celebration and enjoy the creative ambiance of the new South Shore Art Center. Also open for the public's enjoyment will be the Center's current invitational exhibit, Fine Crafts, works by eight artisans.

Susan Pussilano shows Ellen Winn a handmade wreath while Ruth Grinnell waits her turn at the art center gift shop. The store hours have been expanded to include M-F, 10 a.m. - 4 p.m.; Sat., Dec. 19, 10 a.m. - 4 p.m.; and Sun., Dec. 20, 1-4 p.m. (Kym Marcella)

Legislature . . .

Also refiled for this year is Senate No. 1334 which would provide an income tax credit for families caring at home for relatives who are elderly or victims of Alzheimer's Disease.

Golden is cosponsoring a similar new bill which will require the Executive Office of Elder Affairs (EOEA) to assess the level and availability of short-term, overnight respite care for victims of Alzheimer's Disease as well as the level of need for short-term, overnight respite care in community and/or institutional settings for such victims.

EOEA would be expected to present to the legislature by Dec. 31, 1988, a plan recommending finance and service strategies for such care.

An additional piece of new legislation is a bill ensuring that elderly home care shall be available to any resident of the commonwealth over 60 whose income falls within the guidelines established by the EOEA and whose level of functional impairment and lack of access to necessary assistance are sufficient to establish a need for such services.

CHS soccer season ends on a high note

Ian Smart was one of the CHS soccer champs honored at the conclusion of their season.

The soccer break-up dinner was held last Monday, and the team suddenly found itself minus 12 seniors: Dan Pompeo, Todd Fitzpatrick, Steve Myers, Dave Shultz, Jay Marsac, John Linsley, Adam Durant, Kostas Roukounakis, Ian Smart, George Sechen, and managers Ian Sullivan and Steven Sont.

"That does not mean that we won't have the same season we had this year," Larry Shultz said. Of course, Cohasset advanced all the way to the division 3 state finals.

Coach Dan Magner handed out several awards. "I don't think Mr. Shultz knew what he was getting into when he put me in charge of awards," Magner joked.

The first set of awards went to the all-stars: Ned Chase, Jim and Joel Reidy, Jimmy Gallagher, Todd Fitzpatrick, Dave Shultz, and Ian Smart. "Mr. Hustle" awards went to Jimmy Gallagher and John Linsley. Jay Marsal picked up the twelfth player award, and "Coaches Choice" went to Jimmy Reidy. The "Spirit Award" was given to Steve Myers, and both Jay Staunton and Dan Pompeo earned "most improved". Ned Chase received the Tournament MVP, and Todd Fitzpatrick made two more trips to the podium for best goal (a well placed 45-yarder) and MVP.

The night was short and sweet. "I'd again like to thank every one for their support. It's been a great year, and we plan to continue to do just as well next year." Magner said.

Dump odor . . .

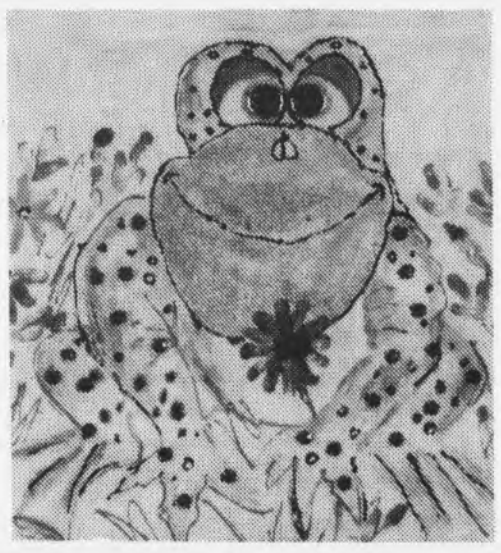
Since I am not a scientist, I do not know whether the substances causing the odor are hazardous to my health, though I find it hard to believe that such a foul odor could be benign. While the odor itself is offensive, I am more concerned about the long-term effect of breathing the contaminated air near the landfill site.



I expect that DEQE will reevaluate the Cohasset Heights Landfill site to assure that thousands of South Shore residents who use Route 3A do not continue to be exposed to this hazard.

Very truly yours,

THE KNAVE OF BOSTON—By Francis Russell
Russell examines the lives and careers of those men of acute intelligence and lax ethics who brightened the Yankee Landscape of Massachusetts during the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. Russell reflects on the spotted careers of Honey Fitzgerald, James Michael Curley and Dan Coakley, the "Knave" himself. $17.95 at Bookport.
WINTER—A Novel of a Berlin Family
By Len Deighton. Learn about the startling realities of life in Berlin under the Nazis—and the German experience of two World Wars. See, close up, the kind of men and women who supported the third Reich. A remarkable portrait of a country and its people. $19.95 at Bookport.
THE NEW SEASON—By George F. Will
A Spectator's Guide to the 1988 Election . . . a lively and good-natured book from one of the Nation's most informed political thinkers. You'll learn and you'll laugh. $17.95 at Bookport.
THE NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC SOCIETY "100 Years of Adventure and Discovery"
C.D.B. Bryan. In 1888, in Washington, D.C., 33 gentlemen met to consider "the advisability of organizing a society for the increase and diffusion of geographical knowledge." This book covers the entire history of The Geographic, focusing on the guiding personalities behind it. Superb photography. $45.00 at Bookport.

Talk on North River

The North River Chapter of the Massachusetts Archaeological Society will meet at the Little Red School House on Cudworth Road, Scituate, Monday, Dec. 14, at 7:30 p.m.

A special hands-on workshop will be conducted.

For further information please call: Dr. Curtiss Hoffman at 881-1124 or MaryK.Johnson at 837-3560.

Spring soccer signup

Dear Santa: All I want for Christmas is spring soccer. The Cohasset Spring Soccer will hold signups Saturday, Dec. 12 from 9 a.m. to noon at the Cohasset High School Gym and the Deer Hill Gym. All interested players must register during this time.

Fees for the 1988 season are $30 for the first family member and $25 for the second. Players who have not returned last season's uniforms must bring them to signups.

For additional information, call Larry Shultz, at 383-0597.

Amateur Gardeners of Cohasset

The Amateur Gardeners of Cohasset will meet Dec. 15 at 1 p.m. in the home of Mrs. Ruthven Walsh for a Christmas party and gift exchange. Mrs. Edna Finnegan will be co-hostess.

Gardeners meet Dec. 14

On Monday, Dec. 14, at 12:30 p.m. the Seaside Gardeners of Marshfield will hold a special open meeting featuring Betsy Williams of Andover, a popular lecturer, author, naturalist and floral artist.

Those of you who saw her presentation at the Hingham Garden Club last year know that she is as natural and charming as are her masterpieces.

Williams, who travels to England each year to find unique items for her shop, is justifiably proud of her collection and of her work.

The colors she achieves in her dried arrangements are all natural — no dyes or sprays are ever used.

Often customers send her swatches of upholstery fabric or wallpaper samples, and she creates a natural dried flower wreath of exactly the right hues to complement a specific setting.

Representations of her handicraft have appeared in magazines such as Country Living, Redbook, Mademoiselle and Flower and Garden.

Williams will demonstrate what goes into the making of a dried flower wreath and will exhibit her Christmas wreath created entirely of dried flowers and herbs.

Many items from her shop will be for sale, including European glass and pewter tree decorations, potpourri, frankincense, stone animals, Christmas manger herbs, as well as fresh and dried wreaths, boxwood (by the pound, roped, or wreathed Williamsburg style), lovely boxwood berry baskets, fresh Oregon holly and Advent candle rings.

This occasion will add to your holiday cheer, so come and bring a friend. Refreshments will be served, and the meeting will be at St. Christine's Church Hall, Route 3A in Marshfield Hills. Admission is free.

Garden Club's antique house tour set Dec. 10

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will decorate seven unique homes built in 1727, 1860, 1890, 1900, 1950 and 1980, and located from Jerusalem Road to those hidden by rustic pine trees and rocks. Proceeds from the long-awaited Yuletide tour will benefit the South Shore Art Center, the Community Center and the Historical Society as well as scholarship programs. The house tour will be held Thursday, Dec. 10 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Complimenting the seldom-opened homes and estates will be unusual floral designs by members and noted flower show judges including Mrs. Hollis Gray of Sudbury, Mrs. James Grinnel, Mrs. John O'Toole, Mrs. Stephen N. Bobo, Mrs. Jeffrey R. Power of Cohasset, and Mrs. John J. Hickey of North Scituate. Other leading arrangers and coordinators for the other homes (partial) will be: Kathy Morgan, Mrs. James M. Graham, Jr., Mrs. James G. Erickson, Mrs. James G. Storey, Mrs. Raymond J. Hanian, Mrs. Peter Roy, Mrs. Donald Larson, Mrs. Peter L. Berg, Mrs. George M. Sechen, Mrs. Donna Mullin and Mary Fitzmaurice of Hingham, Mrs. Carl E. Barrie of Marshfield Hills and Mrs. Robert V. Laney of Duxbury.

Mrs. David R. Replogle is coordinating the boutique that will feature holiday decorations — a festive note to the newly renovated Cohasset Community Center located across from the historic Cohasset Common. The gourmet collation also will be served by garden club members at the Community Center, headed by Carmen Schramm and Marge Libby.

Another highlight of the tour will be "Attracting Birds to Your Garden" coordinated by Boo Leach, Noel Manion, Doris Swain with consultant Tina Watson.

The tour will include a colonial home built in 1727 with six original fireplaces, two beehive ovens, wide plank floors and hand hewn beams. The cozy library was the original kitchen, the "borning room with its antique quilt-hung beams and a recent addition that will feature a Christmas tree adorned with prized ornament collection.

The newest home on the tour was custom-built of tile, glass and synthetic-free fabrics accented by the owners watercolor paintings and rare collections.

A home built in 1895 overlooks Little Harbor and has the warmth of many rooms, window seats, fine woodwork surrounded by comfortable antiques. Just prior to the Civil War this shingled home was later joined with an adjacent house and is now a large elegant dining room. The kitchen and playroom will be decorated with a candy wreath accented with cookies; gumdrop house and gingerbread men. Since the Chicago Symphony Orchestra was housed in this turn-of-the century Victorian home, the recently-renovated home will be decorated with a music motif that will compliment the chintz and green and peach colors used throughout the home.

Visitors will be swept away on a magic carpet to the Mediterranean when they enter the home that was built in the 1900s and view Little Harbor from every room of this architectural gem filled with treasures from all over the world.

Finally, you will go back in time to an English cottage complete with a tea table, Christmas Cake with marzipan icing, swags or kissing boughs and Christmas Friendship Tree decorated with antique ornaments, golden ginkgo leaves (rare Chinese Tree), dried blossoms of blue lace hydrangea and antique papier mache angels accented by tiny white lights and swags of gold beads. Coordinators are Polly Blanchard, Janet Vanderweil, Phyllis Cray, Hope Warren and Margery Doughterty.

Mrs. Bruce Minivitz, noted lecturer and gourmet cook, and co-chairman of Horticultural Society's Preview Benefit, will outline a festive English holiday dinner and her unique recipes will be given to all who attend. Mary Hickey noted that the English do not use wreaths or poinsettas but holly, mistletoe, greens, laurel, lemon leaves, ivy carnations, fruit and rosehips.

President of the Community Garden Club, Phyllis Peck, who also is a Flower Show Judge, noted that a descriptive program with information and a map will be provided each person and that there will be hostesses to answer questions at each home. Jane Goff and Betsy Good head this committee.

Tickets must be reserved in advance by calling the Community Center 383-0088 or ticket chairman Denise Desmond (383-6446) or Rita Strong (383-0939). Donation is $15 and includes tour of seven homes, collation and boutique. Judy Volungis and Polly Logan head the Public Relations Committee, added that the tour will be held rain or shine and suggested walking shoes for attendees.

King Street

Delight in one of Cohasset's original homes. Built in 1727, John Burbank, his wife, and 13 children lived here for 63 years. Burbank was responsible for urging the separation of early Cohasset from Hingham.

This "Colonial Home" has 6 original fireplaces, 2 beehive ovens, wide plank floors, and hand hewn beams. Enjoy the cozy library that was the original kitchen, the "borning" room with its antique quilt-hung beams, and the more recent addition — a huge living room, where the Christmas tree is adorned with a prized ornament collection.

Jerusalem Road

This is the newest home on our tour; a seven-year old custom-built house of tile, glass, and synthetic-free fabrics.

The masterful use of these fabrics gives the family's home the joyful beauty of an English flower garden. Sparkling crystal, old coin silver, cobalt and cranberry glass delight the eye. Notice how a rainbow of watercolor paintings brighten the all-white walls.

Jerusalem Road

This spacious home was built on Nichols-Wheelwright land in 1895. Known for years as the "Barry Cottage," it was a summer place until the 1950s. The house enjoys a commanding view of Little Harbor.

The owners have expanded and updated the house to serve the needs of a growing family. Note the skillful blend of comfort and antique of today and yesterday.

Jerusalem Road

This gracious shingled home was built in 1860, as America struggled with the Civil War. It, intriguingly, was two houses, now connected by the large elegant dining room. To the rear of the main house stands a small building which was originally the laundry house.

The owners have updated their large home for their growing family. In addition to the elegant foyer, living and dining rooms, admire the warmth of the "upper deck" off the kitchen, and rejoice in a "Child's Christmas" in the playroom.

Nichols Road

This marvelous turn-of-the-century Victorian home boasts a large wraparound porch, and a country lane setting. Built, initially, as a guest cottage for the estate of Cyrus McCormick, inventor of the reaper, it housed the Chicago Symphony Orchestra when they came to play for the McCormicks.

The owners have renovated the entire house utilizing the best of modern conveniences while retaining the grace and elegance of a bygone era.

Nichols Road

This charming Cape Cod home expresses the owner's many interests. The home literally bursts with wonderful things on which to feast the eyes. Rare orientals, antique silver, fine china and old wicker vie for attention with antique furniture, English hunt prints and exquisite old needlepoint.

Make note of the creche, santa, and sleigh, displayed by the family since 1870.

As you leave the house, don't miss the special "attracting birds to your garden" display, featuring bird houses and a heated bird bath.

Beach Street

This beautiful Mediterranean villa is aptly named "The Arches," as they are used repeatedly in the architecture. The house was built at the turn of the century as a summer home and remained that until the 1970's. It stands imposingly on the rocky shore of Little Harbor and offers magnificent water views from every window.

There is a delightful eclectic feeling in this home, from the country kitchen, to the baronial dining room, to the cozy sun room that is the heart of the house.

School news

Favorite books

The votes are in and counted!

During Children's Book Week at Osgood School the children voted for their favorites.

The book which were the winners were: #1, Green Eggs and Ham with The Thing at the Foot of the Bed a close second.

Dr. Seuss and Shel Silverstein were their choices for favorite authors and favorite series: The Berenstein Bears.

At the Jr./Sr. High School students who were polled indicated also that Green Eggs and Ham was their favorite children's book and The Giving Tree by Shel Silverstein was their second choice. Charlie and the Chocolate Factory came out a close third.

At Osgood School the children were asked to write about why they like the library. The following excerpts from children in grades one, two and three will give you some idea of what they think.

Our thanks to all students who participated in helping the school libraries celebrate Children's Book Week in November.

'Why I liked . . .'

I like the library for a lot of things. I can read and take out books. My favorite books are The Red Carpet and Out to Sea. When I read it gives me mind power. At the library I learn lots of things. The most important part of it is that I like it because it's fun.

Gregory Bilton
Grade 2

I like to go to the library because I like to read a lot and I can concentrate. At the library I like to look up words in a dictionary. Sometimes there are activities there. I'm glad there is a card catalogue because when I can't find a book I can use it. I really think the library is fun and interesting.

Kelley-Marie O'Donnell
Grade 3

I like the books in the library because it's fun and because you get to pick books and play games.

Raheem Anderson
Grade 1

Mrs. Murphy, our Librarian

Mrs. Murphy has been a librarian at the Deer Hill School for 6 years. She has always wanted to be a teacher. In the library she is able to teach and share books with the children. As a student I think Mrs. Murphy makes the library a fun and interesting place.

"Good for you," Mrs. Murphy!

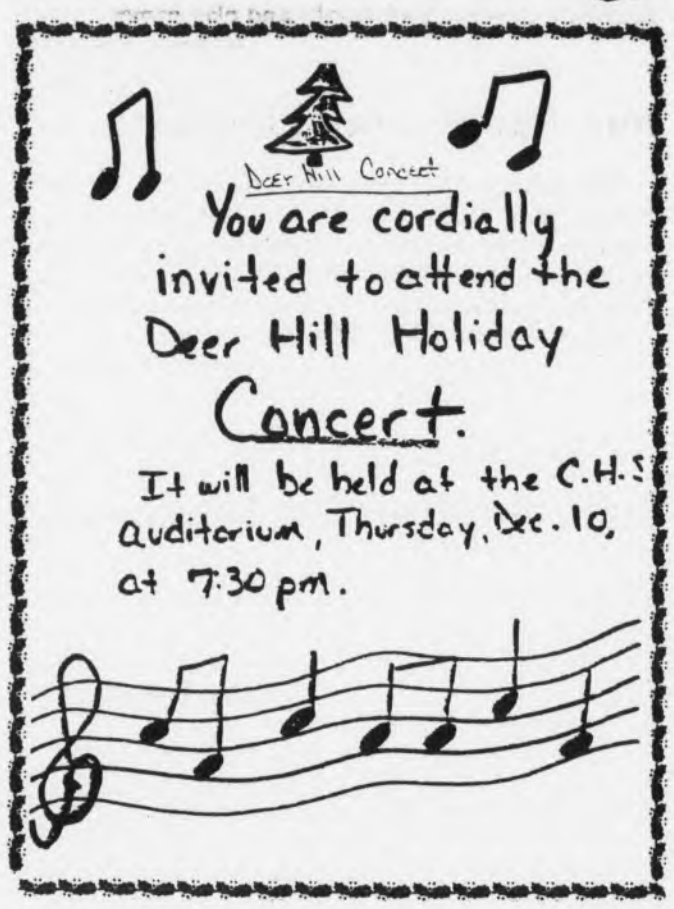
Artist of the Month

Wilbert the turkey and a dinosaur brushing his teeth were just a few of the many imaginative characters that came to life for the children at the demonstration on November 24 by Sue Dreamer, the artist of the month at the Osgood School. Sue showed the children her many popular books and samples of her creative cards as well as a baby quilt that she designed with her animal characters. Adding to the presentation, Chris Conley, owner of South Shore Graphics, showed the children samples of her work and gave an interesting talk about commercial art and design.

During the week of Dec. 1, over twenty parent volunteers aided the children in designing their own cards on special index card stock using a watercolor wash technique similar to the one shown by Sue Dreamer. The chairpersons, Olga Nohe and Retta Dwyer would like to thank Sue Dreamer, Chris Conley and the parent volunteers for their valuable time.



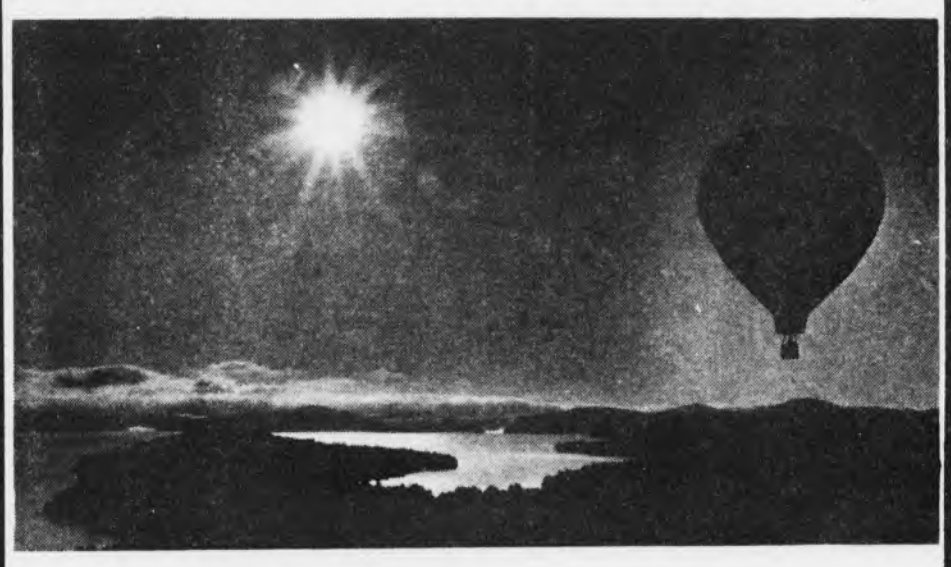
History mini-course

The Deer Hill School offers mini courses througout the year which are based on general student interest and open to any student who wishes to participate in the course's offering.

Recently, the fifth and sixth grade members of the South Shore History Mini-Course enjoyed a lecture and a demonstration of life saving techniques given by the Hull Life Saving Museum.

Students learned about famous ship wrecks and the history of the Hull Life Saving Station. The students in the mini course and Mr. Deakin's fifth grade class participated in a melodrama based on a rescue at sea. The students learned CPR, special knot tying, how to treat a person for shock and how to use the Breeches boy.

The mini course will end with a field trip to Weymouth's Town Museum and selected sites in Scituate. The Scituate visit will include a bell ringing demonstration at Lawson's Tower by Mrs. Laidlaw, President of the Scituate Historical Society and a visit to the Light House in Scituate.



The fifth and sixth grade students at the Deer Hill School would like to thank the PSO who generously funded speakers from the Weymouth, Scituate, Quincy Historical Societies and the Hull Rescue Museum. The PSO has enabled the students to develop a deeper understanding of the interrelated and interdependent role the surrounding towns played in Cohasset History.

First Parish

Community Outreach Committee: Recent Work Party: Fourteen members of First Parish-six adults (Ed Alkinson, Dottie Booth, JoAnne Chittick, Carol Martin, Jack Martin, Bobbi Leary) and eight youth group members (Jennifer and Kristin Martin, Ali and Sophie Redfield, Todd DeCruz, Sallyann Kluz, Megan Terry, Juliana Chittick) worked with some 30 other volunteers at the Habitat housing development in Dorchester Saturday, Nov. 28. Work included applying stain, laying sewer lines, and installing insulation. Our donation of funds for the water piping was gratefully acknowledged. The pipe, critical to the project, has been almost completely installed.

Next Work Party: Plans are underway for the next work party to be held Saturday, Dec. 12. All are invited! We will leave from the Parish House at 8 a.m. Call Jack Martin or Bobbi Leary if you would like to participate.

Next Community Outreach Committee Meeting: The Committee will meet Sunday, Dec. 13 after the coffee hour to review fall activities and plan for the coming months. Carol and Jack Martin and Bobbi Leary will report on the December 8 South Shore Habitat Directors meeting.

Christmas Concert, Sunday, Dec. 13 at 4 p.m. We look forward to a superb concert featuring the Unicorn Singers, a chamber orchestra and soloists under the direction of Margo Euler. They will perform "Utrecht Jubilate" by Handel, Bach's Cantata No. 61, "Nun Komn Der Heiden neiland" and some carols to sing.

The beneficiary of our concert this year will be the South Shore Habitat for humanity, a non-profit housing ministry. You may become a patron for a gift of $30. Which also will bring you two tickets by return mail. Tickets at $3. are on sale in the office. To date we have 46 patrons. Don't miss out on this opportunity to benefit a worthy cause and to enjoy some beautiful Christmas music.

"A Carolling We Go" All around the Common Sunday, Dec. 20 at 6 p.m. Bring family and friends, children of all ages. Meet at the Parish House in warm clothes and if you have them, bring a flashlight and carol book. If not, come anyway. We will return to the Parish House after our winter carolling walk and enjoy Scandinavian hot apple cider and Christmas cookies. The weather will help us determine how long we are outdoors. Any questions, thoughts or offers of cookies. . . (See how I snuck that in there?), call Sine Pounder 383-6869.

Christmas Poinsettia: Once again we are looking for donors for poinsettia to decorate our chancel table Christmas Sunday and Christmas Eve. Please call the church office 383-1100 or Megan Phelps 740-2766. The cost is $10.

Shabbat services

Shabbat services will be held at Congregation Sha'a-ray Shalom, 1112 Main St., Hingham on Friday Dec. 11, 8 p.m. Members of SHASTY, the Temple youth group, will conduct the service.

Second Congregational Church

Stewardship Drive at Full Steam: About 100 pledges returned so far! Send those cards and letters in! Reminder phone calls to be made soon. If you did not receive or have misplaced the stewardship letter, 1988 preliminary budget, and envelope, please contact the church office and we'll mail one right out!

Christmas Care Package to be assembled by the Youth Group (9-11th graders) and sent to a family in West Virginia (on whose house Judy R. worked last summer). Each member is to bring a special gift (details on forthcoming letter) to next Thursday's (12/10) meeting (6 PM). We'll have a "serious" wrapping and cookie baking party so that others may enjoy a little more magic this Christmas.

Christmas Caroling to the elderly and shut-in will be a shared experience of all the youth (7th-12th grades, children welcome, also) on Sunday evening Dec. 13 from 7:30 to 8 p.m. Meet in Bates Hall for warm up!

The Black Nativity - put on by the National Center of Afro-American Artists, will be a major outing event of the year! We have 25 tickets for Sunday, Dec. 20, (meet at the church at 2:00 p.m.) for all 9th - 12th graders (open to anyone, if any tickets remain unsold on 12/13. Tickets ($10 each) are available from Mike or Julie Wasp. Following the performance, we are hoping to be able to go out together for a Chinese (?) dinner and some shopping at Quincy Market and should be back between 8 and 9 p.m.

Annual Christmas Concert - at the First Parish Meeting House (on the Common), Sunday, Dec. 13, at 4 p.m. Featured will be the Unicorn Singers, a chamber orchestra, soloists, and carols for all to sing; directed by Margo Euler. Tickets are $3, patrons welcome at $30. Proceeds to be donated to the South Shore Habitat for Humanity.

Give a Kid a Coat program sponsored by Dwyers Cleaners & Alphagraphios. Old wearable winter coats and jackets, dropped off (by December 19th) at any of their stores will be repaired, cleaned and then donated to either New England Home for Little Wanderers, Rosie's Place, or the Salvation Army.

"GOD AND SITTERS"

The children's choir under the direction of Ann Whiteley prepares for the 5 p.m Christmas Eve service. This choir is open to all children ages 4 and older. Rehearsals take place Mondays at 3:15 p.m. for ages 4 through 1st grade; and 3:45 p.m. for those in 2nd grade or older.

A FEW HOURS REST

Another type of Advent preparation for Christmas is our Quiet Day held from 9 a.m. to 12 noon in the Chapel Saturday, Dec. 12. You may come for all three hours or for a portion of the time, but try to take some time out to reflect on the true meaning of this season. We too easily get caught up in the rush of buying and mailing and forget what we are buying and mailing for.

The Quiet Day will begin with Morning Prayer. At ten and eleven o'clock meditations will be given by our licensed lay readers, John Vivian and Willa Hood. The Quiet Day will end with Noonday Prayers. During periods of quiet, you may sit quietly, pray, go for a walk and read. This time of reflection will be led by the Rev. Peter Sturtevant. The Rector will be in Philadelphia presenting Ms. Virginia Kirk, a parishioner from his former parish, for ordination to the diaconate.

ADRIAN'S JEWELRY SHOP
Locally owned and operated by Adrian Del Rosso
for over 24 years

In every community there is one store we can depend on all year round for any number of occasions. We speak, of course, of the jeweler and the firm he represents. Christmas, birthdays, engagements, weddings and anniversaries are just a few of the times in your life when you want to give something special to someone you care for.

There can be no doubt the people to see for these occasions are Adrian's Jewelry Shop, located at 140 Pleasant Street in South Weymouth. Phone 335-2671. Their inventory of gold earrings, bracelets, necklaces and charms is endless. The selection of men's and women's engagement and wedding rings is exquisite. Diamond, emerald, ruby, pearl and onyx are a few of the stones found in a variety of settings.

They also have a complete line of Sterling Silver Jewelry. Watches in famous brand names such as SEIKO and LONGINES are available in a price range for almost everyone. A complete selection of cameo's, Cleopatra necklace, scrimshaw can also be found in their fine store. Adrian designs, repairs fine jewelry, as well, watches and clock repairs.

Mastercard, Visa and American Express are excepted. Gift Certificates are available plus a convenient layaway plan with only 10% down.

The only thing you have to know about Jewelry is Adrian's. Come in and sign up for their $500 shopping spree. Drawing will be held Dec. 24th and announced on WJDA. Open Sundays. Refreshments served Sundays only - Mon. thru Sat., 9-9, Sunday 12-6.

Horizon Video captures South Shore growth

Horizon Media owners John Capellupo and Peter Huston have had a successful first year at Cushing Plaza.

Watching the growth of the South Shore and seeing a need for a production facility based in the area, John Capellupo and partner Peter Huston, have opened Horizon Media, a full service production facility, based in Cohasset.

Barely three months old, Horizon Media has already found that their suspicions were correct. "Word of the Company has traveled fast," notes Capellupo "From the time we opened our doors we have had a number of people tell us that they are glad to have a facility in the area where they can do top quality work without having to make the drive each day up 128 or Rt. 3 and the artery."

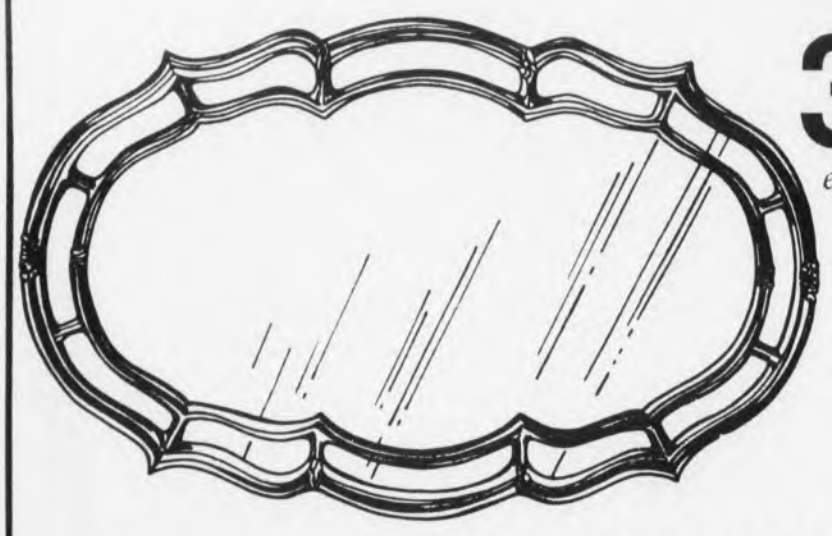
Built around the idea that excellence in the video industry should not have to cost a fortune, Horizon has built a broadcast production facility, using the latest state of the art equipment and producing with an eye toward economy.

Horizon producer Peter Huston notes that "film and video presentations are very important to a corporation. If a company is producing a product presentation piece as a sales tool, a poor piece can cost the company a lot of money." "However," Huston continues, "we don't believe that producing an effective, creative piece must also cost the company a lot of money. We know that there are ways of approaching a tape which can be effective in both its presentation and its costs."

Since opening its doors in the rear of Horizon Video, a video rental store in Cushing Plaza, Cohasset, Horizon Media has already worked with many diverse clients. As the creative side of the team Peter Huston has recently found himself as camera operator for WBZTV, and producing videotapes for a Rhode Island real estate developer, a Massachusetts sail maker, and a South Shore sand and gravel company.

"I think that the diversity of clients that we have worked for speaks to the many companies and industries who have found video to be an indi spensable part of their sales and training efforts" notes Huston.

According to Huston, the film and video mediums for corporate presentations has become such a dominant part of many companies' way of doing business that it is a trend that is here to stay. "Video production will remain strong even during bad economic times" continues Huston "because of its ability as a sales tool that sets a company above and apart from its competitors." While the production community in the Boston area has grown from a small handful 10 years ago to several dozen today, few companies have taken the step to locate in and serve the clients of the South Shore area. In making his decision to open Horizon productions in Cohasset, John Capellupo, president, explains that "Historically, we have seen production companies spring up around the city. Four or so years ago it was not considered wise to open a production facility on Rte. 128. Now, those production companies on the 128 loop are benefiting from their proximity to their client base. Many clients simply don't want to fight the headaches of going to the city. Some people may believe Cohasset is not a wise place to open a production house but we feel that those people will be as wrong about that as they were about 128."



While video tape presentations are quickly catching on in all sectors for many companies, their first time into the medium can be intimidating. Whe ther a company is trying to lead the way in their industry or catch up to competitors already using video, the first venture into this complex technology can be confusing to the uninitiated and, as Capellupo points out, "difficut to make the proper decision on a production facility if you don't know what you are buying. It can be alarming for the first time user to get three or four estimates on an idea and get back bids ranging from several thousand to 50,000 dollars or more for the same idea." "What we try to do with people new to the medium is carefully determine what is necessary for the production and make our recommendations and estimates accordingly. If the clients' budget is smaller, we go back and find creative ways of keeping the presentation quality high while keeping it within the budget."

Sometimes clients will try to do a production and are willing to cut corners on quality which Huston feels is the worst possible approach. "There is always a way to develop a creative approach to a topic," Huston remarks, "but quality should never be sacrificed. The quality of the production directly reflects to the viewer the quality of the company. With the average person watching a couple hours of television per day, they become accustomed to a certain pacing, tempo, and technical quality of production. When an industrial presentation fails it is often because these factors have been ignored and the viewer quickly looses interest in a presentation they see as being amateur."

The television production industry has followed a similar path to the region's high tech firms. Because so much of the television business is computer based, as the technology grew, the costs of the hardware decreased to the point where the building of a top notch production facility is not nearly as expensive as it once was. "Hardware no longer drives our business," notes Capellupo, "people finally realize that it is the creative people who are the important factor. All we have done is to build a hardware facility as a better way of creatively serving our customers. The machinery gives us certain flexibility, but it is still the people that make Horizon Media successful."

church family, still keeps a home in Addis Alem, the capital city of Ethiopia. It is there that her former parish, St. Matthew's, with St. Mary of Sion Orthodox Church, began an orphanage to help care for some of the more than 50,000 Ethiopian children who have become orphans as a result of the drought and subsequent famine in their land.

We at St. Stephen's support one of these orphaned boys named Afera Kiros through the Anglican Childcare Fund. Our church school Advent offering will be our Christmas present to him. Ruth Adjorlolo will visit our church school this Sunday to tell the children about her native Ethiopia and help connect them with their young "friend" Afera. He was born in 1983 or 1984 and was found by World Vision workers on the roadside near the Lalibela relief shelter. Now housed at the Addis Alem Home, he attends pre-school there.

SOUTH AFRICAN BISHOP VISIT

The most Rev. Philip W.R. Russell and his wife Eirene will visit St. Stephen's on Sunday, Dec. 13. The Archbishop will preach at the 10 a.m. service and he and his wife will join us for fellowship afterwards.

Philip Russell is the retired Archbishop of Capetown, South Africa. He is credited with helping to pave the way for the election of a black archbishop to succeed him, namely the Most Rev. Desmond Tutu. Archbishop Tutu, noting Russell's inclusive and open spirit, said of him, "He was the Pope John XXIII of the Anglican Church of the Province of Southern Africa." High praise.

He is in Massachusetts as the first occupant of the John B. Coburn Chair for Theology for the Mission of the Church at the Cathedral of the Diocese of Massachusetts. The Chair was created in thanksgiving for the ministry of Bishop John B. Coburn, retired Bishop of Massachusetts.

Weddings/ Engagements

Gardikas/Farren

Gardikas/Farren

Mr. and Mrs. Peter M. Gardikas of Winthrop announce the engagement of their daughter, Nancy Maria Gardikas to James Joseph Farren. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Farren of Cohasset.

Miss Gardikas is a 1980 graduate of Winthrop High School and a 1984 graduate of Stonehill College. She is presently employed by E.F. Hutton and Co. Inc. in Institutional Municipal Bond sales.

Mr. Farren is a 1978 graduate of Cohasset High School, and a 1982 graduate of Stonehill College. He is employed as a Commercial Account Representative for American Mutual Insurance Co. in Chestnut Hill.

A June, 1988 wedding is planned.

Horgan/Gabriel

Following a Sept. 26 wedding, Mr. and Mrs. John A. Horgan are living in Hingham.

Mrs. Horgan is the former Rhoda M. Gabriel. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Gabriel of Hingham.

Mr. Horgan is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Horgan of Braintree.

The couple was married in St. Joseph's Church in Quincy. The double ring ceremony was officiated by Rev. Kevin Seppe.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Miss Deanna Galante, the bride's cousin, served as maid of honor. The bridesmaids, who wore dresses of emerald green and black, were Mrs. Christina Matthews and Miss Lenore Gabriel, cousins of the bride, and Miss Debra Horgan and Miss Donna Horgan, sisters of the bridegroom.

Best man was John E. Costigan. Ushers included Jack Gabriel, the bride's brother, Jimmy Horgan, the bridegroom's brother, Chris Gabriel, the bride's cousin, Arthur Roberts, Michael Ford, Michael Stronberg and Paul Dunfy.

Following a wedding reception at the Milton Hoosic Club, the couple vacationed in Barbados.

Mrs. Horgan is a graduate of Hingham High School and Worcester State College.

Mr. Horgan is a graduate of Braintree High School.

Schmitt/Meallo

An October, 1988 wedding is planned for Miss Jennifer Schmitt and Mr. Michael F. Meallo.

Miss Schmitt is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Schmitt of Hingham.

Mr. Meallo is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert J. Meallo of Cohasset.

Miss Schmitt is a graduate of Hingham High School and Katharine Gibbs School in Boston. She is employed as an executive secretary at University Hospital in Boston.

Mr. Meallo is a graduate of Cohasset High School. He is the owner of Michael Meallo, Tree and Landscape Service in Cohasset.

Rattenbury/Malloy

Mr. and Mrs. Mark Francis Rattenbury were married Oct. 3 at a Nuptial Mass performed by Rev. David Bonfiglio in St. Anthony's Church.

Mrs. Rattenbury is the former Janet Ann Malloy. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William F. Malloy of Cohasset.

Mr. Rattenbury is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Rattenbury of Cohasset.

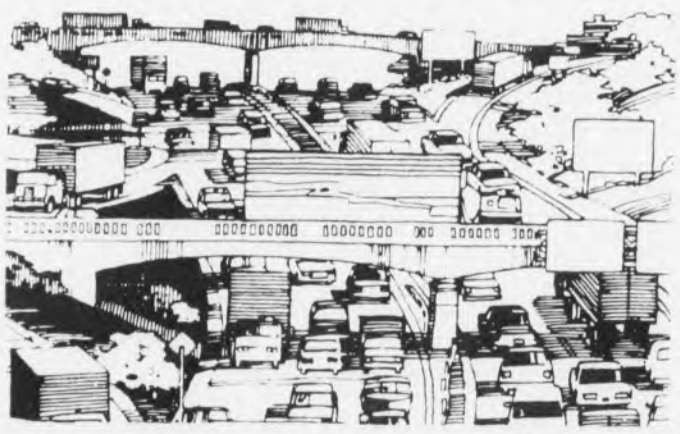
Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attended by Mrs. Karen L. Deckel of Buzzards Bay, her sister, as matron of honor. The bridesmaids included

Mr. & Mrs. Mark Rattenbury

Mrs. Jane M. Corry of Cohasset, and Ms. Ellen A. Malloy of Cohasset, sisters of the bride, Ms. Marybeth Dresser of Scituate and Ms. Cara M. Valicenti of Hanover.

The flower girl was Meghan M. Corry of Cohasset, a niece of the bride.

The best man was Mr. Henry A. Rattenbury, father of the bridegroom. Ushers included Mr. Paul H. Rattenbury of Virginia, Mr. John Rattenbury of Cohasset and Mr. Jay Rattenbury of Cohasset, brothers of the bridegroom, Lt. William F. Malloy Jr. of Newport, R.I., and Mr. Lawrence G. Malloy of Florida, brothers of the bride.



After a reception at Hugo's Lighthouse Restaurant, the couple vacationed on Nantucket Island.

Mrs. Rattenbury is a graduate of Notre Dame Academy, Salve Regina College in Newport, R.I. and Fisher Junior College.

Mr. Rattenbury is a graduate of Cohasset High School and was assigned as an electrical engineer on the nuclear submarine, USS Lafayette in Holy Loch, Scotland with the U.S. Navy. He is currently attending Wentworth Institute in Boston.

Mr. and Mrs. Rattenbury are living in Cohasset.

Standish Humane offers holiday gifts

In an effort to curb pet overpopulation, Standish Humane Society would like to make a holiday gift to the community of 20 free dog or cat spays and castrations. The surgeries would be offered to pet owners who cannot afford them.

Those who own an adult cat or dog that needs to be neutered, but who cannot afford even the Standish Humane Society's low cost fee, please write, describing the reasons for requesting the gift to: Standish Humane Society, Box 824, Scituate, 02066. Please be sure to include your name, address and telephone number.

The surgery must be done at specific hospitals and the pet owner must provide his own transportation.

Letters may be received from the pet owner or a neighbor or friend as long as they have the pet owner's consent. Letters will be verified for accurate data; all information is confidential. Letters must be received by Dec. 31. Winners will be notified in January.

Standish Humane Society offers this gift to the community to initiate a massive spay-neuter campaign. Despite its efforts, (since its founding in 1969), and the efforts of other humane societies to place and spay and neuter pets, the problem of pet overpopulation continues.

Nationwide 17 million cats and dogs were turned into animal shelters last year. Only one in ten of these found a home. Millions of other pets were abandoned to die slowly from starvation, injuries, and other problems.

Locally there are always many more pets than homes. The problem with cats and kittens is especially difficult; the Standish mini-shelters are always full to capacity and there are many more stray and abandoned cats and kittens outside, desperately needing homes. Each year, Standish Humane Society places over 1,000 dogs and puppies, cats and kittens and neuters over 1,200 pets; but the pet population explosion continues.

In 1988, Standish would like to greatly increase the number of cats and dogs sterilized in our area. This is the only way to decrease the number of unwanted pets.

Anyone who desperately needs help with spaying and neutering a pet is asked to apply for the free assistance. For further requests for assistance, please call the Standish volunteers at 224-7373 on the South Shore, or 947-1047 for the Middleboro, Lakeville, Taunton, Raynham area.

For further information on Standish Humane Society, please call 545-3671 or 545-2808.

Buy a bat house

The New England Wildlife Center, 146A Justice Cushing Way, Hingham has announced the availability of wildlife-related gifts for the upcoming holiday season. Included in this year's offerings are gift memberships, a number of books on birds and bird feeders (including the renowned Peterson's Field Guide to the Eastern Birds), cedar bird houses for chickadees, owls, wrens and woodpeckers, hawk and owl calls, and a special "Bat House."

Designed by the Bat Conservation International, this "Official Bat House" is a perfect gift for gardeners, pool owners and anyone else bothered by annoying and biting mosquitos and other flying insects. Bats are man's best friend when it comes to insect control.

To order the "Bat House" or any other gift item from the New England Wildlife Center, call the Center offices at (617) 749-5387. Proceeds from all gift sales will benefit the private, non-profit Center's wildlife education and rehabilitation programs.

A geographer's view of the world

Geography studies the wheres and the whens of interesting things.

Now that Halloween has past and Thanksgiving is near, people soon will take down the decorative ears of "Indian corn," perhaps to save them for another year.

Those varicolored collections of seeds may seem hard and unappetizing, but they do store well.

That, in fact, was one of the goals of the early plant engineers: a food that would keep for months.

It took a thousand or two years for those domesticators to bring the job off, but it was done eventually.

Nowadays, we think of corn-on-the-cob as ready to eat when the tassel has just turned brown and we hurry to pick it and boil it and enjoy the sweet and milky juice.

Maize (to see one of the Amerindian names for corn) is delicious when eaten that way, but it is actually not "ripe" when we pick it for a summer meal.

And although, as a country, we eat a lot of "unripe" maize, even more of the maize that we use is from the mature and dry kernels that have been cut from the cob and milled into corn meal and corn flakes.

The sweet and yellow or white cob of kernels is not much like the decorative bunch of corn that we hang beside the door in the fall.

Still, those two varieties of maize are more alike than either is like the ancestral plants that were gathered by Central American people about five millenia ago (though the area was not to be called either America nor central for thousands of years after the Native "Americans" began the process of domestication).

That early maize looked like a fat head of grass seed, historical botanists think. It must have been a common plant; tasty to the nibbler; easily stripped from the stalk; with seeds that didn't fall off as the ear was gathered; and with the same "shelf life" as modern maize.

The inventive foragers of ancient middle America gathered the best, tiny cobs from the wild meadows, planted some, picked the best of that crop in turn, planted some choice kernels. And so began the process of changing the plant, their lives, and our lives.

Ancestral maize proved to be amazingly adaptable, productive, and nutritious when eaten in combination with beans (succotash!). Humans have gathered the maize ears so solicitously over the centuries that we have changed it from a wild plant to one that is completely dependent on us.

We may have started that change by habitually picking it a little before it was ready to eat — from the point of view of raccoons and blue jays — while the cob was still surrounded by a husk.

Now, the husk clings so tightly and the kernels are so firmly anchored to the cob that modern corn cannot seed itself even if left in the garden all winter.

Because corn can be bred in many varieties, it can be grown in many climates, and we have spread it from the warm and hilly regions of central America to the plains of Africa and the short growing seasons of New England.

Beans migrated along with maize, using the stalks as bean poles, although eastern Africans call their corn-and-bean dinner "posho" and not succotash.

Maize, beans and other domesticates, such as squash, encouraged people to settle into farming, as with the Hopi of the southwest and the Wampanoag of New England.

The whole maize plant, stalk and cob, make excellent cattle fodder, and encouraged people of European descent to make Chicago the meat-packing center of the world.

That may no longer be an accurate title, but the Midwest remains the corn belt that we learned about in junior high, hogs and all.

And that doesn't take into account the employment given to movie ushers who sweep popcorn after the matinees. All of that is quite an achievement for a husky species of grass.

Consideration of the history and geography of corn helps put a surprising light on the igenuity and the botanical and zoological knowledge of the early people in the rest of the world as well as on this continent.

During the last 5,000 years very few new plants or animals have been added to the list of domesticates.

We think of modern humans as outstanding in technical accomplishments, yet we depend on the plant and animal manipulations of our remote ancestors.

It is true that we refine the species, producing new varieties with greater tolerance to drought or with a higher yield on specific soils.

Still, only one completely new plant has been added to our arsenal against hunger, a grain.

Experiments are now going on with two animals, the musk ox of the arctic and the eland of eastern Africa, but that's the extent of new domestication.

By contrast, we are letting go of many of the varieties of already domesticated plants and animals and concentrating on a few kinds.

Most of us, for instance, know only three or four different potatoes out of the dozens that exist and perhaps four kinds of apple from among the multitude of varieties.

There are many squashes that were widely grown two generations ago, but now we eat only five or six kinds.

The same pattern is true for farm animals. Sturbridge Village and Plimoth Plantation have "archaic" cattle, sheep and pigs that are really rare and endangered species. Recent issues of the Old Farmer's Almanac provide information about specific memorable plants and animals that are no longer widely used.

On a different level, Scientific American has carried articles on maize and potato origins.

The world does seem to be moving toward use of fewer varieties of crops and animals. Much of this simplification has been necessary so that we can produce lots of food efficiently. We need to remember, though, that modern times don't have an exclusive claim to inventiveness.

Take a break at the Science Center

Take a break from holiday preparations and participate in a program at South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell.

DRIFTWAY RAMBLE

Take a leisurely guided tour of the Driftway with naturalist Barbara Devine on Sunday, Dec. 13 from 1 to 3 p.m. This largely unspoiled salt marsh is home to numerous specialized plants and animals. Sheltered salt marshes also house many winter birds, including snow owls! Come by yourself or bring the whole family! Pre-paid registration required (members/$3.50; non-members/$4.50). Call 659-2559 for registration information.

WINTER PLANT IDENTIFICATION

Winter walks offer a chance to see the world in a new light and to marvel at the beauty of tree silhouettes and subtle hues. The enjoyment of these walks is further enriched when you know what you are looking at! Come and learn how to identify plants in winter, using buds, bark and other features. Naturalists Bill Perkins and John Bleiler will lead this program on Tuesday, Dec. 15 from 10 a.m. to noon. Prepaid registration required (members/$3.50; non-members/$4.50).

WEDNESDAY NATURE WALK

Shake the mid-week blahs and enjoy a guided walk through one of South Shore's conservation properties. Look for new discoveries of seasonal and rare natural phenomena! Led by SSNSC naturalists, the walk will be held Dec. 16 from 10 a.m. to noon and is free for members ($4.50 for non-members). Meet at the Natural Science Center. Call 659-2559 for more information or to register by phone.

DECEMBER STAR GAZING

An evening of star-gazing—how appropriate for the holiday season! After a slide show by Rolf Egon, President of South Shore Astronomical Association, view Jupiter, Saturn, the Andromeda galaxy and other celestial phenomena. Bring the whole family on Friday, Dec. 18 from 8 to 10 p.m. Pre-paid registration required (members/$3; non-members/$4). Call 659-2559.

COLONIAL TOYMAKING

Get into the spirit of the season by making your own toys! Children 7 years and older are invited to join teacher Trygve Swift and learn about how the early settlers constructed toys. Make Jacob's ladders and climbing stars just as colonial children did 200 years ago. The fun happens Saturday, Dec. 19 from 1 to 6 p.m. (10 a.m. session is full). Pre-paid registration required (members/$4; non-members/$5). For registration information, call 659-2559.

South Shore Natural Science Center is on Jacobs Lane in Norwell, just off Route 123 and less than a mile from the Hanover/Rte. 3 interchange (Exit 13). The Center is open Mondays through Saturdays from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Sundays and most holidays from 1 to 4 p.m. SSNSC programs will be postponed in the event of weather cancellation of Norwell public schools, but the Center itself will be open. Closed Dec. 25, 26, 27 and Jan. 1. Free admission. Trails, exhibits, library and museum store.

To our Nursing Home Workers,
We give our Thanks and our Commitment.

This is the season of holiday greetings. A time for the gathering together of family and friends. Most of all, it is a season of thanks.

On behalf of the nursing home residents, we express deepest thanks to our long term care workers, whose dedication and commitment enrich the lives of our aged, frail, and disabled citizens. Year after year, you make their holiday season bright.

It takes an extraordinary individual to work in a nursing home. Someone with the desire to make a difference in another person's life. It demands patience, understanding, and endurance. Today, many nursing home workers must work exra hours and shifts because of a serious staffing shortage. And the situation could get worse, because the number of people needing long term care is growing faster than the number of available workers.

We're working with the Massachusetts Federation of Nursing Homes to change that. Although our heavy reliance on the state Medicaid program limits our ability to compete with other employers, we're working to increase compensation for nursing home workers. We're also striving to provide greater training and job advancement opportunities, require the regulation of temporary nursing agencies, and improve job benefits.

But we can't do it alone. We need government support. Unfortunately, state officials have been reluctant to address our staffing problems. Medicaid payments have been kept low, even at the expense of nursing home workers, in order to balance the Medicaid budget. As we continue to work on this issue, we ask those concerned about nursing home care to contact their state officials and elected representatives aout this current staffing crisis.

Our nursing home workers have done a truly remarkable job this year and every year, providing quality care under difficult conditions. As you continue to do your best, we will continue to do ours. You have our promise.

And our thanks.

Mass. Audubon presents program Dec. 10

The Massachusetts Audubon Society's South Shore Sanctuaries will present a program on the flora and fauna of Belize at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 10, at its headquarters at 2000 Main St.

Scott Hecker of Marshfield, a biologist-artist-leader of natural history tours, will be the guest speaker.

He will show slides of the natural and cultural features of this small Central American nation, formerly British Hondurus.

The largely undeveloped country with tropical lowlands, pine savannahs, freshwater wetlands, mangrove islands and coral reefs is home to a variety of plants and animals.

Hecker also will talk about how the Massachusetts organization is assisting the Belize Audubon Society in protecting the large tracts of wilderness there.

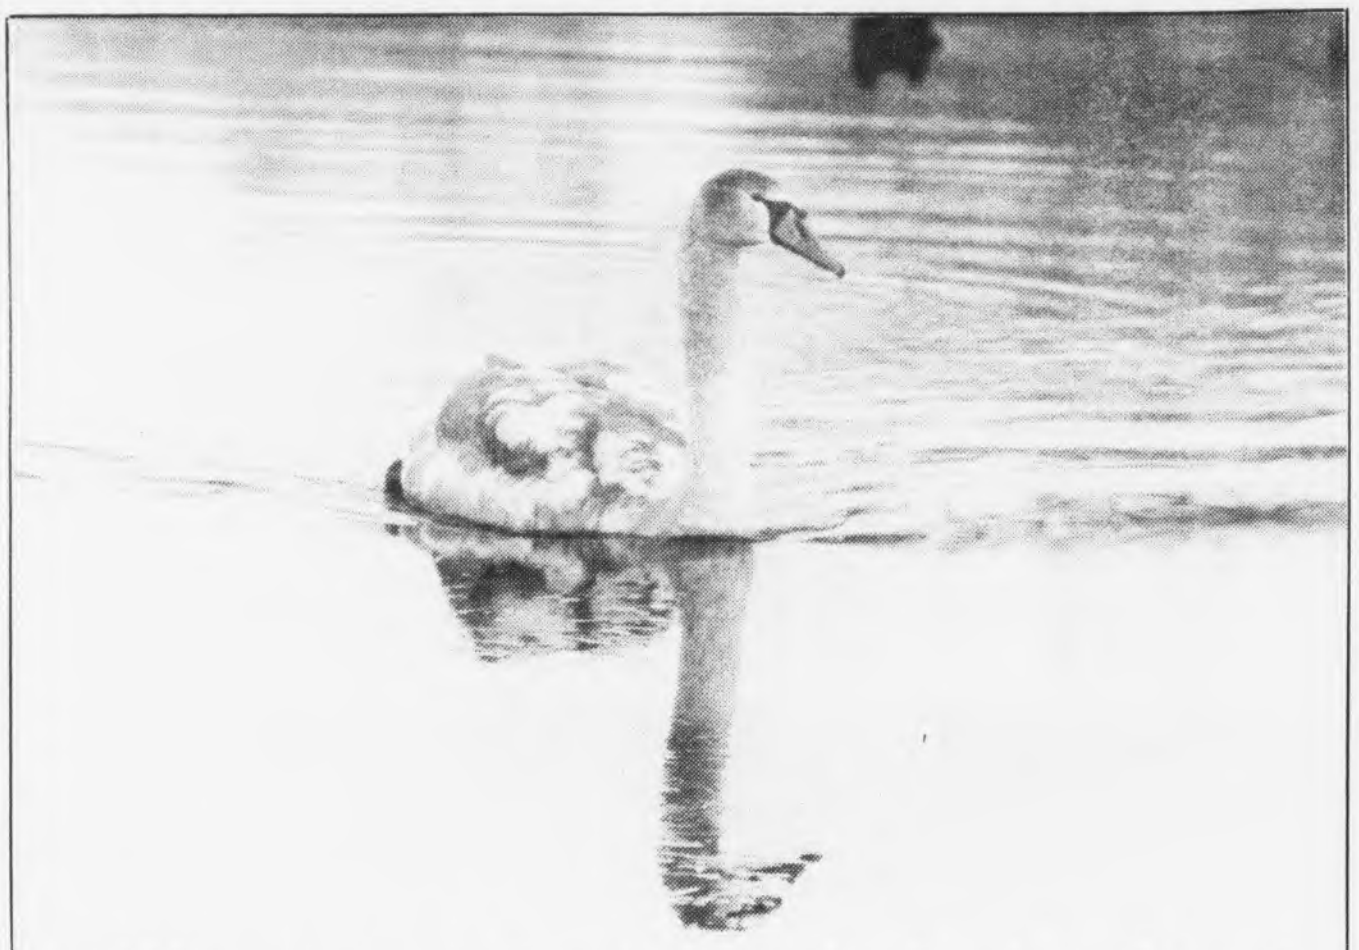
Cost of the program is $4 for members, $5, non-members.

On Saturday, Dec. 12, from 9 a.m. to noon, adults and youngsters can learn how to make their own wrapping paper and greeting cards with simple print-making techniques, dip candles or string spice necklaces to make the holidays festive.

Cost for members is $10 for adults, $5 for children and for non-members, $15 for adults, $7, children.

On Saturday, Dec. 19, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. a field trip to Cambridge to learn about beetles will be held.

Beetles hold the status of being the largest order in the animal kingdom. There are at least 300,000 own species worldwide!



Don't miss this opportunity to see an estimated 600 of these sheath-winged creatures of all sizes and colors at the Harvard Museum of Comparative Zoology's exhibit, "Beetlemania."

Cost is $8 for members, $10 for non-members age 7 and older.

The group will be taking public transportation from Braintree to Harvard Square. The first six who sign up can reserve a space in the Audubon van; others will carpool.

The group will return to the sanctuary headquarters to construct bigger-than-lifesize beetles.

Participants should bring a lunch.

A nearly full-grown cygnet swan swims alone as winter draws near. Naturalists say the swan will fly away when ice forms on the pond. (Kym Marcella photo)

On Dec. 29 from 8:30 a.m. to noon, there will be a winter birding expedition to observe waterfowl prevalent in southeastern Massachusetts.

Dress warmly and bring binoculars. Cost is $10 for members and $15 for non-members.

From 10 a.m. to noon Dec. 29, there will be a winter walk through the North River Wildlife Sanctuary. Cost is $4 for members, $5 for non-members.

In addition, there are bird walks every Friday morning, leaving the South Shore sanctuary office at 8:15 a.m. and returning about 11:15 a.m. Cost of these walks are $3 for members, $4, non-members.

All programs meet at the South Shore Sanctuary office unless otherwise noted. Only pre-registration can reserve a space on a trip, program or workshop.

The office telephone number is 837-9400.

Massachusetts is seasonal home for a number of threatened waterbirds, including the federally endangered piping plover, the roseate and least terns. Enjoy beautiful slides of these and other endangered wildlife presented by Scott Hecker, Massachusetts Audubon Tern Manager on Monday, Dec. 7 from 1 to 3 p.m. Pre-paid registration required (members/$3; non-members/$4.50). Call 659-2559.

WEDNESDAY NATURE WALK

On Wednesday, Dec. 9 from 10 a.m. to noon, explore part of the South Shore with a staff naturalist. Each walk brings new discoveries of seasonal and rare phenomena! Each walk brings new discoveries of seasonal and rare phenomena! Meet at the Science Center. The walk is free for members and $4 for non-members. Call 659-2559 for more information.

KENYA ADVENTURE

Join the safari! Take a guided tour through five of Kenya's Game Parks on Thursday, Dec. 10 from 1 to 3 p.m. Observe not only big game but also rare animals. Included in this slide tour, led by Victoria Smythe, are rare pictures of the stately Masai who are difficult to photograph under Kenyan law. Refreshments will be served following the program. Pre-paid registration required (members/$3; non-membes/$4). Call 659-2559 for information.

WINTER SURVIVAL

When bitter cold and deep snows arrive, animals and plants must change their behavior to adapt to these conditions. What do animals eat? How do they avoid freezing? Where do they live? Come and find out on Friday, Dec. 11 from 10 a.m. to noon. Naturalist Marshall Katler leads this demonstration/walk/talk for all ages. Pre-paid registration required (member/$3.50; non-members/$4.50). For registration information, call 659-2559.

EVERGREEN WREATHS

Create a gorgeous holiday wreath from local evergreens, holly and pine cones with Jeannette McKenzie, craftsperson and herbalist on Friday, Dec. 11 from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. Bring heavy scissors or wire cutters; all other materials will be provided. Refreshments. Pre-paid registration required (members/$12; non-members/$16). Call 659-2559 for registration information.

South Shore Natural Science Center is on Jacobs Lane in Norwell, just off Route 123 and less than a mile from the Hanover/Rte. 3 interchange (Exit 13). The Center is open Mondays through Saturdays 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Sundays and most holidays from 1 to 4 p.m. In the event of cancellation of Norwell Public Schools, SSNSC programs will be postponed. However, the Center itself will be open. Call 659-2559 for information. Closed Dec. 25, 26, 27 and Jan. 1.

'Coats for Kids' project continues

Dwyer's Cleaners 'Coats for Kids" project is half way to its goal of 500 coats to be delivered to the New England's Home for Little Wanderers and its family resource division, and Rosie's Place. The Cohasset store has brought in the most coats with 75 collected thus far.

The drive for used but still-serviceable coats for kids (they'll take adult sizes, too) was originally conceived for by one of Dwyer's sister stores in Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

The last day of the drive is Saturday, Dec. 19. The employees in each of the Dwyers stores are taking this project seriously, and are having an in-house competition to what stores can collect the most coats. As of Dec. 3., the leading stores were as follows:

First: Cohasset, 75; Close second: Pembroke, 60; Third: Norwell; Fourth: Scituate; Fifth: Hingham; Sixth: Weymouth and Hull.

Vocational School deliberates over machine shop

By Patricia Masterson
Mariner correspondent

Parents, teachers and students crowded into the library at the South Shore Vocational Technical High School last Wednesday to voice their concerns to the regional school committee on the machine shop program.

One of the original programs of the 26-year-old school, the course has suffered a shrinking enrollment in the last three years. This year only 13 students are in the $80,000 program.

Dr. Clifford Easton, superintendent of the Vo Tech school, in his annual budget report to the school committee, recommended that the machine shop program be evaluated. He told school committee members that the cost-effectiveness of the program was in question and presented the committee with four alternatives to dropping the program.

"Several members of the committee and numerous staff people have expressed an interest in seeking ways to retain the machine shop, for at least one more year to see if recruitment can be upgraded to serve a larger number of students in that program," Dr. Easton said in a memorandum to the committee.

The first alternative in Dr. Easton's report is to retain the entire $80,000 machine shop program with funds from the surplus revenue and other programs. The shop also has more than $250,000 worth of equipment, according to Gene Hickey, a teacher in the program.

In a second alternative, he recommended retaining half of the program with only one of the two teachers now on staff and later plans for either phasing out the program over a two-year period or reviving it through recruitment efforts. This plan would save $40,000 in the next two years.

A third idea presented to the committee was to combine the machine shop program with machine packaging under one teacher only. The new program could be taught at either the Hanover or Abington campus. The savings, again, would be $40,000.

In the final alternative, the entire program, including the two teachers, could be saved with budget savings and surplus revenue, according to Dr. Easton.

The committee responded to the alternatives with strong concerns about keeping the program. Although no voting occurred because the meeting was scheduled as a budget hearing, committee members expressed their support for the machine shop program.

"I don't want to see new programs come into the school if we have to eliminate old ones," said Dennis Blackwell, committeeman from Hanover, "All towns are fighting for a shrinking student base and we have to recognize that finance committees are limiting increases.

"Proposition 2 1/2 has eaten up surpluses in the budgets, so we are going to have to fight for every dollar. This may be the most difficult budget period I have faced since I have been on this committee," he said.

Proposition 2 1/2 also is having an effect on the town of Abington and will affect that finance committee's decision about the Vo Tech School, according to Abington representative, Walter Easttey. He reminded residents and teachers that the committee has to present the budget to eight towns.

The regional school district serves Abington, Cohasset, Hanover, Hanson, Norwell, Rockland, Scituate and Whitman.

In addition to budget concerns, the committee discussed what the loss of the program would mean to the community and to the state.

"I had a call from a gentleman who runs a machine shop in Braintree, and he commends the type of students we graduate," said David Chittim, commiteeman from Cohasset. "He said our students' techincal backgrounds are of a high quality but he also said it is hard to imagine a vocational technical school without a machine shop program. It would be worth some sacrifices to retain this program."

Alarmed teachers and parents also responded to the possibility of the program closing.

"There are a number of students and parents and people from industry here tonight because we all consider this a serious matter," said Don Visser, a teacher in the shop. "It is not only that two people might lose their jobs but that the program serves area industry in a vital way.

"It is one of the fundamental trades in this country. Students choose this trade and love this trade," he said.

Shop teacher Hickey voiced his concern about the philosophy of dropping the machine shop program.

"Once we strip the integrity of the trade areas, we become a skill center," he said.

In a period of growing need for tradesmen in the state of Massachusetts, the Vo Tech school needs a strong public relations and promotion strategy, insisted committee chairman Robert Molla, Jr., of Norwell.

"We have been the MIT of vocational education in this area," he said. "We will do everything we can to save this program."

Committeemen agreed to embark on a tough recruitment program with brochures, media campaigns, discussions with lower grade students and contact with area schools. The school recently held an open house for community members and prospective students.

In other budget presentations, representatives from packaging, welding, marketing and merchandising, painting and wallpapering and others,presented budgets to the committee.

The remainder of the budget hearings will be held Dec. 9. Final budget decisions are expected Dec. 16.

Obituaries

Mercie Vinal Nichols

A memorial service was held Friday, Dec. 4 at the Second Congregational Church for Mercie Vinal Nichols, 88, who died Nov. 30 at home. Burial was in Cohasset Central Cemetery.

Miss Nichols was a founder and benefactor of the South Shore Art Center. An accomplished painter, she taught art in many area public schools. A descendant of two Mayflower passengers, she was also a member of the Cohasset Historical Society.

Miss Nichols was a graduate of LaSalle Junior College and studied at the Museum School under the late MacIvor Reddie. She was a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Daughter of the late Steven and Clarissa (Brown) Nichols, she leaves several cousins.

Memorial donations may be made to the South Shore Art Center, 109 Ripley Road in Cohasset, or to the Cohasset Historical Society, c/o Charles Fink, Summer Street in Cohasset.

Shirley F. Prendergast

A funeral Mass was celebrated at 10 a.m. Dec. 10 in St. Anthony's Church for Shirley F. (Dixon) Prendergast, 61, who died Dec. 6 at Quincy City Hospital after a long illness. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

Mrs. Prendergast, a lifelong resident of Cohasset, was a retired teacher's aide at the Joseph Osgood School. She was also a member of St. Anthony's Church and choir.

Wife of the late Joseph E. Prendergast, she leaves four sons, Michael J. Prendergast of Hingham, Kevin R. Prendergast and Daniel P. Prendergast, both of Cohasset, and Brian P. Prendergast of Milton, Vt.; a brother, Arthur J. Dixon of Cohasset and six grandchildren.

Funeral arrangements were completed by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St.

Experiencing the joys of early winter

By Joan Pinkham
Mariner staff

No need to check your thermometer before venturing outside, for a glance out the window and your rhododendren tells all.

When the leaves are furled into the shape of a pencil, Mother Nature is telling us it's below freezing.

But when the thermometer shoots above 32 degrees, the buds that are already forming are surrounded by green leaves that are flat as the proverbial pancake.

Watch them open and shut as the Halycon Days are scheduled to begin on the 11th, usually a series of calm weather following the blustery winds of autumn.

A wreath in the window, a swag on the door, or a basket of greens on the hall table warm our hearts during the holiday season.

No need to spend a fortune for ready-made decorations when the makings are right in our own back yard.

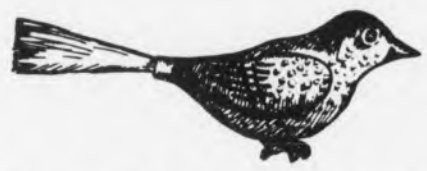
First, find yourself a flat-bottomed basket, set a plastic container in it and a dampened block of floral foam. Now, don your boots and mittens to explore the yard for branches of balsam, spruce, pine or boxwood.

Ivy, pyrocantha, pine cones and bayberry are treasures, too. Arrange your greens in the basket, and for bright touches, tuck in a cyclamen plant or two, half a dozen white mums, or a small pot of poinsettia.

Come Christmas, you can change to holly, red carnations, roses or artificial fruits for a different holiday theme.

The Moon of Cold and Long Nights was aptly named by the Indians who settled along the banks of our rivers which served as highways, by canoe, to the ocean and surrounding tribes.

December's sunsets are the earliest of the year and the days the shortest.



However, an hour or two in the garden can be worked in, for filling the bird feeder is a daily task.

It's also that time of year when the annual bird seed sale is scheduled at the South Shore Natural Science Center. If you wish to attract winter finches, evening grosbeaks and pine siskins, Dec. 12 and 13 are the official sale days, but a great variety of seeds are always available at their lovely gift shop.

Playboy magazine has its pin-up girl of the month. Not to be outdone, the Norwell Science Center has selected the cardinal as their December pin-up bird.

Calendars, doormats, towels and greeting cards are often adorned with prints of these vermillion-red, black-faced birds. When you hear a loud melodious whistle coming from nearby thickets or woods, if you listen carefully you usually hear the dowdy female softly answering.

When a thick carpet of snow blankets the ground, our pin-up bird is a welcome visitor. One way to make your yard the bird mecca of the neighborhood is to ask Santa for a heated bird bath — a treat for both you and the birds.

One of the joys of this season is the huge displays of poinsettias that are everywhere. We tend to admire the pink and white plants, as well as the traditional red.

A well cared-for poinsettia should hold its leaves and colored bracts well into March, and some plants are still quite lovely as late as June.

If your plant begins shedding in February, it may want a rest. Reduce the watering gradually until you're only giving enough to keep the soil from drying completely.

Some clever people go through the rather intricate process of handling the poinsettia so that it will bloom a second season.

Don't forget that a plant is always a welcome gift. Other Christmas perennials are Christmas peppers, Christmas cactus, cyclamen and azaleas.

When our pond waters are black, trees bare and grey and the fallen leaves a dull bronze, New England seems to be at its dearest. A trip to your nearest nursery is sure to add a touch of spring in midwinter, and the greenhouse at Bridgewater State College is said to offer a small evergreen arboretum.

Another gift-giving idea is that of a living Christmas tree. Now is the time to dig the hole for its permanent home after the holidays. Bring the soil you remove into your basement or garage and cover the hole with leaves or salt marsh hay to prevent snow and ice from filling up the hole.

Better than rock salt for melting snow and ice in your drive or walkways, is lawn fertilizer. Keep a bag handy for sprinkling around, as rock salt can ruin your plants — as well as your carpeting when tracked into the house.

Gift plants will last longer and look better if you read the instructions and follow them. Our houses are usually too hot and dry, but a misty-fine spray of water helps to provide the humidity plants love.

Buy yourself a good big bag of marble chips and set the gift plant on an inch-high layer of them. Keep the chips moist and use a good commercial plant food, (Peter's is excellent) when watering, but never overwater. Plants set under artificial light on dark days respond by blooming for you.

Birds we have spotted lately include a snowy owl at Duxbury Beach, a flock of snow buntings on the sand dunes, a flock of lapland longspurs and at the feeders, kinglets and tufted titmice.

A common black-headed gull was found among a flock of 35 Bonaparte's gulls in North Scituate. Those majestic white whistling swans are gracing local waters, and in the marshes at Damon's Point, a lumbering grey kingfisher rose up out of the reeds the other day.

Keep the bird bath filled with water. Chop up the leftover apples, meat scraps, stale bread or leftover toast and cereals, then mix with a little peanut butter for the birds.

Keep the birds coming, for soon the annual Christmas Count will be under way, and reports are welcomed by all.

INTRODUCING

Dr. Ronald E. Wuotila
Chiropractor

Please allow me to introduce myself to the town of Hanover and it's surrounding communities. I am originally from the South Shore area and graduated from Palmer College of Chiropractic in Davenport, Iowa. I have received extensive pre and post graduate training at the Gonstead Clinic of chiropractic in Mount Horeb, Wisconsin which specializes in the treatment and care of patients with structural problems of the spine. My practical experience includes six years of clinical work treating patients for various spinal related conditions utilizing X-ray analysis and a specific adjusting technique.

Being a licensed Chiropractor in the state of Massachusetts, I did an extensive demographic study of the South Shore region and decided the town of Hanover was centrally located to service patients from many communities. My new office is conveniently located on Route 53, one and one half miles south of the Hanover Mall exit 13. To aquaint you with our newly opened office and all that Chiropractic care has to offer, my staff and I would like to provide to you or another family member, a spinal examination absolutely FREE. This examination (a $35.00 value) will include an orthopedic test, neurological test, blood pressure check, spinal alignment check, examination for restricted or excess motion in the spine, muscle strengthness test, and a private consultation with the Doctor to discuss the results.

SHARE THE SPIRIT OF THE SEASON

Food baskets, clothing, toys, Thanksgiving/Christmas dinners and visits to those in institutions are all part of The Salvation Army's Christmas program. Last year the number of individuals requesting assistance exceeded nine million.

But need doesn't end with the Christmas holiday. Your gift enables us to continue providing help, hope and understanding during the rest of the year.

With your help we can share the spirit of the season.

Sharing is Caring THE SALVATION ARMY

Public notices

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS THE TRIAL COURT THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT
Norfolk Division
Docket No. 87P2993E1

Estate of CHARLES A. McCARTHY late of COHASSET In the County of NORFOLK

NOTICE

A petition has been presented in the above-captioned matter praying that the last will of said decedent be proved and allowed and that ARTHUR P. McCARTHY of COHASSET in the County of NORFOLK be appointed executor named in the will without surety on the bond.

If you desire to object to the allowance of said petition, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before 10:00 in the forenoon on January 6, 1988.

In addition you should file a written statement of objections to the petition, giving the specific grounds therefore, within thirty (30) days after the return day (or such other time as the Court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) in accordance with Probate Rule 16.

Witness, Robert M. Ford, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Dedham, the twenty-fifth day of November, one thousand nine hundred and eighty seven.

Cohasset Mariner

Vol. X, No. 12 | Thursday, December 17, 1987 | Tel. 383-6731 | 40 cents

Haidan Hodgson put a lot of heart and soul into her performance of "Five Gold Rings" at the Osgood School. (Alan Chapman)

Will keep school policy

School officials reject resolution by clergy

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Once again, town officials proclaimed their support of a Sunday day of rest, but they failed to formally adopt a resolution proposed by local clergymen.

The school committee was requested by Cohasset's clergymen to adopt a resolution that calls for their assistance in maintaining a family day of rest.

But following a recommendation from Supt. Stephen Hart, the committee decided to keep their own policy which states school activities should not be held on Sundays. "This is our practice," he told four of Cohasset's clergy Monday night, "and encouragment on the part of the school system is appropriate."

"We need to keep that balance between rest and work. I caution you not to schedule every waking moment."

– Rev. Clifford Cutler

But Supt. Hart warned the committee members not to formally adopt the resolution proposed by the clergymen, saying it is a "dangerous precedent" for the public school system to establish.

"You would be putting yourselves and future boards in a difficult position," he stated. "We would like to stress that we do not encourage other groups to use our facilities on Sunday. But it is a dangerous precedent to establish a firm policy, if religious groups do not observe Sunday (as their Sabbath). To say you can't use our facilities for religious reasons, would be in error."

"To say you can't use our facilities for religious reasons, would be in error."

– Supt. Stephen Hart

Rev. Edward Atkinson, of the Universalist Unitarian Church, spoke to the committee members, and urged them to follow a more strict interpretation of their own policy. He noted the recent powder-puff football game at the high school was rescheduled to a Sunday, and the high school graduation was moved a few years ago from 3 to 1 on a Sunday afternoon, thus interfering with an important youth group activity at his church.

"You're grabbing that end of the vacuum," he said, referring to the erosion of time available to spend with family members. "I would rather see a policy that states that people need a day of rest from their hurried, intensive scale of activities. I urge you to be very strict. This is the thing that tends to erode."

Hands-on work by church to help homeless

A knowledge of carpentry skills is not necessary. The only requisites are strong hands and a willing heart.

With that in mind, members of Cohasset's First Parish have worked together on a project that carries with it bone-tiring satisfaction. But more importantly, it will result in a roof over the heads of some grateful people who are now without a home.

The First Parish involvement in South Shore's Habitat for Humanity actually began more than a year ago. At that time, according to Rev. Edward Atkinson, the parishioners were trying to decide how best to expend the $25,000 donation made by Warner Brothers for use of the church building in the filming of The Witches of Eastwick.

"It was the feeling of the parishioners that they didn't want the church to become dependent on outside gifts," he explained. "They decided to donate the money outside the church walls. They simply felt the congregation should support their own buildings."

A committee was established to decide how the donation should be divided among a variety of worthy causes. "Habitat caught the imagination of the committee," according to Rev. Atkinson, who explained the total donation was not limited to the South Shore project.

Habitat for Humanity is a national organization, of which the South Shore branch is affiliated. At this time, there is no South Shore housing project underway, although a site in Randolph has been completed, and one will soon begin in East Bridgewater. Determined to continue their quest, the church committee approached the Boston-based affiliate, Christians for Urban Justice.

They are in the midst of constructing a 10-unit housing complex in Dorchester. The complex, which was scheduled for completion last summer, is far behind schedule. But that does not deter the enthusiasm of the voluntary construction crew, including the Cohasset contingent.

A work party from First Parish was dispatched to Dorchester twice this fall, where they helped clean the site debris, installed subflooring, and layed sewer lines to the homes.

"This project truly crosses church lines," Rev. Atkinson stated. "It is simply an interdenominational, voluntary effort. Alongside the volunteers are the actual people who will one day be residing in these homes. They work as hard as everyone else to get these buildings constructed."

According to Rev. Atkinson, Habitat for Humanity provides zero percent financing to the perspective homeowners. But one of the ground rules is that the people who will live there, must help build the structure. "There's a sense of ownership at stake here," he said. "But it's also a wonderful program for people who just can't get up the capital to finance a home."

The theme of this year's outreach program for First Parish is "homelessness and hunger." The theme is altered annually, according to outreach member Jack Martin. "Next year, it could be retardation or prisons, or some other social theme."

The work crews from Cohasset numbered 14, including men, women and teenagers. They worked at

The changing face of Ripley Road

By Bob Tis

The spotlight on the Cohasset business community once shared by Rte. 3A and Main Street now includes another territory - Ripley Road.

Phil Smith has turned that once ancient red ediface across from the post office into what will surely be one of the most interesting retail outlets in town. This completes a cycle, along with the new art center, the Cohasset Executive Center, as well as extensive improvements to the Log n' Line, that make Ripley Road into a posh new downtown section.

"I hope that we will have some more imitators," said Smith, whose new development will officially open in the spring. "Right now, the area looks as if it had been planned that way. It looks much more, 'New England' now, especially with the park and the post office. I could very easily see this developing into the major retail place in town."

Smith purchased the large red structure from the art center when they decided to move a few doorsteps down the street.

"It was pretty much of a dump when we got it," Smith admits. "We almost had to rebuild the entire building."

"Most people told me to tear it down," said Smith. "But I thought it would be a nice project. It certainly is a whole lot of work."

Smith gives all of the credit for his new building to local contractor Bob Burns.

"I knew him and I know that if he is going to start something he is going to finish it right," said Smith. "I just left everything up to him."

Burn's work on the building which started in the fall included a total revamping of the floors, the lighting, the heating and the walls.

The building, which dates back to the 1800s, saw its first prime during the years of direct train service to Boston. It has been home to a carpenter's shop, Litchfield Express, the offices of Warren Pratt and Bailey's Delicatessen.

"I think it has more potential for retail," said Smith,

New capital campaign

After successfully completing a $950,000 building campaign, the South Shore Art Center hopes to raise an additional $270,000 by June, 1988.

The additional amount, which should total $300,000, according estimates by the capital campaign committee, will be needed to complete all construction on the facility and to supply furnishings, equipment and landscaping. According to Shirley Neer, president of the board of director, "much of the construction was completed prior to the grand opening of the building, however, these costs remain a part of the Phase II total."

More classes, lectures, worksops and exhibits have been held at the new art center building, located at 119 Ripley Road, according to Neer. For the past few years, the capital campaign has raised money through combined donations by private corporations and foundations and individuals. Other fundraisers, including the June, 1986 Gala, investment income from stock donations and gifts made in memoriam were also added into the capital building fund.

In addition to housing more classes and exhibits, the art center is available for corporate and private functions. and private functions. A new gift gallery includes unusual hand-crafted items made by member artists.

Throughout the next few months, several receptions for prospective donors will be held to show the building and introduce the public to the art center's programs and activities.

Bob Jordan, chairman of the Community Center Building Committee thanks Don Heap, president of Hancock Paint. Heap donated 100 gallons of paint for the Community Center addition.

911 plans stalled

Plans to install an emergency response telephone system in the police and fire station will be put on hold until after the headquarters are refurbished.

In response to an inquiry by Gertrude Hooper, who said the current fire department telephone number is not easily recalled, the selectmen's executive secretary said improvements to that situation are currently stalled. Although he agreed a 911 telephone system would benefit the town, Donald Andrew noted that until the addition/renovation project is completed at the police and fire station, the system can not be installed.

"To let you know what we have been doing regarding this, I can tell you that we have been talking with New England Telephone for the past year and a half about installing this service. We were about to set a date when we became aware of an enhanced 911 service that would do much more for the town, that should be ready for installation about the time we hope the addition/renovation project for the fire/police station is completed," Andrew stated in his reply to Hooper.

"To sum it up, it is in our plans to be installed in the fairly near future, but we are planning to coordinate it with other plans for the fire department."

Helping the homeless . . .

the Dorchester site on two Saturdays during in November.

"They represented a large cross-section of the church," he explained. "For a lot of the women, it was their first time working in construction. But we emphasized there was no need for skills. If you can pound a hammer, we need you."

Among the tasks the Cohasset crew performed last month were sanding walls,taping sheet rock and staining outside trim. But constantly beside them, every hour of that long, cold day last month, were the proud owners of these soon-to-be-completed townhouses. It's called sweat equity - hopeful owners work just as hard, if not harder, than anyone else on the construction site.

"It was a nice feeling," Martin explained. "I saw people there the second time who had been there the first time. There were professionals, a nurse, a Harvard medical student, and many other people. We all had different levels of expertise. I'm a clinical psychologist, but I figured I knew how to dig a hole and connect two pipes, and that's what I did.

"The exciting part of this process is that these people were involved in helping the poor. These people can make it - if they are given the capital to begin. They are able to pay a low mortgage, they just don't have the money to start." The average cost of a home is $24,000, with no interest on the mortgage.

Martin recalled a home in Randolph which was rehabilitated by Habitat volunteers. A mother and her children were living under a badly-leaking roof - a piece of plastic collected the pouring rainwater. The volunteer workers completely renovated the home, making it liveable for the grateful family.

The house in East Bridgewater, which Habitat hopes to renovate in the spring, now contains five feet of water in the basement. There is no hot water, and buckets of water must be poured down the toilet to make it flush. There is no heat in the building. "South Shore Habitat got involved with this house on an emergency basis, just to get the heat turned on," he added.

This house will hopefully gain the attention of at least four professional architects from First Parish who have volunteered their expertise.

In the meantime, Martin is anxious to gather another Cohasset work crew into the Dorchester site. "It's a very gratifying experience," he commented. "We were working with people with the same kind of interest - helping others. It was a wonderful, unselfish time for everyone."

Martin recalled that some of the Habitat volunteers from other areas could be labeled "extremely religious." First Parish members are motivated more by humanity and social concerns, he said, but all workers found a chord of similarity and friendship. "We were all there for one reason, to help build someone a home. There really were no differences," according to Martin.

The church has initiated a larger involvement with Habitat. Proceeds from last week's Christmas concert will go toward the various South Shore Habitat's projects. A spokesman for Habitat recently talked to the parishioners. After a discussion with about 40 church members, the Habitat official walked away with $533 in donations. That money was supplemented with a small portion of The Witches of Eastwick funds which enabled Habitat to purchase copper water piping for the Dorchester building.

Another Cohasset volunteer who traveled twice to the Dorchester site was Bobbi Leary. "I think they even prefer women volunteers," she stated in all seriousness. "Women see what has to be done, and they do it. But actually, anybody can learn to do the things we did."

Leary, who said she has no construction background, nor any working knowledge of carpentry, was attracted nonetheless to the Habitat projects. "It was a chance to do something in the real material sense," she said. "What appealed to me, was that this would actually produce something."

Leary helped clean and organize the work site in Dorchester. "It was very satisfying to leave that site and know that the builders could proceed more efficiently," she recalled.

"I never thought I could do this kind of work. I was actually laying sewer lines down in a trench," she continued. "I worked alongside the pipefitters. It was a wonderful feeling to know that people will live in this house, and our work made that possible."

The Cohasset resident recalled that some Habitat volunteers have never participated in church-sponsored activities before. "But they spent the whole day in Dorchester - from 8 in the morning to 5 at night. It strikes a common chord in many people. People just don't want to write a check all the time - they want to get involved. This was very real work.

"To fix a roof on a home, is to make that family very happy," she noted. "I met some of the people who will be living in the Dorchester home. We had a long conversation. They are very happy, and they're working very hard to see this dream come true."

Thinking back on that bitterly cold day in November, Leary said her emotions still soar. "It was one of the most wonderful days I have ever had."

who will be keeping history alive within his shops.

Presently, plans call for three different Smith-owned shops in the large open area. Browsers will be able to walk freely between the Carriage Trade Room, the Tack Room Gallery and the Garden Shop.

The Carriage Trade room is named after a former occupant of the space who made items for the horse-pulled carts. The room will sport wildlife sculptures, antiques and "Cohasset type stuff." There is already an ancient wood-burning stove filled with history.

"We want to create a certain ambiance to shop in," said Smith. "We are not doing this halfway."

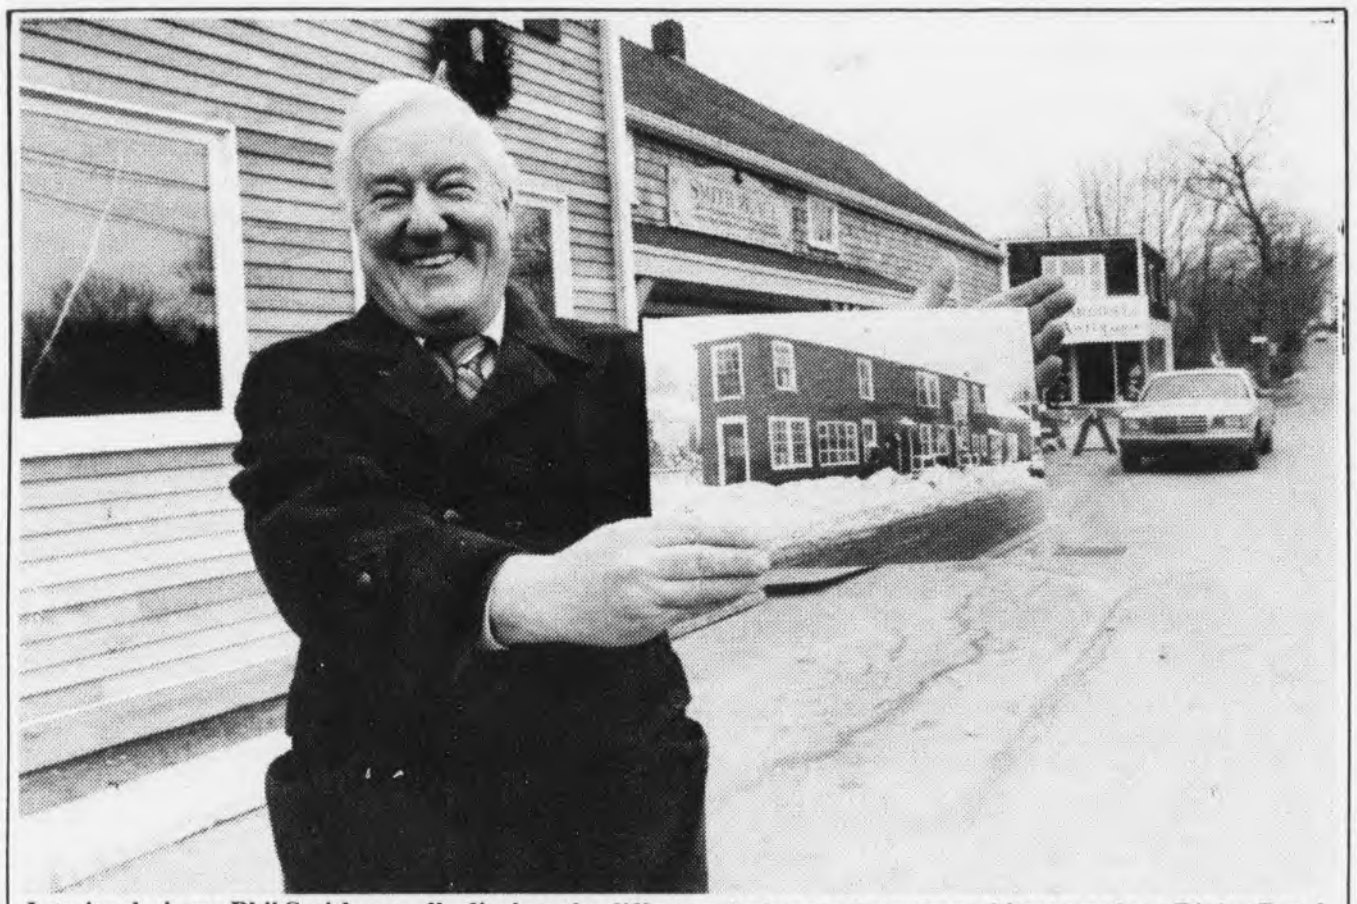
The Tack Room will contain works of art and unusual items. The Garden Shop will show off statuary, antiques and items for the garden. The building is now populated by various animals and other trinkets from the Norton-Lazerelle Folk Art Collection.

"It is really going to be quite a one-of-a-kind thing," said Smith. "It would be something like you might find on Newbury Street without all of the stuffiness."

Smith is happy as a clam, living and working in Cohasset.

"I like being a merchant, as well as designing," said Smith. "It is great showing people things they have never seen before."

"Cohasset has been good to me," continued Smith, a native of Oak Park, Illinois. "I adopted Cohasset about twenty years ago. People have been coming back to my stores ever since. "



"Cohasset is a rare jewel of a place," added the white-haired businessman. "People come from all over the world and they are always fabulously impressed with Cohasset."

Smith has some definite views on where the town is and where it is headed.

"I don't want to see buses of tourists coming into town or big street fairs. We are catering to a small audience. I serve mainly the people who live in this area," said Smith.

"What makes our town so unique is that the owners are right there. That is so rare today. We are all right in the center of town where everyone can see us. You can catch us in the middle of the street.Twenty years from now, I will hear how some object that I sold someone is doing."

"It is not easy doing business here," added Smith. "We cannot do the same kind of traffic that other places can.

Interior designer Phil Smith proudly displays the difference he has made to the architecture along Ripley Road. (Alan Chapman photo)

Smith believes that most of Rte. 3A is populated with a more self-interested corporation type of a business.

"What works in 3A doesn't necessarily work in the village," said Smith. "The tradition carries on here in the village. I wouldn't go up to 3A if they gave me free rent."

"I think people support the downtrown area as much as they can. Shopping malls have killed themselves. A group of high priced shops with big names would die down here. People, especially the Yankees, want a dollar for a dollar."

"Twelve years ago the village was in trouble. Fortunatly most of the buildings are now owned by the merchants. I think that there should be more business people and less politicians. They are the backbone of this country. They have had to make their own way. Go through their own tortures. They can sympathize with other people much better," said Smith.

"A lot of the people out today aren't businessmen, they are just technicians. Businessmen are interested in making a fair exchange. Lately I think that a MBA is getting to be nothing more than a license to cheat. It is that kind of attitude that we are starting to get in this country," said Smith.

Business is a lot of fun. I hope to continue on for some time. I encourage young people to go into business for themselves. I think people should be encouraged to work hard and learn how to look at risks and take chances."

Smith is now very concerned about the parking problem in the village.

"I am not afraid to be the mouthpiece," said Smith, who represented a number of petition signers in front of selectmen concerning dilapidated street conditions on Smith Place.

"Some cars are parked in the two-hour spaces all day," said Smith. The town lot is filled every morning. It is only right that the road should be in good repair.

Smith hopes that the new people coming into Cohasset, "are just like the people who are leaving."

"God isn't making views like we have here in Cohasset anymore. It is worth a million to have a house in this town."

While retaining much of its original flavor, a new development on Ripley Road is helping Cohasset keep in touch with the business world.

The Cohasset Executive Center at 115 Ripley Road is now open for an hour, a day or a year depending on your business needs.

"This is a nice alternative for someone who needs a professional environment but doesn't want to spend 30 to 40 thousand dollars to do it," said Lee B. Palmiter, whom you might remember as the former proprieter of the bicycle shop on the ground level.

Palmiter's new development adds another jewel to the fastest growing business area in Cohasset, Ripley Road.

The Executive Center includes five offices as well as a large conference room, a reception area and a small kitchen. The building is impressive from the moment one enters the door. High ceilings, glass walls and tables and tasteful works of art immediately create an impressive air at the center.

"It is a chance for the businessman to share overhead with other professionals and operate a fully-equipped professional office at a fraction of the cost," said Palmiter.

Palmiter feels that with the increasing traffic, as well as the costs and the overhead involved in commuting to the city, more and more people will be seeking office space on a local level.

"I think you are going to see a lot more people working in this area," said Palmiter.

"Ten years ago this area was the stepchild of town. Most of the businesses on Ripley Road were really fringe businesses," said Palmiter. "The changes have really pushed us into the mainstream. There is better parking here and it is easily accessible."

"It is really a nice thing for the area," said Palmiter. "It is a natural move for the local business economy. You would have to go out to Route 53 to find something like this. That is not convenient and all of the features you would find out there we have here."

Palmiter's building has more options than a Cadillac. Rent includes heating and air conditioning, lighting and electricity, water and sewer, use of a furnished conference room, a furnished reception area and a kitchenette. The location features on-street parking and a rear access also with parking. There is central station security system protecting the newly constructed building.

According to Palmiter, the Executive Center has been designed with the twentieth-century businessman in mind. A multiline telephone system can handle over 100 lines at once. Copying facilities, furniture rental, word processing and Database are all available.

"We have the equipment to interface anywhere in the world," said Palmiter.

"Someone could just write a check and be in business tomorrow," said Palmiter. "This is perfect for a company that needs a satellite location but cannot justify the costs of a new office."

"It is all part of a big change on the South Shore," said Palmiter. "There is quite a bit of commercial activity on Routes 53, 139 and 123. People are saying what do we have to go to Boston for. More and more people are beginning to think this way."

Palmiter is quite happy with atmosphere that he has helped to create on Ripley Road. The Gaslights and the sidewalks were a personal project of his.

"I think that Constitution Park is one of the nicest spots in town," said Palmiter of the open space directly across the street which was rededicated this summer.

"It is more personal," said Palmiter of his location. "It is really part of Cohasset as opposed to a commercial strip."

"The village also has a tradition. Ripley Road is just as convenient as 3A."

We tried to maintain some of the original flavor of the old depot building," explained Palmiter. A slate roof and old style dormers recreate some of the original aspects of the building.

"We wanted to create something to enhance the village feeling in Cohasset and combine it with some functional modern office space. It is good for any business from a million dollar corporation to a sales consultant," said Palmiter.

"I think that it is good that we are keeping pace with other South Shore communities," said Palmiter. Formerly commuting might have had its advantages, but that is not true anymore."

The South Shore Art Center is a big success story in many ways. Moving about 100 yards down the street the art center has opened up a prime piece of downtown property while turning a former auto body shop into the Taj Mahal of Cohasset.

"We still have a small amount of things to finish," said Joni Jensen of the center. "We still need some funds."

The art center was founded 30 years ago to serve as a cultural resource for the towns on the South Shore. The center's goal is to provide a focal point for the cultural interests of area residents and promote artistic interests of both amateur and professional artists.

The art center facilitates the artistic appetite of the South Shore by showcasing artists, presenting special exhibits, organizing the Art Festival and instructing beginners and profesionals of all ages.

The art center is also developing a lecture and film series featuring local and nationally known artists.

All of the growth at the art center will come from within in the near future.

"It is still a little premature to even talk about expanding after our major renovations," said Jensen.

Jensen is pleased with new developments on Ripley Road.

"We have really cleaned up the whole corner. Phil Smith has been doing a fantastic job with our old building. He has worked very hard on it," said Jensen.

"There has been a lot of building in this area. I hope that it doesn't change the village too much. I think that it is a great improvement," said Jensen.

School committee rejects resolution . . .

He continued, "I think there is plenty of evidence to prove that your policy is not followed with the kind of rigor I would like to see. Why can't Booster breakfasts and other activities be scheduled on Saturdays? And if all seven days are scheduled, there is no time left, whether you want to spend it by sleeping late or worshipping in church. Everyone needs some time out. This could create a healthier community."

PSO representative Letitia Jordan suggested the clergymen also discuss the resolution with the Cohasset Recreation Commission. She explained that her son plays basketball seven days a week for recreation-sponsored teams. It is difficult to pry him away from Sunday games, she explained, particularly those that require travel time and therefore cut into church services or family outings. "I think the recreation department is the next end to hit," Jordan stated.

School committee chairman Joseph Nedrow reminded the audience that one of the greatest joys for parents is to watch their child participate in an organized activity. Jordan agreed, but added, "when it is time for a family day, the complaints are so great - you have to make this child stay home and not do their sport, " which she noted is not the spirit or intent of spending leisure time together.

Despite the committee's reluctance to formally adopt the resolution proposed by the clergymen, member Nancy Sandell said discussions about the issue have raised the consciousness of the community.

"I believe society looks at the church and the schools to set their ethics and values. And I thank you for making the community aware of an increasing problem," she said.

In explaining the resolution to the committee, Rev. Atkinson asked the school committee to remember that along with education by the school system, there must also be time set aside each week for religious education. "Five days a week (of secular education) are protected by the law. We simply ask for consideration and respect for some timeframe. We find that time encroached upon. But we hope the school committee will respect this time on Sunday mornings. Adoption of the policy is one way to proceed," he stated.

Supt. Hart explained that all school athletic coaches are informed not to schedule any games or practices on Sundays. "I hope this is being carried out," he said, noting that the clergymen should notify him of any infringement of this school policy.

Rev. Clifford Cutler of St. Stephen's Church, commended the policy established by the school department. "From my own perspective, it meets my needs. We need to keep that balance between rest and work," he stated. "I caution you not to schedule every waking moment - just to have some day not to have our children under hurried pressure, to have sports or whatever scheduled every moment of the week."

Supt. Hart agreed, noting that many children are forced by their competitive spirit to participate in numerous activities in order to get into the "right" schools.

The superintendent also explained it is up to the individual school administrator to decide whether a child is allowed time off from school requirements for religious reasons. Because they are closer to the situation, administrators can decide if a student should be excused from his daily academic requirements because of religious responsibilities.

The consensus of the committee, according to chairman Nedrow, "is to reaffirm our practice and to ensure that it is followed. And we rely on you (local clergymen) if the policy is not adhered to, rather than adopt another policy."

Board backs SEMASS

The dump study committee voted Dec. 10 to sign a contract with the SEMASS trash-to-energy facility in Rochester.

With authorization from October's special town meeting, the study committee will recommend that selectmen negotiate with SEMASS or a similar facility.

Not all of the members of the dump study committee are convinced that SEMASS is best answer. The current rates for SEMASS are between $50 and $60 a ton depending on the length of the contract.

"If anyone can come up with another alternative by next week we will be glad to consider it," said board chairman Pricilla Tebbetts. "We still don't know if they are going to put an addition onto the plant."

SEMASS is waiting for commitments from a number of towns before they can receive financing for their project. The tenative date for opening the SEMASS addition, providing funding is available, is May, 1992. Dump officials predict that the present town landfill has only three more years of existence.

around town

☐During October, Marie Palm of Nichols Road negotiated the most sales through the Cohasset office while Mary Ellen Neagle of Pond Street tied with Steve Forman of Jerusalem Road for the top listing position. Another Cohasset resident, Connie Cliffordof North Main Street, listed the most property through Conway's Hull office during October.

☐ Sunday certainly was a Christmasy day in Cohasset! Santa arriving by helicopter was a spectacular sight, and was witnessed by about 1,000. When he proceeded to the common in the antique fire engine, it was enjoyed by all. The downtown shops were packed with people, a lot of which vowed to complete all of their shopping in our village. We all should support our local merchants, their gifts and goodies are grand!

☐ Here's hoping that Fred Howe recovers real soon, in fact we hope he's reading this from his favorite chair at home!

☐ Speaking of recovering at home, we are happy to report that Mrs. Mulcahy is doing just that! She'll be buzzing around town in no time, and that's super news!

☐ Another group contributed to the White Christmas in Cohasset last Sunday. Members of the Second Congregational Church (young and old alike) got together and sang Christmas Carols to the elderly and shut-ins in Cohasset. Hats off to all of you singers, it sure was a nice thing to do.

☐ There is still time for you to contribute your share for Christmas. Take your old jackets and coats to Dwyers Cleaners. They will clean and repair them and then donate them to either New England Home for Little Wanderers, Rosie's Place or the Salvation Army. That really is a "two-fer", you get rid of your old coats (wearable of course) and they will be reused! Help keep someone warm.

Mary and Bill Jason toast to 47 years of marriage at last week's 60+ Club Christmas luncheon. (Alan Chapman)

☐ Janet (Malloy) Rattenbury was such a beautiful bride, it seems like yesterday she was a student at CHS! She and Mark were sweethearts back then, too! Here's to a long and happy life for the Rattenburys.

Had a nice chat with Nicole Prencipe the other day. She's home from college for the first time since September, and loves it! Everyone knows that Nicole is a friendly, outgoing gal with a great aptitude for studying, she'll do well.

☐ Robert Jackson is at home, recovering from recent surgery. Drop him a card, he'd love to hear from you.

☐ Another patient that has had recent surgery is our former harbormaster, Harry Ritter. Those of you who know Harry know that he had a bad back for a long time. Well, it's all fixed now, and Harry should be up and around, feeling as good as new, real soon. We all hope so, Harry.

☐ Y Lily sure has lots of nifty Christmas ornaments from the Scandinavian countries. Check them out, you'll love 'em.

☐ Everyone should have a sense of humor like Linton Young! He was the master of ceremonies at the Gridiron break-up diner, and he was marvelous. Perhaps he'll MC a function for you. . .

☐ Tuesday begins the winter sports season for CHS. With all of the standouts that we have on the various teams it promises to be a good year again!! Check the schedule in this week's Mariner, and make your plans. You sure will be glad that you did. Sure hope that Peter Kasperowicz continues his fine reporting on all of the games as he did in the fall.

☐ Had nice news from Marsha (James) and Dick Carthus in their Christmas letter. They sure are a busy couple, and they do lots of nice things for people. We are sure that Marsha's dad, Bob James, is pleased with her and all of her efforts.

☐ Nice to see that Herb Towle has opened a lighting and electrical repair service shop at 3 Brook Street. It is called the "Lighting Fixit Shop" Now you know where to go for those repairs.

☐ Hunneman Cohasset Office held an open house during the White Christmas festivities and it was reported to be a great time. Yummy food was the official report.

☐ Achievement awards were presented to associates of the Jack Conway Company's Cohasset office.

During August, Mary Pecce of Old Meetinghouse Lane in Norwell negotiated the most sales and Mary Ellen Neagle of Pond Street in Cohasset listed the most property through the Cohasset Office.

The names of achievement award winners are displayed on a plaque in their office.

That's the news from here, be sure to fill everyone in on what takes place during your holiday fun. We look foreward to reading all about it.

School oil leak repairs are continuing

Rather than immediately replacing a $60,000 underground fuel oil tank at the high school, school officials ordered the repair and replacement of faulty pipe lines into the tank.

Supt. Stephen Hart explained that test borings and monitoring wells have been set up in the contaminated area adjacent to the Sullivan gymnasium. A price tag for the environmental clean-up has not been calculated, he stated.

Oil from the underground 15,000-gallon tank was discovered leaking in November. According to tests conducted by engineers hired by the school department, the oil leak occurred within the pipe lines."The question was, because these lines are underneath the school, how could we repair them?" he explained. From an opening under the building, workers from the town's highway department removed the leaking pipes and replaced them.

The contaminated soil was removed from under the pipes, although monitoring tests will continue to determine how much is actually contaminated. That soil must be removed to an out-of-state site, a process that costs about $120 to $160 per ton. A well site within a cement culvert near the site indicates that no oil has spread into the surrounding groundwater. Next week, engineers will retest underground tanks at all the schools "for structural integrity," he added.

"The problem we have," Supt. Hart said, "is that all these tanks are fairly old. The question is, when do we replace them?

"I'm confident that it is isolated and most of the contaminated soil has been removed. I think we will find the site secure, but each school has its own underground tank," he added.

School committee chairman Joseph Nedrow acknowledged that underground storage tanks, once a standard feature in all large construction projects, "are surely as serious as fiberglass insulation."

Supt. Hart explained that the problem tank was 20 to 30 years old. Some leakage was detected by tests conducted in October. Excavation of the site was scheduled for inspection, until the leak was detected and resolved.

The school superintendent thanked the highway department laborers for their help in repairing the leak. "It will be very expensive," Supt. Hart said in regard to the clean-up. "But it would have been more expensive without their help."

School officials are unsure when the underground tanks will have to be replaced. Therefore, they did not include a timetable in their five-year capital outlay projection submitted to the captial budget committee.

Priority will be given to the purchase of a large bus and one mini-bus at a total cost $55,000. That will give the school department six buses plus one spare, used bus.

The second capital request is for a $16,000 stake body truck which will replace a 1972 model. School committee members asked the superintendent to compare the cost of a stake body truck with that of a dump truck.

A third request in the five-year projection list is a $160,000 renovation of the high school science lab. This is the second phase of the renovation work. Principal MaryEllen Gallagher explained that the work will include plumbing, electrical and ventilation repairs in the physics and chemistry rooms. "It will be a general rehauling," she stated.

The biology room also contains a poor ventilation system, she said, explaining those rooms will be included in this year's capital project plan, and other rooms will follow in future years.

Also included in the capital project list is a $90,000 renovation of the window wall in the high school wing; and $75,000 for the completion of renovations to the high school auditorium.

In other business Monday night, the committee appointed two members to the revamped Milliken Field Study Committee. Christopher Ford, a member of the school committee, and Ross Reidy, a member of the school facilities committee, were appointed.

The next meeting of the school committee will be held Monday, Jan. 4 at 8 p.m.

Consciousness raising

For the past several weeks, one of the most frequently-discussed topics of conversation in Cohasset and elsewhere has been the proposal to establish a family day of rest.

The resolution proposed by local clergymen to our selectmen and school committee has been widely reported and debated. And whenever a topic of religious belief is discussed within a political forum, there is bound to be strong, emotional reaction.

That is exactly what has occurred in our town, and in surrounding communities where the question of diminishing family time is a concern. No matter what your religion, the problem of gathering enough quality time together is a social concern of the modern day.

We have stated our opposition to a formal resolution which would prohibit the Sunday morning use of town property by any organization. It is not up to selectmen or the school committee to determine when the Sabbath shall take place, and who shall observe it. That is an individual choice that should be made within the home, and it shall be observed only by those family members within the home.

The town can assist in that decision by deterring organizations from scheduling activities on Sunday mornings. But we feel that is not entirely necessary, nor is it within the pervue of our elected officials. They are our civic leaders - we do not necessarily look to them to set our standards of morality.

The decision rests squarely within the family - deciding how each member of that household will find the time to spend in each other's presence. It is indeed a complicated formula to calculate in these complex times. Dinner time, once the cornerstone of family discussion and debate, is often a multi-tiered event, with children, father and mother eating at different times to accomodate separate schedules.

But it is the responsibility of each household to uncover those spare few hours and to spend them in each other's company. It is not the responsibility of any local official to see that we have the time set aside for such use.

How each individual within this community uses his time, is his concern alone. If other activities are scheduled that tempt one individual to take away that time from his family, it is indeed their loss. But it was a decision made by that family - who is not bound by the dictates of any political faction in this town.

While we do not agree with the premise of this resolution, we do agree with a statement made by school committee member Nancy Sandell. At this week's committee meeting, Sandell said at the very least, this debate has stirred the consciousness of the entire town and surrounding areas. People have become aware, through this public discussion, that there is a great need in our society for quiet, family time. There is a need for a space within our busy week to spend among our loved ones, whether that is at the dinner table, watching a movie together or relaxing in the backyard.

This proposal, which has stirred up quite a bit of controversy in the past weeks, has had a positive effect on our town. We may not agree with the means, but we certainly favor its end.

We all need time to be together with our family. But how we achieve that, even in these extra-hectic holiday times, is the goal of each individual. And we are not answerable to any sports organization, any club or civic group that prompts us to eliminate that precious time.

Writer regrets 'venomous' headline

To the editor:

In last week's Politicus column, "My standards of journalism," I issued the following apology for the headline, "No nonsense on Sunday," which had appeared the previous week.

"At the moment I am generally satisfied with the way the column turned out, but I very much regret the headline: 'No nonsense on Sunday.' First, the headline was confusing in that it did not make clear whose 'nonsense' was referred to - those who want to use the facilities Sunday mornings or those who want to restrict the use.

"But what I really regret is the venom that leaps out of the word 'nonsense.' Like 'stupid' and 'corrupt' it is an extremely strong word on the printed page and nothing in the behavior of any party to the disagreement in Cohasset justified its use in my column. I therefore wish to aplogize to the reader to whom it may have given offense."

I believe the foregoing apology was called for and should have been printed in full as I wrote it.

Respectfully,
David A. Mittel Jr.
Political Editor

Where is schedule?

To the Editor:

A new year is about to begin. I am about to start making plans.

It would be helpful to me and others if the First Parish Church published its 1988 schedule.

I would feel badly if any of my plans conflicted with The First Parish Church.

Mass. Vigil Society to honor POW/MIAs

By Marilyn Jackson
Mariner staff

There's a small but dedicated group of men and women from the South Shore who doesn't want the American public to forget the prisoners or war and those missing in action from the Vietnam War.

They belong to the Mass. Vigil Society, headed by Dan Golden of Braintree.

They marched in Washington during the weekend observances before Veterans Day, carrying 59 pairs of boots to symbolize all 59 POW/MIAs from Massachusetts.

At the end of a candlelight vigil at the Vietnam War Memorial, they left the boots standing against the 250-foot-long black granite wall inscribed with nearly 60,000 names.

On Thursday, Dec. 17, the Mass. Vigil Society will erect a tree at Boston City Hall as a tribute to those who served and to remind all that all the POW/MIAs have not been fully accounted for.

Larry Sousa, commander of the George Mealy Legion Post in Cohasset, plans to be there.

"This is a fantastic idea," said Sousa who served with the Marine Corps in Vietnam and took part in the recent Veterans Day observances in Washington.

The tree will be placed on Congress Street, near the Faneuil Hall Marketplace, at the exact site where an eternal flame for the POW/MIAs has been proposed by the National League of Families.

Maureen Dunn of Randolph, who is the northeast director of the League, secured permission for the tree to be erected on city hall property.

"It won't be a traditional Christmas tree," said Kevin Jewers of Marshfield, another Marine Corps veteran.

"It's a 12-foot bamboo tree, with a four-inch base, and 33 palm fronds will be inserted into the trunk."

Hanging from the branches will be four-by-eight-inch dog tags, each bearing the name of one of the Massachusetts POW/MIAs.

"You can't believe how much cooperation we have had with this project," said Jewers.

The dog tags are made of sheet aluminum bearing the names of all 59 POW/MIAs.

"The drafting department at the South Shore Vocational Technical School (in Hanover) made the dog tags, then hand-painted the names and hometowns of the missing men," said Jewers.

The tags will hang from the branches with bead chains and will be tied with red ribbons, he said. Beneath the tree will be 59 presents wrapped in red aluminum foil to withstand the elements.

Instead of a Santa's sack, the gifts will spill out of a big, olive drab seabag.

The tree lighting ceremony will be held at 7:30 p.m., but members of the Mass.Vigil Society will be spending most of the day assembling the tree, said Golden.

The tree is similar to one which appears on a Christmas card drawn by Thomas Nielsen, a Vietnam veteran, and entitled "Faith in the Freedom Train," Jewers said.

Nielsen's card was designed especially for the National League of POW/MIA Families in Washington, D.C., in honor of the 2,483 Americans still missing and unaccounted for from the Vietnam War.

"We're hoping to have a wooden train around the tree," said Jewers, "and the whole thing will be roped off.

"And we'll be there, to remind everybody about the POW/MIAs."

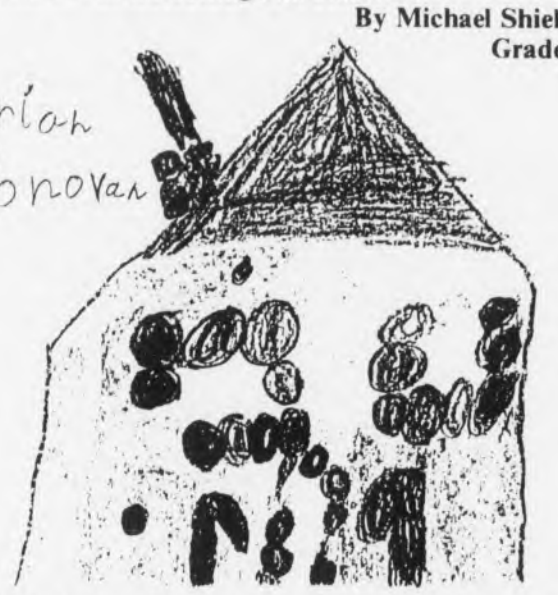
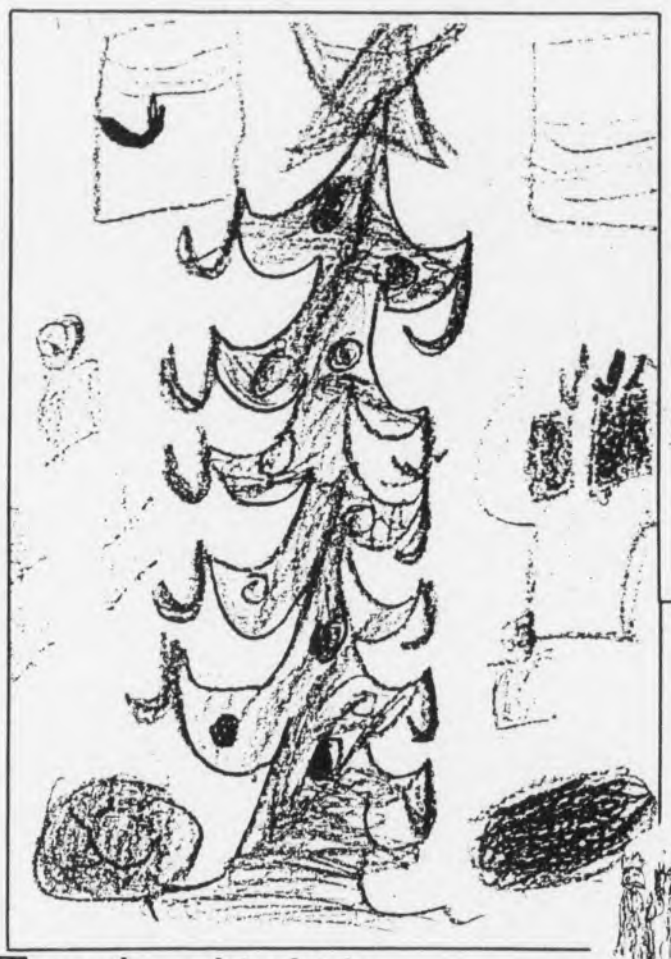
Kindergarten musical



Marie C. Price's kindergarten children will give their annual gift of a musical show and party to family and friends Thursday, Dec. 17 at 9:15 a.m. for the morning class and at 12:30 a.m. for the afternoon class.



Slides of the deep

Tom Shields, a Marine Biologist came to the Deer Hill School to Mr. Deakin's room, to show Mr. Levine's and Mr. Deakin's classes some pictures he took under water in the Tropics and the Arctic Ocean.

Mr. Shields was born on the South Shore. Now he lives in Victoria on Vancouver Island in British Columbia, Canada. Mr. Deakin's and Mr. Levine's classes said that is was interesting and colorful.

Tree drew big bids

Congratulations to Ellen McAuliffe Morrissey on the sale of her donated Christmas tree and wreath at the Childrens Hospital benefit auction. Her tree, Tally-Ho, drew one of the highest bids at the auction.

Fifth Grade Spelling Bee

Friday, Dec. 11, the fifth grade classes held a spelling bee. The finalists were Nicole Vasseur, Kristin Wilson, Liz Corcoran, Ryan Freeman, Jessica Jenkins, Joey Slotnick, Dawn Meehan, Catlin Hurley, Candice Buckley, Brendan Kinchla, Kate Carroll, and Jeremiah Stevenson. We could all tell it would be a close race. It went on and on. It was one of the closest bees I've ever seen. The bee ended up with only Jessica and Brendan left. Everyone held their breath. Who would the winner be? Well, as it turned out, Brendan Kinchla of Mrs. Magoun's class took the win for the second time in a row. It was a close race. Jessica Jenkins, of Mr. Levine's class took second. Congratulations to all contestants.

Give the gift that'll get a standing ovation.

How do you give someone the world's greatest entertainers as a Christmas present? Simple! Put them in an envelope, spotlights, ushers and all and hand it to someone special, along with a merry Ho-Ho-Ho!

With a Music Circus gift certificate, you can remember friends, family and business associates with the gift of ENTERTAINMENT.

A certificate (of any amount from $10 up) is the gift that gives twice—at Christmas and again in the exciting summer of '88.

Here's how to order: With a credit card, call 383-9850 during business hours. By mail, send a check plus $1.00 handling fee to Box 325, Cohasset, MA 02025. In person, at the music Circus business office on Sohier Street, off Route 3A, Cohasset.

Come Christmas morning, you'll be able to take a bow by giving a gift certificate from the

I.M.S. Awards

November winners of Mrs. Silvia's I.M.S. contest were Mrs. Chase's class for grade 4 and Mrs. Whitley's class for grade 6.

Grade 5 Individual Achievement Award winners were the following: Mr. Deakin's class — Jemilah Afshar, Candice Buckley, Joshua Roth and Michael Shields; Mr. Levine's class — Chris Johnson; Mrs. Magoun's class — Jessica Aronson, Molly Pease, Brendan Kinchla, Dawn Meehan and Dean Volungris.

A visit from a marine biologist

Dec. 7, Mr. Thomas Shields came to Deer Hill School. He is a marine biologist from British Columbia and the uncle of Michael Shields. Mr. Shields talked to grade 5 students of Mr. Levine and Mr. Deakin about his work in the Arctic and the Marshall Islands studying marine life. His specialty is the herring. His travels sound very interesting.

Final school day festivities

Friday, Dec. 18, is the final day of school this year.

At the high school, they've got something special planned: during lunch, a musical group will be playing songs in the cafeteria or at the new study hall. The group consists of the following students: Celia Mullen (keyboards, bass), Danny Farwell (vocals), Arthur Meacham (guitar), Andy Rossi (drums) and John Reidy (lead guitar). They plan on performing "Tom Sawyer" by Rush, "Another Brick in the Wall Part II" by Pink Floyd, "Sweet Emotion" by Aerosmith, and "Satisfaction" by the Rolling Stones. They've been putting in long hours rehearsing, and hope to put on quite a show.

Special thanks: recognition goes to Celia Mullen, a junior at CHS, an accomplished pianist, she accompanied the Deer Hill chorus in their recent concerts.

Come celebrate with us!

Friday, Dec. 18, 1987 has been declared "Metco Nite." Alma Lewis and the cast look forward to seeing the auditorium filled with representatives from the town of Cohasset. For tickets and any other information contact Patricia Brown at 383-6105.

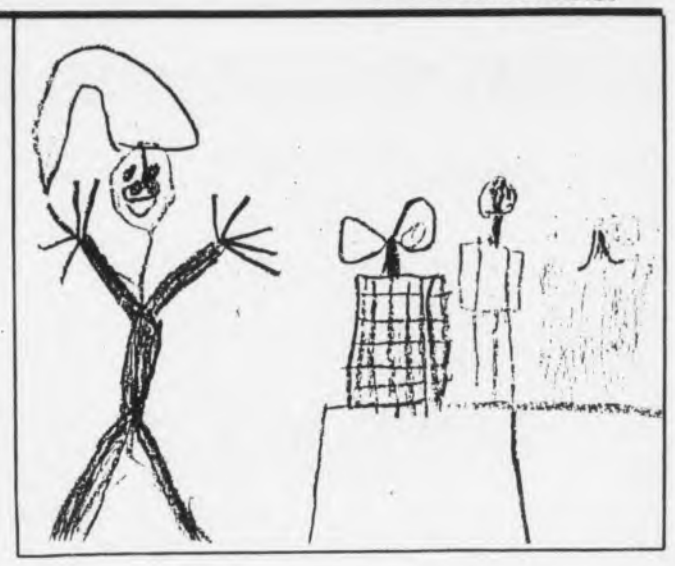
South Shore History Mini-Course

The South Shore History Mini-Course has concluded its study of neighboring towns. The Mini-Course members were involved in a field trip that took them to the Tuft's Library in Weymouth and to the Town of Scituate.



The Tuft's Library contains the oldest existing dugout that was found by ten year old boys who were digging in the mud in Weymouth's Great Pond during a drought. The students had an opportunity to handle artifacts that are thousands of years old. Wig curling irons and shaving pots for men were also analyzed. Cynthia Nyland director of Weymouth's Museum in the school gave a fascinating talk on Weymouth's Indian history.

The students were then treated to a tour of Lawson's Tower, a replica of a battle tower seen by an architect along the Rhine River. Mrs. Laidlaw, president of the Scituate Historical Society, brought the students to the top of the tower where they were treated to a bell ringing concert performed by Mrs. Laidlaw which included her personal favorite — "The Old Oaken Bucket"...All students and chaperones were allowed to ring the bells before they left. Mrs. Laidlaw also arranged a tour of the Scituate Light House which included touching the Fife played by the Famous Bates Girls who tricked the British soldiers into believing there were armed forces at the light house during the war of 1812. The students then enjoyed a luncheon at the Mill Wharf Restaurant, a converted saw mill.

All the participants in the mini-course would like to thank Mrs. Sheerin and Mrs. Bruns who provided the transportation for the field trip during such a hectic holiday season.

The entire mini-course was enriched by valuable suggestions from Mr. Deakin, fifth grade teacher at the Deer Hill School and specialist in local history. The services of the librarian, Mrs. Murphy, were also appreciated. She gave excellent suggestions for related reading and research activities to which all the students responded enthusiastically.

One again, we all appreciate the financial support from the PSO which made funding for this mini-course possible.

Each cluster teacher, Miss Beatson, Mr. Cisneros, Mr. Kelley and Mrs. Schleiff nominated students who were to be recognized for their effort in their cluster classes. Each student had to have 100 percent homework completion or had to have shown excellence in class preparation or participation as determined by the teacher. Those students who received a nomination from at least three of the four cluster teachers were then eligible for this award. Those students who are to be commended for this extraordinary effort are:

Catherine DeLima, Douglas Ellinger, Colleen Fitzsimmons, Kathleen O'Brien, Kathleen O'Sullivan, Mark St. Onge, Charles Smith.

An award for tireless and unselfish effort was presented by Mrs. Contis to Meka-Marie Laugelle.

Nerve-clenching basketball season begins

By Peter Kasperowicz
Sports correspondent

It's basketball time in Cohasset again, but this year is different from most other years. The games will be played in reverse: the most exciting nerve-clenching games will come first, and the slow,"easy-winners' will be played last.

You mean you didn't know? Cohasset defeated Norwell in the State Champ . . .er, first game of the season by the score 64-63. The game went into two over-times.

The fourth quarter began with a Cohasset lead, 40-35. Norwell worked the score to 39-40 within a minute, and a Cohasset foul shot brought it to 41-39. The teams again traded foul shots, and with 5:18 left in the quarter, Norwell was tied with Cohasset at 42 points. For the next five minutes, the lead switched from each team several times, until at last Bryan Edwards hit a three-pointer to tie the score, 54-54, with only 15 seconds left. Over-time was a reality.

Norwell took an early lead, and was ahead by as much as four, until David Shumaker took it back with two more free throws, pushing the score to 60-59. Later, with 24 seconds left, Jay Marsac again tied the score (62) and left Cohasset in control of the ball. Cohasset had more than a chance of ending it there, but one of the refs didn't like something he saw (or something) and gave the ball back to Norwell with 7 seconds remaining. Norwell couldn't do it.

Double over-time. Edwards found himself double-teamed, and Cohaset scored double as many points as Norwell did in the last over-time: 2. Kostas Roukounakis, unofficial hero-of-the-game, scored with 2:21 left on the clock. Cohasset stopped there, but that was enough. Norwell was given six seconds to earn a tripple O.T., but six seconds just wasn't enough. Cohasset had won the State Champ . . .er, their first game, and Coach Eddie "The Cruiser" Minelli was speechless.

"I can't tell you anything better than what you just watched. All I can say is that I'm pleased. We had some problems, but we played aggressively and intelligently. I was extremely pleased with Kostas and Jeff (Bryant). They were only out there a short time, yet they contributed so much to the win. Those last few moments were very precious."

Norwell likes to stall. In two instances, the Clippers would go into a "drill pattern" just to run the clock down. Their plan was to minimize Cohasset scoring.

"I really didn't mind that," Minelli said. "Some of our key players were in foul trouble, and that extra time off the clock just prolonged their playing time."

One aspect of the game that seemed to confuse the crowd was when Minelli would order his players out of the box when another Skipper was making a foul shot. Wouldn't a coach want extra players nearby to pick up a rebound or to assist the shooter?

"I let, for example, Jay Marsac shoot his foul shot without anybody nearby because I knew there was a lot of pressure on the players. Their adrenalin was high, and I feared that they would get too eager. They might step into the box too early, or foul someone while chasing a rebound. The idea was precautionary."

The Skippers are now 1-0.

The JV team also turned up winners against Norwell. Their game was very similar to the varsity one. They had a comfortable lead throughout the game, but as fourth quarter came to a close, they began to feel the heat. JV managed to stick it out, and won by a two point margin; 52-54.

A special Thank-you goes out to the cheerleaders, for all their support.

Register for January workshops at Art Center

A host of interesting January workshops at the South Shore Art Center will help fill the lull after a busy holiday schedule.

Kicking off the new year at the Center at 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset will be three intensive workshops running during the week of Jan. 11-15. Advanced registration is required for these.

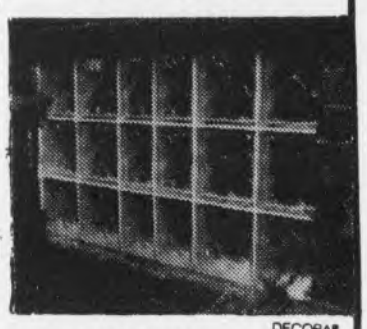
Artist Judeth Van-Hamm Wiers will teach Seeing and Painting Color daily from 9:30 a.m.-12:30 p.m. Wiers workshop is a basic course for every artist and every would-be artist. Students will learn to use color more expressively and spontaneously and to mix color more accurately. She will demonstrate how each color affects its neighbor and how different artists use color effectively. Wiers is a graduate from the Massachusetts College of Art and has continued her studies at the DeCordova Museum and the Cambridge Center of Adult Education. She has taught at the Osgood School in Cohasset, at the DeCordova Museum, at the Cambridge Center and at the Weymouth and Norwell public schools.

A Framing and Matting workshop will be led by Joni Appel, Jan. 11-13 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. This lecture/demonstration workshop will cover all facets of framing for media. Appel will include explanation and exercises in measuring and fitting, museum mounting, pricing, shortcuts and sources of supplies. Students will work on and complete two or more projects during the workshops.

Ellee Avakian will teach Oriental Brush Technique for Beginners daily Jan. 11-15, 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. During this intensive workshop students will learn to use basic brush techniques that can later be applied to various media. She will demonstrate traditional Sumi-e (ink paintings) and subjects she will include are bamboo, flowers and birds. Avakian studied at the Museum of Fine Arts and with professors Hirosho Oda, Chung and Sheng-Chia Sun Lee for Sumi-e and Oriental brush techniques.

Saturday, Jan. 16, the first in a series of Saturday workshops will be held. Berj Kailian will offer Monoprint on that day from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. This workshop offers students of all levels an opportunity to explore the "one of a kind" printmaking process using a press. The basic theme for the Saturday workshops is to offer individuals the opportunity to investigate a medium or technique in an introductory format.

Fiber art comes to the Center on Tuesday evening, Jan. 12 at 7:30 p.m. when artisan Joan Hausrath introduces and explains the 400 year old French Gobelin Technique of weaving.



The January workshops let students try their creative talents in new areas.

For registration or further information, call the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548. The Center is supported in part by a grant from the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities, a state agency.

Sixty Plus Club celebrates holidays

Cohasset Sixty Plus Club's annual Christmas gala began on a perfectly sunny day, with the high tide seen from the dining room windows.

Handsome red velvet bows decorated the lobby Christmas tree at Hugo's along with the evergreen decorations.

Over one hundred members enjoyed the social hour, and the super Hugo's cuisine that followed.

During dinner, two lovely models, Meg Buckley and Jean Buedarsn, modeled beautiful and unusual clothes from Bowman and Company of 818 Route 3A, Cohasset.

At each table setting, was a pen, donated by Gaffy of Scituate. Many thanks for a most useful gift.

Entertainment by Art Brinkley and his Dixieland Jazz Band.

There was delightful soft music to sing-a-long with, and later more lively tunes for the dancers.

Four special invited guests were: Rev. Gary Ritts, Second Congregational Church, who gave the Blessing;

Rev. Edward Atkinson, First Parish, a friend of many years;

Rev. S.J. Hall, Beechwood Church; and Rev. E. Clifford Cutler, St. Stephen's Church. Thank you all for coming.

A full course Thanksgiving dinner was enjoyed by members of Harbor View Apts.

Fruit and vegetables donated by members of Rev. Hall's Beechwood Church were brought to the office of the Social Service League.

Dinner was delivered by Mary Anne Hansen to shut-ins.

Grateful thanks to the good cooks and all the generous donations.

The evening of Saturday, Dec. 12 was a special party for all Harbor View tenants.

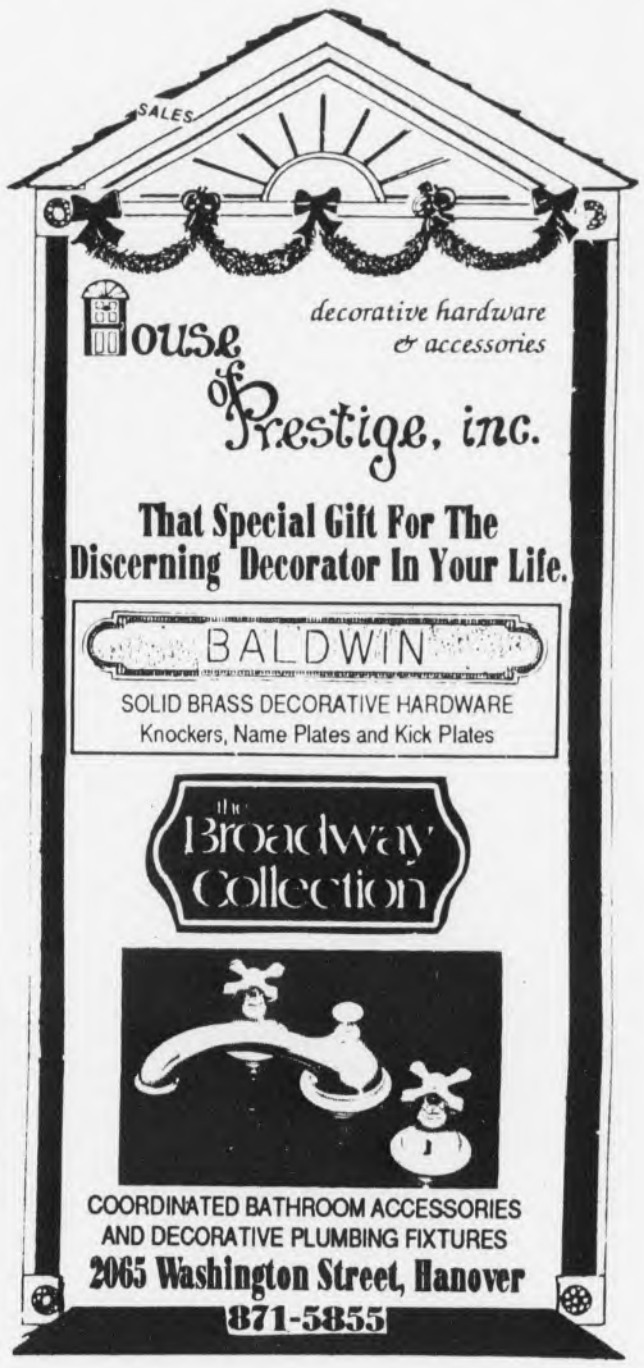
Given by the members of the American Legion Post, catered by Carmine, there was a super delicious turkey dinner with all the fixings and Esther Prentis at the piano for carol singing. Many, many thanks to all.

Cohasset Chamber of Commerce has donated a real Christmas tree to Harbor View Apts.

The tree will be placed outside for all to enjoy. Grateful thanks to everyone.

A reminder of the date to La Salette is Thursday, Dec. 17. Cost of the bus is $10 per person. Leaving from Town Hall at 3 p.m. Lunch stop at the Steak House in Hanover.

This is the time to remember special friends at "Fish;" the ladies and gentlemen who give their time and cars to transport those who need to go out of town, to hospitals and doctor appointments. Many, many thanks to all.



Program chairman Barbara Fellows, has a special program planned for Thursday, Jan. 26, 1988. Rev. Steven Hall will again give an illustrated lecture on his world travels. Details later.

Correction

The Mariner published an incorrect headline on the front page of the Dec. 10 issue.

The story was concerning the awarding of a contract for concrete floats in Cohasset harbor. The headline incorrectly stated that no contract had been awarded. The award was made, however, for various reasons explained by Harbormaster Steven Osborne, the contract was not given to the lowest bidder.

First Parish

Kudos from the Parish Committee: Kudos to Jack Martin and Bobbi Leary, Co-chairpersons of our Every Member and Friend Canvass who reported that as of last week every member and friend of the First Parish has been contacted and that the 1987-1988 Canvass is now complete. Many thanks to Jack and Bobbi for their leadership and perseverance in insuring that all persons on our mailing lists have been invited to make a gift in support of the church.

"A Carolling We Go": All around the Common Sunday, Dec. 20 at 6 p.m. Bring family and friends, children of all ages. Meet at the Parish House in warm clothes and if you have them, bring a flashlight and carol book. If not, come anyway. We will return to the Parish House after our winter carolling walk and enjoy Scandinavian hot apple cider and Christmas cookies. The weather will help us determine how long we are outdoors. Any questions, thoughts or offers of cookies...(See how I snuck that in there?) call Sine Pounder 383-6869.

Stewardship '88: Have you sent in your 1988 pledge yet? The new budget must go into effect January first and we have to know what our expected revenue will be. Results on individual pledge amounts is very encouraging, but the number of pledge forms returned is running a bit behind. Reminder phone calls are being made at this time. If you haven't sent in your pledge, please do so as soon as possible. Additional pledge form is included in this newsletter.

Gifts For the Christ Child — will be presented Christmas Sunday, December 20. These should be toys for children (up to age 12), unwrapped, which will be taken to the Quincy Post of the Salvation Army and made available (December 22) in their "Toy Store" for qualifying needy families of the community.

The Christmas Offering this year will be collected the next issue of the Beacon) and will include the offerings taken up at both the 7 p.m. and 11 p.m. Christmas eve services. The proceeds will then be divided equally between Rosie's Place and Pine Street Inn (providing lodging for the homeless in the Boston area).

The Black Nativity, put on by the National Center of Afro-American Artists, will be a major outing event of the year! We have 25 tickets for Sunday, December 20, (meet at the church at 2:00 p.m.) for all 9th-12th graders (open to anyone, if any tickets remain unsold on 12/13). Tickets ($10 each) are available from Gary R. Following the performance, we are hoping to be able to go out together for dinner (Chinese or Durgin-Park), do some shopping at Quincy Market and be back between 8 and 9 p.m.

Twenty Responses were received from the benevolence questionnaire sent out by the deacons in November. Summarizing the information, respondents seemed to feel that all categories of needy were important, but the order of emphasis should be homeless, abused and battered, poor, hungry, and the elderly, with less emphasis on Hospice, prisoners, mentally ill, and victims of discrimination. Three times as many people thought we should increase benevolence as thought they should remain the same, and most felt that giving should be done through the church. The figure most often mentioned was 10 percent of the church budget. Also, by a thin margin, respondents thought giving should begin close to home. The charities most often referred to were: Quincy Crisis Center, Rosie's Place, Pine Street Inn, Heifer International, Neighbors in Need, The Jenkins School, DOVE, N.E. Home for Little Wanderers, Habitat, Church World Services. Half of the respondents were willing to volunteer time.

Donations to Humane Society save pets

Jennifer, a little, black stray cat, was found by the side of the road unconscious after she had been hit by a car. She suffered severe head injuries. Standish Humane Society had her treated at a veterinary hospital; but, shortly after she went to a foster home, her life was again threatened, this time by a miscarriage caused by stress. Jennifer returned to the veterinary hospital where she underwent an emergency spay. This Christmas Jennifer lives in a permanent home where she stays happily inside and will never again face with dangers of the outside world.

Tara, a Pointer-mix, was left behind when her owner moved out of the country. Tara was pregnant and infected with heartworm and every type of intestinal parasite. Standish Humane Society found a loving foster home for Tara. Here she gave birth to and cared for seven puppies until they were weaned. Standish placed the puppies at seven weeks, after they were checked by a veterinarian, inoculated and wormed. Standish then had Tara treated for heartworm and spayed. Tara is now in a permanent loving home.

During 1987, Standish Humane Society helped many other needy pets like Jennifer and Tara. Your holiday donation to Standish Humane Society will help us help other needy pets.

ENERGY MANAGEMENT PROGRAM

Teaming-up

Together, we can save energy and money

Helping to plan your energy future.

Introducing Eastern Edison Company's "Teaming-up" Energy Management Program, a simple, efficient, cost-effective approach to managing your energy use. With rebates and other incentives, our "Teaming-up" Program lowers your energy costs. And by reducing demand for electricity, "Teaming-up" reduces our long-run need to build expensive new generating units. Together, we can help ensure reliable, economical power — for today and tomorrow.

"Teaming-up" is a common-sense, multi-faceted approach to energy management. Its several programs allow you the flexibility to choose those that best suit your individual needs. Working together and utilizing the experience and resources of Eastern Edison, we can design a system that conserves energy and saves you money from programs such as:

For our commercial and industrial customers

ELITE - Efficient Lighting Rebate Program
Saving money can be an illuminating experience! Rebates from 50¢ to $2.50 for replacement lamps, ballasts, and fixtures and assistance in paying for a low-cost energy audit (where required) help you to take advantage of today's state-of-the-art lighting technology. And that means lower electrical and maintenance costs!

EGAP - Emergency Generator Assistance Program
A sure-fire way to generate energy savings! We'll pay you cash dividends to run your emergency generator when power demand is greatest. For 100kW of connected load, that payment can be $2,000 or more! Plus, you'll be exercising your emergency generator at the same time.

For our residential customers

WAT41 - Electric Water Heater Conversion to Rate 41
Hot water at a cost that won't leave you cold! By rewiring your existing electric water heater to qualify for our low-cost "Rate 41" you can save money. It's that simple. There's no cost and no hidden charges. We'll make the calls, and we'll pay the bills. YOU keep the savings!

WRAP - Electric Water Heating Conservation Program
Keep your energy costs under cover! We'll insulate your water heater and install water-saving showerheads...at no charge! The net results are an increase in efficiency, significant energy savings, and lower costs. And it's free!

FILTER - Swimming Pool Energy Management Program
Keep your head and your energy costs above water! Beginning in June, 1988, we'll pay you up to $40 during the summer just for letting us re-program the time clock on your swimming pool filter so that it runs during our off-peak hours. This won't affect your pool use...but it will save you money and energy!

For our commercial and residential customers

AIRCON - Air Conditioner Incentive Program
Save some cold cash on your electric bills! By providing incentives to contractors for installations of central-air-conditioning systems and add-on heat pumps, we can help provide you with the most effective and economical units available. This program will begin in the spring of 1988.

Votech braces for budget tug-of-war

By Patricia Masterson
Mariner correspondent

Proposed increases in the South Shore Regional School budget are heading for a tug-of-war between the regional school committee and the school's superintendent.

The budget submitted last week by Supt. Dr. Clifford Easton reflects increases of 9.4 percent to 11.6 percent over the current $3.7 million school budget. The higher budget proposal includes the continuation of the machine shop program.

Although committee members support keeping the program, despite its $80,000 budget and the 13 students presently enrolled, Easton questioned its cost-effectiveness and suggested at a previous meeting that the value of the machine shop program be evaluated.

In his proposal for a 9.4 percent increase, Easton asks for additional personnel.

Committee chairman Robert Molla Jr., however, noted during a meeting last week that the budget presented to advisory committees in the eight-member towns would show an increase of no more than 7.5 percent.

According to Robert Kelley Jr., regional school district secretary-treasurer, there is little room in next year's budget for new staff or programs, since negotiated teacher contracts call for a 6 percent increase

"I'm not in favor of cutting programs, but I would look at cutting some of the personnel requests," Molla said. "We are receiving less federal funding this year, and Proposition 2 1/2 will be a factor."

School committee members have held open hearings on each aspect of the budget during the past month. They will vote on the budget on January 27, 1988.

In his recommended budget, Dr. Easton proposed a management, marketing and merchandising teacher, a guidance counselor, a special education administrator, a reading teacher, a shop aide and a resource room aide as critical additions in the the next fiscal year.

"We don't have the personnel we need now," said Dr. Easton. "In administrative functions, we are continually having to keep up with new report systems and more bureaucracy requirements."

At Wednesday night's meeting, in addition to requests for personnel, departments requested equipment, such as a new lecturn for the general assembly room, a system to prevent false alarms, a number of computers, a duplicator and a thermal processor.

Medical insurance, building insurance, retirement fund costs and life insurance are among the higher fixed costs in the next fiscal year.

Throughout the budget hearings the subject of recruitment has been discussed. Teachers presenting their budgets have given committee members ideas and suggestions on recruiting, including school visits, advertising, promotional campaigns and promotional literature. The school committee and the superintendent's office is in agreement that a strategy is needed to recruit more students to the vocational technical school.

Science Center activities

Take a respite from hectic preparations. Visit South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell and enjoy a quiet walk on the trails.

WEDNESDAY NATURE WALK

Join a Natural Science Center naturalist on Dec. 23 from 10 a.m.- noon for a guided walk through one of the South Shore's protected properties. Look for birds, seasonal occurances and unusual natural happenings. Wednesday Nature Walks are perfect for all ages! Free for members; $4 for non-members. Call 659-2559 to register or for more information.

WINTER READING

Winter nights were made for reading good books! We asked naturalist Bill Perkins to choose a selection of books that would increase appreciation and enjoyment of winter. Below are his choices and comments:

Life in the Cold: an Introduction to Winter Ecology by Peter Marchand (University Press of New England, 1987). — Some different and provocative and ideas about snow, plants, animals, and interactions in winter. Good photos and figures accompany the text.

A Guide to Nature in Winter by Donald W. Stokes (Little, Brown and Company, 1976). — The jacket describes it as eight comprehensive field guides in one. A general introduction, keys to identification, and natural history descriptions for winter weeds, snow crystals, wintering trees, insects, birds and nests, tracks in the snow and more. Sensitive line drawings complement the book.

The Seven Sleepers: The Story of Hibernation by Phyllis S. Busch (Macmillan Publishing Co., 1985) — A treasure by itself or in company with the two above. This beautifully crafted book provides a close look at that very special set of adaptations which makes it possible for animals to survive winters in the northeast.

The Winter Beach by Charlton Ogburn, Jr. (William Morrow and Co., Inc., 1966) — Twenty-one years old, but timeless. To paraphrase the author, you will find the stillness and quiet of the far-reaching scene more suggestive, more eloquent than ever. But all you can be sure of will be your own emotions.

Snow Crystals by W.A. Bentley and W.J. Humphreys (Dover Publications, Inc., 1962) — Ice flowers, windowpane frost, and rime. All of these and more are discussed and illustrated by selected reproductions of more than 2000 of Bentley's pioneering photographs, long the standard source for artistic illustrations of snow crystals.

Field Guide to Snow Crystals by Edward R. LaChapelle (University of Washington Press, 1970) — A field guide to crystals as seen by the casual observer who scoops up a handful of snow to examine with the naked eye or small hand lens. Includes text, diagrams, and photographs which explain what is seen and how the snow got that way.

Winter Botany: An Identification Guide to Native Trees and Shrubs by William Trelease (Dover Publications, Inc., 1967) — For those outdoor enthusiasts who like to look at things a little differently, a less familiar set of clues to help identify the woody plants without their summer dresses.

Most of the above books are available either in the Center's Vinal Library or the Museum Store. Happy Holidays!

Obituary

Leighton S. Tower

A private funeral service was held for Leighton S. Tower, 83, who died Dec. 12 at the Elihu White Nursing Home in Braintree. Burial was in Cohasset Central Cemetery.

Mr. Tower was a lifelong Cohasset resident. He attended Cohasset schools and received a bachelor's degree in foreign languages from Boston University in 1928. He had a master's degree from Columbia University.

He taught history and languages at Lawrence Academy for 17 years. He also taught at Thayer Academy in Braintree for 21 years. He retired in 1969.

Mr. Tower was a veteran of the U.S. Navy during World War II.

He leaves a brother, Edward E. Tower of Cohasset; a niece, Elinor T. Campbell of Westboro, and several grandnieces and grandnephews.

Memorial donations may be made to the Standish Humane Society, P.O. Box 824, Scituate, Mass. 02066.

Beechwood Church services

The Beechwood Congregational Church invites all friends and neighbors to worship Sunday at 10:45 a.m. The pastor is Stephen S.J. Hall. Adult child care will be provided downstairs following the children's sermon.

Thursday, Dec. 17, the Beechwood neighborhood social will meet at the church at 6:30 p.m. for a roast beef dinner followed by a Christmas party at Barbara Fellows' home.

If you are interested in coming, just bring the family, salad or vegetable and a small gift for man or woman. Please call 383-0211 to reserve your seat.

Dec. 20 marks the annual candle lighting service at 7:30 p.m. at the church. Come and see the story of the birth of Christ depicted by the children in tableau.

The Sunday School will meet at the regular time of 9:30 a.m. and will celebrate Jesus' birthday complete with cake. We look forward to a funfilled morning.

Wednesday, Dec. 23 we will meet at the church at 6:30 p.m. and go caroling. During this yearly event we try to reach those shut-in. If you know of someone, please call the church at 383-0808 and leave the name and address. Everyone is invited to join and share in the bringing of joy to others.

Early evening activities will be "caroling" and the delivery of Christmas baskets to shut-ins.

Nursery care is provided during worship.

All are welcome!

First Baptist services

Morning worship at First Baptist Church, 85 Main Street on Sunday, Dec. 20 will be a "Family Experience."

Rev. Gary T. Ludwig's sermon title will be "Baptizing in the Name." There will be a baptism service from 10 to 11:30 a.m., with a reception for new members.

Worship through music

The family worship hour at The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, Hingham, will feature two sessions of music for the Christmas season, from 9 a.m. to noon.

A time for reflection and rejoicing. Visitors are most welcome, individually or in family groups. The chapel is located at 379 Gardner St. in Hingham.

A look back at Christmas wishes from 1977

Ten years ago, Marie Price, a kindergarten teacher at the Joseph Osgood School, asked her young students to write What Christmas Means to Me. Here are the responses given by the students who are now 15 and 16 years old.

It means to me that it's coming closer and closer. It's Jesus Birthday too. But the most important thing, Santa Claus and God. The second thing is the elf. The third thing is the presents and gifts. The fourth thing is the Christmas tree. The fifth thing is the reindeers, Dasher and Dancer and Prancer and Vixen, Comet and Cupid and Donner and Blitzen, and Rudolph. I can have some hot cocoa. The Christmas tree lights up. It's so bright. If you turn off the lights and turn on the Christmas tree lights it will look like night time. It really looks like it.

Christmas is God's birthday. On God's birthday I hope he has the best birthday of all. I feel great about it too! On Christmas I feel good not just because of presents. Because Jesus has a Merry Christmas! On Christmas there is a holy mass.

At Christmas our family goes downstairs and looks at the Christmas Tree and opens our presents. What I want for Christmas is baby this 'n that, river ton, bean bag chair, poles for my skis, a live puppy, a teddy bear. At Christmas I feel very happy. The colors of Christmas are green and red. Christmas is nice. Chirstmas is my favorite day. It's my family's favorite day.

On Christmas I rush downstairs to see what I got from Santa. Then I see what is in my stocking. I play with my toys. After that I go upstairs and get dressed and go to church. When I get home, I play some more. Then I eat. After eating, I go out to play.

On Christmas Santa Claus comes at night. He brings lots of toys. We sleep all night. It is long. I don't like to wait so long. When I am awake, I have to wait longer for my father and mother. I just can't wait so long. I wish the night was one second long for the whole town of Cohasset. That would be fun. But we would still have to wait for our mother and father. It would still be fun. It would be very, very, very funny. I just wish it could be one second. Oh, that isn't very funny on Christmas Eve. Let's try to think of some Christmas jokes. I wish I could think of some Christmas jokes.

We are going to decorate the window and the tree. We are going to take our train set down and we are going to put cotton around the tree. We are putting our angel on our Christmas tree. Christmas is Jesus' birthday. I wish I could have a Super joke baseball. Christmas is a lot of fun. On Dec. 25 it is Jesus' birthday. I am going sledding on a hill. Santa Claus is a good person. I like him very, very much. He gives people toys. In the morning we go to church. After we get home from church we go sledding and skiing.

First thing I wake up and go downstairs and open presents. I eat my breakfast. Then I go out and play in the snow. It's fun!!!! Then I have some hot cocoa. Then I change my clothes and put on some other clothes and go down to the fire and get warm. My father takes us to the Hingham golf course and we bring our sleds with us.

I hate waiting for Christmas. I want a TV for Christmas. Jesus' birthday is on Christmas. God's birthday is also on Christmas. I like Christmas because we get presents. I might get a TV and a race track and a camera and a thing that someone talks and it records. I think Christmas is the best holiday in the world because God and Jesus' birthday is on Christmas. Santa isn't real but in the olden days he was. There wouldn't be Christmas, if Jesus and God's birthday wasn't on Christmas Eve. I love Christmas.

I think it is the birth of Jesus, when he saw the star of Bethlehem. They went to the manger. The star was shining brightly on them. Three kings gave him good presents. In the manger there were chickens, cows and horses. But about 1000 years later, we celebrate Santa coming to the houses.

Christmas means a happy time. A time for happiness and joy. It is a time to give presents. And people to be happy and joyful. It is a time when you hang your stocking by the fireplace and have a tree in your house. It means a time for Santa Claus to come and give you extra presents. But you have to earn the presents. It means presents. It means happiness and joy. It's the Birth of Jesus Christ. It's all very, very special. It means friendship and kindness. That is what Christmas means to me! I like Christmas. I like Santa Claus. I like Dec. 25. It seems amazing how Santa delivers all those presents just in one night. I just want to know how he does it.

Every Christmas morning I get up and go downstairs. I go and sit down and look at the Christmas tree. Then iI go to eat breakfast and then I watch TV. then my sister Suzanne gets up and comes down stairs and asks if I will make her breakfast and I say yes. I make it but first I ask her if she wants cold or hot cereal. I make it. Then she eats it. But not all of it but she asks me if I will turn on the TV and I say yes. Then I turn on the TV. We watch TV. Then my brother gets up and eats breakfast and then he watches TV with us. But sometimes we have a vote but Shawn always wins but I get my way sometimes. Then my mother gets up and makes my father's breakfast. She tells us to wake up Dad. They eat their breakfast and sometimes we make it for them. Then we open our presents.

What Christmas means is love. When I thank God, it is fun. It's God's birthday. I care for people. People care for others. Christmas means you should be thankful for all the things you get. Chrsitmas means you should not call people names. You should not fight. It means you should say prayers every Christmas. I love God.

Christmas wishes 1977 . . .

Christmas means a lot to me. On christmas Eve we get to open one present. Then we go to bed. We get up at 7:00. Then we go downstairs and have breakfast. Then we open our presents. I think it is fun. Christmas is the best day of the year. There's only one thing I do not like about it. It only comes once a year. I like Santa Claus. He goes through the snow.

It makes me feel happy on Christmas day. We do lots of fun things together. It makes me happy because it's Jesus' birthday too. We are happy and my friends are happy too. Every year we celebrate Chirstmas because we get presents. It is a good thing that we have a Christmas. If there weren't a Christmas everybody would be sad. I am going to have fun on Christmas and my family will have, too. I hope Christmas never ends.

I get very excited.I am very happy. I try to be as good as I can especially on Christmas Eve. When I go to church we have a very pretty ceremony. Christmas is my very favorite holiday. I like to decorate the Christmas tree. I like to give presents. I like to get presents. In the morning I get up at 5:30 to look in my stocking. There is one thing I don't like. I have to wait for mom and dad to wake up. I know what I will do this Christmas. I will set everyone's alarm clock to 5:30. But I only wish I could see Santa. The end.

Christmas is a silent time. It isn't just opening presents. It's about Jesus too. It's a lot of fun to make your Christmas tree. It's fun to watch the reindeer. It's fun to put up your stockings. It's fun to open up your presents and go Christmas carolling and putting up the lights. But Santa Claus is the thing I like best. I like the bells and the sleigh and I watch all the Chirstmas shows. We will give you a lot of hot cocoa.

It is joyful. I think it is fun. I love Christmas, but there's one thing wrong. Santa must have a hard time getting up the chimney. I think I know how he gets up the chimney. He puts his finger on his nose. Well, I think Christmas is great! It is much fun. I hope I get lots of presents. I love Santa because he gives us a lot of presents. I love Santa's reindeers. Christmas is beautiful. I love the beautiful snow. I think Christmas is good because I love it.

It means that Santa Claus will come to every house. It means that everybody celebrates a new year of Christmas. Christmas is a year of giving presents to people that have no money. Christmas started when Jesus was born. It makes me feel very jolly. Santa Claus is very nice to everybody. I like the feel of Santa's beard. I wish that everybody has a very merry Christmas even me. I go ice skating when the pond is frozen. Plus my toes freeze when my foot goes through the ice which I did before.

All my family helps decorate our tree. We have fun together at Christmas.

On every December we get out our candy ribbon and put candy on it. Every morning we get candy. We didn't put up our Christmas tree yet. Christmas is a happy time because it is Jesus' birthday. It is a time for happiness. At Christmas we pray for Jesus. We go to mass.It is fun, too. It is a joyful time. I like everyone in the world, cats, dogs, horses, ponies, kittens, puppies, and every other animal. This is what it means to me. It means happiness. It means love. It's happiness.

On every December 25 is Christmas. That's Jesus' birthday. I like Christmas. It's my favorite holiday. You get presents but that's not the best thing. It's just happy because we share things with other people. That's the best thing I like about Christmas. Jesus' father is God. They were nice to everybody, but they both died. So we celebrate it by having Christmas really, really, really, really nice. My sister sometimes is mean to me on Christmas but we wake up and then I like her. And what I think about Christmas is happiness. It means that people give people presents to each other. I like that. I always give people presents because it's nice too.

Sometime in December when it isn't very hot
We take out our stew and put it in the pot
Then we take some water from the kettle
And let it settle
When its time to eat
We may take our seat
When we finish our fishes
My mother washes the dishes
Well, that the end of my Christmas poem
I might as well just go home

'CONWAY COUNTRY'

Administration – 137 Washington Street – Norwell, MA (02061 – (617) 871-0080, 773-1600
Sales Centers Throughout Massachusetts

Jack Conway REALTOR®

Dear Friend,

Here it is, the ebb of the year, a time for reflection as we prepare for the holidays.

Overall it has been a good year at Conway Country, not sensational like '84-'85-'86, but pretty darn good. We thank you and our many friends for helping to make it all possible. Without you it would not have happened.

We completed and moved into our new headquarters building at Norwell and converted our old corporate offices in Hanover to larger residential, commercial, insurance, and educational facilities. We opened new real estate sales offices in Stoughton/Randolph, South Boston, and Pembroke, and are completing a new Conway Country building in Quincy Square.

We added lustre to our Classics Properties Division, established a Corporate Service Department, doubled the size of conway Appraisal, increased the capabilities of Property Management, and ended up the year #1 in New England RELOcation and made the top five in national RELOcation.

In financing, Northern Mortgage closed enough loans to make the "top twenty" among Massachusetts lenders, and Conway Construction Lenders added to their lines of credit to achieve new goals.

In education our long established Conway School of Real Estate added a new course—"Introduction to the Mortgage Finance Industry"—to its curriculum. We are still teaching licensing courses for salesperson and brokers at our three campus locations.

And ... our Jack Conway Insurance Agency again sustained a 20% annual increase for the 12th straight year.

We continue to create new methods of better serving our customers, and we ask you for your help, support, encouragement, and your friendship.

Have a great holiday season.

Sincerely,

Jack Conway

North Shore officials praise commuter rail

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Local officials along the Rockport commuter rail line voiced enthusiastic support for the system as they conversed with passengers on the Dec. 12 MBTA field trip.

The Old Colony Railroad Rehabilitation Project field trip was the second journey traversed by state and local officials along the North Shore branch of the commuter rail system. The MBTA billed the excursion as an "opportunity for Old Colony area local officials and citizens to learn firsthand about today's MBTA commuter rail."

Along each station stop from North Station to Rockport, selected officials from those towns climbed aboard the train to discuss the impact of the railroad in their community. Without exception, officials related that commuter rail has been a boon, not a bane to their existence.

The Saturday morning commuter train departed from Boston's North Station at 10 a.m. Curious South Shore passengers climbed aboard the new diesel-fueled cars, equipped with large, comfortable seats and toilet facilities. The train reached its North Shore destination at Rockport by 11:30 a.m., a slight delay attributed to the discussions of local officials at each station stop.

As Stephen Polechronis, Old Colony project manager explained, the ride from North Station to Salem is slightly more uncomfortable because of the jointed rail system there. After that, there is a continuous-running rail which allows for a quiet, smooth ride. "That's the kind of rail you'll have, should the Old Colony system be reconstructed along the South Shore," Polechronis stated. "But we felt the Rockport system represented the closest thing to the Greenbush branch - representing some of the most challenging environmental and community development issues on the commuter rail lines, with numerous grade crossings and houses and businesses close to the line."

As the train traveled through Chelsea, the city's director of community planning talked about the density of this 1.8 square mile community. The commuter rail was resurrected in Chelsea almost two years ago, according to Robert Luongo. Located directly outside Boston, Chelsea commuters were once able to drive to Boston in about 13 minutes, he said.

"So why do people use the commuter train if we're that close? Because, sometimes traveling over the Mystic River Bridge from Chelsea to Boston can take longer than driving from Chelsea to Weymouth. For 75 cents, it's a great buy," he added.

There are approximately five grade crossings in Chelsea, primarily through light industrial sections of the city. In most cases, the train ride from Chelsea into

As the commuter rail stops at Rockport, field trip travelers, including Cohasset's Patricia Walsh had an opportunity to view the engineer's compartment. (Jane Lane)

A ride on North Shore commuter rail . . .

North Station is 13 minutes.

A new station was recently constructed at the Swampscott site. The rail line runs through a heavily populated residential area here, bypassing several new condominium construction sites.

At the new Salem station, Mayor Anthony V. Salvo talked about derelicts who used to gather at the decrepit former station site. "Now we have a station, with room for 350 cars and free parking. This station has really helped - it's dressed up downtown Salem," he stated.

Mayor Salvo said commuter rail has been a part of Salem's past "since I can remember. And it's never bothered anyone here." The welded rail runs through heavily residential areas and commercial districts in the city. Eight-foot wire fencing topped by strands of barbed wire separates the railroad's right-of-way from the nearby homes and business properties.

The Beverly depot cuts through the heart of the city's downtown business district. At this junction, State Rep. Frances Alexander joined the entourage.

"We're quite pleased with the train," she stated. "About five years ago, this depot was a mess. But the MBTA came in and now it's beautifully landscaped. We're finding more people are moving into Beverly because of its proximity to the trains. We enjoy the half-hour ride into Boston, especially with the potential of Boston being dug up by construction owrk. We find this is a clean, quiet ride."

In response to a question, Rep. Alexander said she has received no complaints from constituents regarding the commuter rail service. Pointing to homes located within a hundred yards of the rail line, she noted, "now that's close. Some neighbors asked for a fence between their property and the T's land, and the T did it right away. We like the T - we've had no problems."

The state representative also noted that elderly housing units have since been constructed along the rail line. "They have never complained about the railroad - not once," she stated.

Beverly City Planner Mitchell Korbey agreed with the representative's assessment of the rail service. "Beverly is a very diverse community. We have a downtown and multi-family uses within the same district. This train travels through residential areas with single-family homes, through Beverly Farms, home to the Cabots and the Lodges, and through downtown Beverly. Throughout the city, it has had a positive impact."

In the downtown area, rail service has been an impetus for redevelopment of once-dilapidated commercial buildings. A number of historic buildings, once in disrepair, have been renovated since the trains returned to this city. "It's a popular thing now to live close to the line," Korbey stated.

"Even as the trains go by these large estates, you may think it could have a negative impact. But that's not true. They like the link between their community and Boston. We have heard nothing as far as negatives. It has been a positive experience for our city," he added.

At the numerous grade crossings in the city, there have been no complaints about stalled vehicular traffic, as cars wait for the commuter train to proceed. "The train moves fast enough," Korbey noted, "and people have grown accustomed to it. The wait at the grade crossings lasts about a minute."

The city's planner explained that the former B and M commuter rail was revitalized by the MBTA ten years ago. One local official stated the train has operated through Beverly since the 1840's. There is no direct access from Salem and Beverly's downtown districts to the expressway into Boston. From Rte. 14, cars must travel to Rte. 128 to Rte. 1 southbound.

Manchester Selectman Suzanne Noble said trains in that town are "a way of life." A Cohasset resident in the early 1950's, Noble's family moved to Manchester just as the trains were about to become idle on the South Shore. "We can't get along without the trains here," she explained. "And it's incomprehensible to us how you can get along without them."

The Manchester depot includes a small, quaint shopping mall that was recently constructed alongside the tracks. A mini Quincy Market-type development, the Manchester stop includes restaurants, a bank and small shops.

Selectman Noble estimated that one-third of the town use the commuter rail on a regular basis.

"The trains run through one of the highest-valued properties in this town. And as a real estate broker, I can tell you it has not brought property values down. Property values have gone up. It is not noisy near the trains. And the people who live near the trains are very used to it," she said, as the train averaged a speed of 60 m.p.h.

Within the town, there are four grade crossings, one

ADRIAN'S JEWELRY SHOP
Locally owned and operated by Adrian Del Rosso for over 24 years

In every community there is one store we can depend on all year round for any number of occasions. We speak, of course, of the jeweler and the firm he represents. Christmas, birthdays, engagements, weddings and anniversaries are just a few of the times in your life when you want to give something special to someone you care for.

There can be no doubt the people to see for these occasions are Adrian's Jewelry Shop, located at 140 Pleasant Street in South Weymouth. Phone 335-2671. Their inventory of gold earrings, bracelets, necklaces and charms is endless. The selection of men's and women's engagement and wedding rings is exquisite. Diamond, emerald, ruby, pearl and onyx are a few of the stones found in a variety of settings.

They also have a complete line of Sterling Silver Jewelry. Watches in famous brand names such as SEIKO and LONGINES are available in a price range for almost everyone. A complete selection of cameo's, Cleopatra necklace, scrimshaw can also be found in their fine store. Adrian designs, repairs fine jewelry, as well, watches and clock repairs.

Mastercard, Visa and American Express are excepted. Gift Certificates are available plus a convenient layaway plan with only 10% down.

The only thing you have to know about Jewelry is Adrian's. Come in and sign up for their $500 shopping spree. Drawing will be held Dec. 24th and announced on WJDA. Open Sundays. Refreshments served Sundays only - Mon. thru Sat., 9-9, Sunday 12-6.

A ride aboard commuter rail

located at the intersection of Main Street. There are flashing lights and whistles that adequately warn pedestrians and drivers the train is approaching. Selectman Noble could not recall an accident at any of the town's grade crossings.

And in her three-year-tenure as selectman, Noble said there has been just one complaint brought before the board regarding the commuter train. "One group of residents opposed the train blowing its whistle at 6 a.m.," she said. "But as I recall, there were just as many residents who wanted the whistle - they used it as their alarm clock each morning. We compromised and the whistle is now a little softer. The MBTA was very quick to respond to our problem."

Among the passengers aboard Saturday's ride was Marshfield planning board member Greg Guimond. An advocate of the Greenbush rehabilitation project, Guimond has frequently traveled commuter rails on Long Island, N.Y., in Chicago, and on the MBTA's routes to Attleboro, Rockport and Fitchburg.

Despite his pro-commuter rail leanings, Guimond noted the selected spokesmen at each depot stop were "obviously for the rail, certainly not opposed to it."

He continued, "I attended the field trip because I like the idea of the Greenbush line. I think it will be good for Marshfield. It will give us one alternative other than the expressway.

"I am definitely concerned as a planning board member with what is planned for parking in Greenbush and how Scituate will handle the traffic situation so Duxbury and Marshfield will not adversely affect their town. I'm sure these questions will be answered before the plans are complete. But, on the whole, I believe commuter rail service will be very good for Marshfield."

This could be a banner Christmas for stores

By Bob Tis
Mariner staff

It is still early but all indications show that this might be a banner Christmas for local merchants. The official arrival of Santa Claus this week marked the beginning of a frenzy for many Cohasset shoppers.

"We are pretty busy," said Frank Smith, manager of Flemings. "We are much busier than last year. People are calling us from all over the country and asking us to send them things. People who were only in town for a few days in the summer are calling from all over."

"Old World Christmas," is the theme this year at Flemings. Smith is featuring special ornaments for the tree as well as custom lamps and shades many decorated with local scenes. Smith also has some imported goods and some Dedham pottery that is popular with shoppers.

"We are hoping for snow," said Smith.

Cohasset Liquors is also getting primed for some extra holiday business.

"I am predicting that there will be quite a few more parties this year," said store "magistrate" Andrew Hyler.

"We are selling a lot of wines and brandies for cooking," added Hyler. "We can't keep the brandies and other items used for cooking on the shelves. People are cooking their Christmas cakes early this year."

Cohasset Liquors has yet to see the activity that the days before the holiday will bring.

"Next week is the week it really gets busy," said Hyler. "Right now we are getting lots of deliveries."

At the Kit & Kaboodle, Bob Fesler says that business is a good as ever.

"We are selling a lot of paintings and prints," said Fesler. "We have a lot of exclusive paintings as well as some limited editions."

Fesler handles works from over 100 different artists including local artisans, Donna Green, Bea Spencer Green, Petie Brown, and Kristen Macneil.

"Our shop is quite a bit different than most," said Fesler. "November has definitely showed a big increase over last year. I don't know why Decenber shouldn't do the same."

"We are not doing too badly. Sales have increased from last year."

Tim Fowler, manager
The Casual Male

According to John Wilkie of Cohasset Cycle Sports there will be some youngsters finding a new bike under the tree on Christmas morning as well as some adults.

"Scooters are very popular this year," said Wilkie. Cohasset Cycles also has some training and exercise bikes that are perfect for home use are popular this year.

"We are not doing too badly," said Tim Fowler manager at the Casual Male. "Sales have increased from last year."

According to Fowler outer wear including flannel shirts are selling quite well.

"Hand knit sweaters are selling quite well this year," said Fowler. "People are trying to stay warm."

"Summer wear is also quite popular with people going on trips," said Fowler. "Chamois shirts are selling quite well also."

Shoppers are quite busy at all of the stores at Cushing Plaza according to Fowler.

"There certainly is a lot of activity up here," he added.

"There certainly have been a lot of customers lately," said Sue Strayley, co-owner of the Cards and Shards gift shop.

"The handcrafted home furnishings have been selling the fastest," said Strayley who also has noticed high sales of large town pictures and expensive jewelry.

"There is something for everyone here," said Strayley. "Gift wrapping is a feature that a lot of our customers enjoy."

Strayley said that she planned for a good season and is still well stocked with most items.

All other economic indicators show that a fragile situation on Wall Street is not going to affect Christmas on Main Street in Cohasset.

Happy Shopping and Merry Christmas.

Youth art programs receive grant

The Joseph Drown Foundation, a Los Angeles based philanthropic group has for a third year in a row, named the South Shore Art Center as a recipient of a $25,000 grant earmarked for the continuation of innovative young artist programs.

The Center, also, adds to its funding sources two new contributors, the Arts Lottery Councils of Stoughton and Duxbury bringing to a total of eleven South Shore towns funding the Center.

The awarding of the Drown Foundation grants has allowed the Center at 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset to expand its young artist programs to a point where many more children on the South Shore can now take advantage of the Center's programs. The current grant will be used to generate new programming for young artists.

The Drown grant coupled with funding from the Plymouth County Development Council, the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities and the Massachusetts Arts Lottery Council (pending approval) as administered through the arts councils of Abington, Braintree, Cohasset, Duxbury, Pembroke, Plymouth, Rockland, Scituate, Stoughton, Hingham and Weymouth allows the Center to expand its programs, encourage top quality entries for its juried exhibits by offering substantial monetary awards and to try innovative ideas.

Through the Drown Foundation grants the Center was able to set up its children's vacation drop-in centers at satellite locations in Scituate, Hingham and Norwell. And this became the foundation on which the Center was able to build an ongoing program of young artist courses in each of these South Shore towns thus enabling more children to enroll in courses. By the winter of 1987 the enrollment for the drop-in programs alone, offered during the February and April vacations, had doubled with 457 children taking advantage of the informal art classes.

The 1988 drop in sessions will again be funded by the Drown Foundation along with funding from the Scituate, Cohasset and Hingham Arts Lottery Councils.

Last year's Drown grant gave impetus to the beginnings of art classes for special needs children. This year's grant along with half of the funding from the Scituate Arts Lottery Council will be used to further the art education for special needs students. The program which began last year was structured so the Center's young artist instructor Nancy Connolly spent a period of time each week in Cohasset's Deer Hill Elementary School special needs class. This class is a collaborative class serving students from the towns of Hull, Scituate, Weymouth, Quincy, Norwell and Cohasset.

She is continuing this program with weekly hour-long workshops where the children work on painting, printmaking, drawing, molding with clay and other art techniques. She encourages experimentation with each process and includes a great deal of storytelling and talking while working on projects. Connolly hopes to expand the courses for the special needs into Cohasset's Osgood class and eventually to the South Shore Art Center itself offering after-school art classes for the special needs children.

Connolly has found the response from the children at Deer Hill very positive and "they especially enjoy working with color, experimenting with the mixing of colors, the shaping of clay with their hands and learning to cut effectively with scissors," she said.

Funding for the juried exhibit awards through the Arts Lottery Councils of Cohasset, Weymouth, Plymouth, Rockland, Pembroke, Abington and Stoughton has helped to build the Center's reputation as offering top quality juried exhibits thereby attracting entries from artists throughout New England.

The 1988 All New England Juried Photography and All New England Juried Exhibits along with the annual summer festival exhibits have become recognized as exhibits in the New England region. And the funding for publicizing and advertising of the juried and invitational exhibits comes from the Plymouth County Development Council.

Funding from Duxbury, Braintree and Weymouth Arts Lottery Councils will be used to help underwrite lectures such as the ones in the Design for Living and Sunday-at-the-Center series.

Through all the avenues of funding, the Center has been able to bring art to the communities and to begin a variety of programs geared to the range of interests in the visual arts. It is through these ideas that the South Shore Art Center has become a leader in the growth of the arts on the South Shore and a major cultural center for the visual arts.

Cohasset's week . . .

Stop & Shop opening set

The Cohasset Super Stop and Shop will open in mid-January, according to Stop & Shop spokeswoman Doris Keating.

The building is actually complete now, according to building inpsector Donald Robbins, but must await installation of refrigerators and food shelves now underway before it can be opened to the public. Construction has gone smoothly and Robbins said he has not had to issue any citations.

Store owner Donald Staszko said he has heard no complaints from his neighbors about construction noise or traffic. He said he plans a grand opening ceremony next month and is mulling additional buildings on the parcel to be designed in manner of "The Marketplace" in Hanover.

Committee members

At their meeting Monday night, selectmen appointed Laura Gibbons to the harbor study committee. The vote to appoint Gibbons was 3 to 2.

There is currently a vacancy on the town's cemetery study committee. This is the group appointed by selectmen to look into additional areas for cemetery plots. If anyone is interested in applying for the position, please forward a resume to the selectmen's office.

Selectmen postponed a decision on an appointment to the new Milliken Field committee.

Sheila Kelly, Jane Moores and Lillian Lincoln helped trim the tree at the Community Center's breakfast with Santa. (Alan Chapman)

Historical trail

The South Shore Coalition is working for the creation of a historical trail on the South Shore.

The idea for the trail surfaced last summer, when State Sen. William Golden met with leaders from local historical groups.

In a letter to the coalition last week, he explained, "The purpose of this project would be to focus public attention of local citizens and visitors on the historic importance of our communities and the historic legacy of the area between Quincy and Plymouth.

"When this attention is focused on these sites," he said, "it is my hope that it would enhance our appreciation of our history and increase the possibility of producing revenues to preserve such sites."

Town hall hours

Town Hall will be close at 1 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 24 and will reopen at 8:30 a.m. Monday, Dec. 28.

Normal business hours will be followed next week, but there will be no evening hours Thursday, Dec. 31.

Town fined for landfill violations

By David Foley
Mariner Staff

The state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) has fined the town $3,630 for seven violations at the town landfill, but the Board of Health has defended its operation of the facility.

The state contends it found "unsuitable measures" taken to minimize blowing trash, that town employees insufficiently compacted the refused and did not cover it with the required six inches of cover soil.

DEQE Regional Director Edward P. Kunce wrote that his agency's Sept. 30 inspection also revealed "numerous leachate seeps and discharges emanating from the fill" and that salvageable metals and other materials were not disposed of quickly enough.

The board of health answered the charges during its Monday night meeting by saying that the department does not have the necessary graders to compact and spread the trash as DEQE would like.

As to the six inches of cover, Health Agent Joseph R. Godzik reminded the board that a large portion of the landfill was capped after the September inspection. He also noted the recent requirement that all trash be deposited in plastic bags and the installation of a litter fence as evidence of a serious attempt to control the scattering of refuse.

Of the drainage at the landifill, health board member William E. Baird said "I thought we did a pretty good job of it."

Godzik noted that DEQE has not replied in writing to any of the town's queries about the landfill since July of last year, when the state agency issued its previous Notice of Violation regarding the landfill.

For example, he said consulting engineers to the town sent several letters to DEQE about the disposal of brush at the landfill, but received no reply. However DEQE claims in its December 14 communication that "a brush disposal area is being operated without proper site assignment from the Cohasset Board of Health." in the Decmember 14 letter.

"They haven't any idea what we're doing up there," concluded Godzik.

On the subject of the landfill, the board also discussed their proposed landfill operations budget for the fiscal year begining next July 1.

The present budget is approximately $111,000 dollars but Monday night the board considered adding approximately $176,000 dollars for a wood chipper and leachate control. The wood chipper would reduce the volume taken up by scrap wood and stumps.

This would so reduce volume that the savings on covering soil, which has to be brought in from out of town, "could pay for that machine in ten years," claimed Godzik.

When reminded that the advisory committee has informed each department that it can recommend only level-funded budgets, Baird responded by saying "we've been putting these things off for 20 years."

He did half-seriously propose an alternative to the chipper when he marveled at how the trash compacter he recently bought reduces his 3 55-gallon cans of trash into one small bag. "Everybody in town ought to have one of these," Baird said, sparking more serious debate among board members as to whether they should require all trash entering the landfill to be compacted.

In other board business, the members voted:

Unanimously to allow emergency repairs to the septic system of a two-family home at 13 and 15 North Main Street owned by Gordon Stevenson:

Unanimously to grant variances requested by Mary Patrolia for her proposed building on Lot 66 of Fairoaks Lane. The variance is provisional on approval by the DEQE:

Unanimously to allow emergency repairs to the septic system at the 348 Forest Avenue home of Florence and Richard Kelly and unanimously to allow emergency repairs to the septic system at 17 Doane Street.

The hearings for a review of the septic system plan for the 484 Beechwood Street property of Vincent Nardo and the plans of the Gulf Development Corporation have been rescheduled for the evening of January 11.

Town moves to stop sale, development of Curtis Estate

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

The town is following the lead of one man, and is attempting to stop the impending sale and development of a 53-acre estate on Jerusalem Road.

The current proposal calls for the construction of 40 condominiums by a private developer on land known as the Curtis Estate. Abutter Joseph R. McElroy has suggested the land and existing structures could be used as housing for low income or the retarded. "That is an appropriate use of the land, as expressed in the will of George E. Curtis," he stated this week.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson has been instructed by selectmen to find out what steps are necessary to stop the sale to the private developer. He has been in contact with the state attorney general's office in an attempt to find out if a petition to sell the land by the property trustees has been properly filed in probate court.

McElroy, who has lived next door to the Curtis Estate for three years, has also written to the state attorney general and to the Plymouth County Probate Court, asking that the instructions contained in Curtis' will be followed, and the land not be sold for private development.

Plymouth developer Frank Westgate met with the planning board this fall to discuss plans to construct 30 to 40 cluster condominiums on the land he has an option to buy. The land, which now contains three homes and a barn, is under the control of the Curtis Trust.

The land, which contains four separate parcels, is assessed for a total value of $702,300.

But before the land is sold, permission must be granted by the state attorney general. Estate trustees Evan Crosby and James DeGiacomo have petitioned the attorney general for permission to sell the land and structures, although that document has not been filed in Plymouth Probate Court. And in a letter sent Dec. 11 to McElroy, Assistant Attorney General Gwen O'Sullivan indicated "the Department intends to assent to the trustees' petition as amended."

The public has an opportunity to make comments regarding the petition within 20 days of its court filing. That is why it is imperative for the town to know the exact date of the court filing, McElroy stated.

McElroy objects to the proposed sale and development for several reasons. McElroy envisions increased flooding problems on his land by further development along Rattlesnake Run, a stream which borders his property and the Curtis Estate.

He also objects to private development of the land which, according to Curtis's will, is to be used to "operate a home and refuge, free of charge, for feeble, deformed or invalid women." He suggested to selectmen last week that the land and existing structures could be used for affordable housing, as required by the state.

And in a later development, McElroy has learned the property could be maintained as a housing site for retarded citizens under the supervision of the South Shore Association of Retarded Citizens. Maria Plante, a Cohasset resident and vice president of the association, informed McElroy the property would be a suitable location. For several years, the state Department of land, which according to statements made by developer Westgate, is 90 percent ledge. The developer has proposed that a private septic treatment facility may be necessary for the cluster condominium project.

"And I don't understand how one of the homes could be up for sale now, when the trustees do not have permission from the state attorney general at this point, to sell the property," McElroy stated.

A "For Sale" sign has been posted by the Jack Conway Co. at the entrance to one home on the estate, a home the trustees referred to in their petition to the attorney general as small and "totally unsuitable" for living quarters by the elderly or infirmed as required in Curtis's will.

The Jack Conway Co. acknowledged the barn, three homes and 50 acres are listed for a price of $1.7 million. The entire parcel is under agreement to purchase, according to the company.

McElroy's crusade to save the estate actually began more than two years ago when he wrote to various town officials, expressing his concern regarding the diminishment of the town's watershed area by increased development. As more houses were built along Forest Avenue, McElroy said the water level of Rattlesnake Run has risen. "What if there's a problem with this private septic system they are proposing for the Curtis Estate? It will run right into Rattlesnake Run which runs into the environmentally-protected Strait's Pond," he explained.

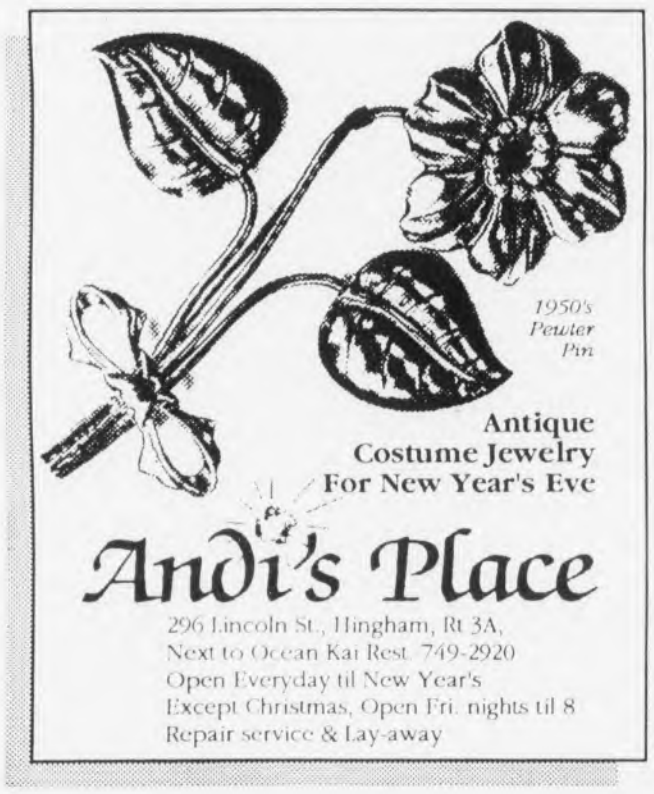
After Westgate appeared before the planning board, McElroy wrote a letter Nov. 24 to selectmen, outlining his concerns with the proposal, and suggesting the estate buildings could be renovated and used as affordable housing. "I know the state has been at the town for many years, trying to get some affordable housing here. I thought this could be their answer," McElroy noted. The remaining land could be set aside as a conservation trust.

Dec. 9, the two estate trustees had a legal document, called a Cy Pres, placed into the court records but not officially filed. It requests permission from the attorney general to sell the property which will be used "for such projects or plans as the trustees may determine appropriate for the aid and assistance of elderly, infirm, or needy persons residing in Plymouth County." Once it is filed in court, interested parties have 20 days to comment on the document.

As McElroy stated, "I have no argument about how the trustees decide to manage their money. But I am saying their statements in that document, that the Curtis estate with the current condition of the buildings and the surrounding wetlands makes it unsuitable for the intended purposes of his will, are incorrect.

"I say those statements are unfair. Those buildings are significant structures and are an appropriate use for charitable purposes. But to say the land is unsuitable for charitable use, but appropriate for development of 40 condomiums is wrong. You can't have your cake and eat it too. What these trustees are doing is attempting to break this will and optimize their situation with the developer."

Within the Cy Pres document, the trustees stated "that due to the nature of the property and applicable wetlands restrictions, the Cohasset site is not now and cannot be made suitable for the operation of a home. In addition, the restrictions in the will that the home be operated for 'feeble' or 'deformed' women preferably of the 'protestant faith' are not in accord with modern



Mental Health has been anxious to locate housing in Cohasset, but has been unable to find available, buildable land.

McElroy also objects to private development of the interpretations of constitutionally permissable charitable entities."

But McElroy, who has a copy of the last will and testament, said Curtis included a statement within the will that explains all provisions will be followed as long as they are consistent with existing law. "It is clear to me after reading the will," McElroy said, "that if the homes could not be used for protestant women, it would also apply to the needy and destitute."

The trustees also argued in the petition that the homes are not adequately served by public transportation, "making it unsuitable for a use involving elderly or infirm persons of either sex." McElroy answered that charge by suggesting the town consider converting the property into affordable housing, "not necessarily for the elderly. And if the housing were made available for the handicapped or the retarded, it is very likely they would have their own transportation available."

McElroy's concern with this attempt by the trustees to "break the will," is that the trustees will take the liquid assets from the sale of the property and use whatever portion they deem appropriate for charitable causes in another county. "In Curtis's will, he says he wants this property to be the focal point of his charitable work. And now the trustees want to spend the profits from his property in Plymouth county," McElroy said. "The will is very clear that the home is to be used in Cohasset. But the trustees are suggesting there are no charitable needs in Cohasset."

A survey was conducted 20 years ago and is now contained in the Plymouth Probate records, which enumerates the charitable organizations for which the trust money could be used. Cohasset and surrounding communities would benefit from a number of agencies listed in that document, McElroy said.

The Windy Hill Road resident attended last week's selectmen's meeting and requested they take some action regarding this impending sale to developer Westgate. The town officials unanimously voted to ask the attorney general and the probate court to defer approval of any sale.

McElroy wrote to the attorney general and the probate court justice Dec. 16 in which he objected to the assistant attorney general's statements in a Dec. 11 letter noting the state "intends to assent to the trustees' petition" to sell the land. He asked the state to defer a sale until town officials have had an opportunity to reply to the trustees' petition for sale.

"I have a personal stake in this, of course," McElroy noted. "I am an abutter to this property and I will be harmed by further development in this area." He also noted that when he purchased his home in 1984, he was told by the realtor that the land abutted acres of conservation land. He still holds the original listing of the home which contains two references to abutting conservation land. "We were from Virginia, we had no idea this wasn't conservation land until we heard about the developer coming to the planning board," he stated.

McElroy said in the future he would like to seek legislation that would limit the tenure of trustees and would require the attorney general to annually publish the status of all large charitable trusts. In addition, McElroy envisions a law which requires the state to make complete records of charitable trusts available for public review.

Coalition forms committee to help protect water supplies

By John Magadieu
Mariner staff

The South Shore Coalition has formed a water supply protection advisory committee.

Many of the coalition's 11 member-towns depend on each other for water

The coalition also recommended that voters at area town meetings approve a resolution to increase the region's drinking water resources.

The resolution recommends that communities adopt the following water protection measures:

❑ a requirement that septic systems be inspected and pumped if necessary at the time of sale or transfer of a property;

❑ a requirement that residential underground fuel tanks be tested for leaks at the time of sale or transfer of property;

❑ a supplemental health board regulation which establishes a maximum percolation rate of two inches per minute, and prohibits the use of dewatered percolation tests for septic system approvals;

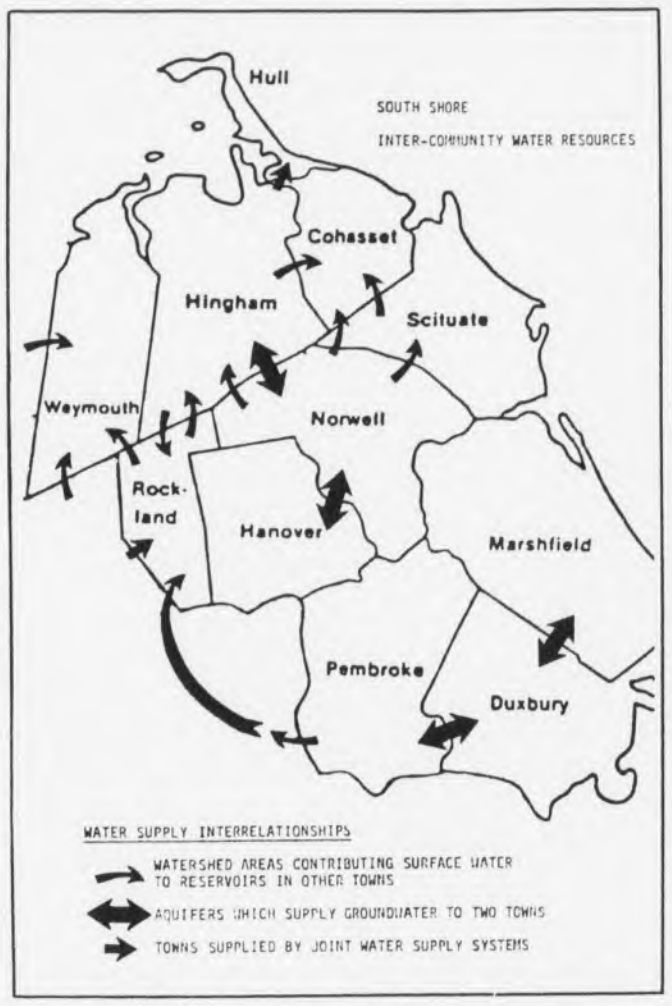
❑ Underground fuel storage tanks should be examined and certified at the time of property revaluation.

Based on results of a study performed by the Metropolitan Area Planning Council which concentrated on Marshfield and Norwell, Martin Pilsbury recommended the creation of the committee as well as three of the four protection measures.

Marshfield Selectman Richard Levin added the recommendation regarding underground storage tanks.

Pilsbury explained the MAPC found that watersheds and aquifers do not pay attention to town borders.

"To date there has not been much of a mechanism to look at water supply and protection regionally," he said. "South Shore communities rely upon surface and groundwater resources within the North and South River basins and the Weymouth and Weir River basins.



"Groundwater represents 70 percent of the area's water supplies, with a safe yield of 33 million gallons per day available in 52 wells across the region. Surface water provides a safe yield of about 15 million gallons per day, available from eight reservoirs."

According to the MAPC study, water quality problems are severe in only one of the coalition communities to date—Marshfield.

Marshfield shut down four wells because of organic chemical contamination in 1986. One has since reopened.

Trace amounts of chemicals have been detected in several other South Shore communities, but no wells have been closed elsewhere for that reason.

Two wells in Scituate, however, have been closed since last January because of salt intrusion.

Pilsbury noted that surface and groundwater sources are strongly connected at a regional level. Sixty percent of Cohasset's reservoir, for example, is outside the town's borders.

"Protection of the town's water supply," he said, "is therefore beyond the town's capacity, beyond its jurisdiction."

The study noted that "of the 16,500 acres of reservoir watershed lands in the region, 5,100 acres, or nearly one-third, extend beyond the boundaries of the communities in which the reservoirs are located.

"There are also about 3,200 acres of aquifer lands which straddle community boundaries," the study said. These "intercommunity water resource areas" total about 8,350 acres.

Pilsbury commented that most South Shore communities have initiated water resources protection programs, or overlay districts, within their town boundaries. But only one small section of intercommunity wetlands, a parcel in Scituate, has been protected for another town's benefit.

The wetlands parcel is not used by Scituate, but it contributes to the Cohasset drinking water supply, and it has been protected by Scituate.

"Scituate should be commended," Pilsbury told the coalition. "Regional cooperation is essential to prevent other such areas from falling through the cracks."

Zoning of such areas, he noted, is two-thirds residential, with most of that one-acre or greater lot sizes. But existing zoning would allow 227 acres of business use and 574 acres of industrial use within the inter-community watershed and aquifer areas.

Pilsbury commented that seven landfills are among potential sources of contamination. Other threats include two auto dumps, and more than 450 commercial underground fuel tanks.

Countless other residential fuel tanks threaten intercommunity water supplies and aquifers, he added, as does the use of road salt on Route 3.

In creating the water supply protection advisory committee, the coalition agreed that regional cooperation would be of value, and coalition members are expected to forward the recommended resolutions to their respective town meetings.

Holiday season at Derby Academy

Holiday celebrations began for students at Derby Academy Thursday, Dec. 17, when Lower School classes presented "There Was One Who Gave a Lamb," first of three traditional pageants given by the three levels of the Hingham school.

Parents, grandparents, and alumni invited attended the performance at 9:30 a.m. in Sarah Derby Hall, when fourth graders performed the tale of a special gift for the Christ Child, while Grades One through Three accompanied with carols.

The story of the Annunciation and birth of Christ, adapted years ago by Mrs. Richard Partridge and Mrs. John Glowacki, was told by fifth, sixth, and seventh graders, and acted by eighth and ninth graders. Principal members of the Nativity tableau were James Driscoll and Nicholas Manganaro of Cohasset, and Brian Lawless of Hingham as the Three Kings.

Firefighters bury one of their own

By David Foley
Mariner staff

Cohasset firefighters buried one of their own Monday as they laid to rest 58-year Edward P. Barrow, a full-time firefighter for 20 years with the department.

The Smith Place resident died Friday morning of a massive stroke at South Shore Hospital after having been hospitalized the Sunday before.

As Barrow's casket passed in front of the fire station, the funeral procession was halted so the two-bell "All Out" could be rung twice on Engine Two.

"All Out" signals firefighters that a blaze has been extinguished.

About 20 members of the Cohasset Fire Department as well as one member from the fire departments of Hingham, Hull, Scituate and Norwell took part in the funeral.

The town of Scituate provided a fully-manned fire engine to cover Cohasset so its own firefighters could join in the procession.

Firefighter and Emergency Medical Technician Linwood Davis started his career with the Department the same day in 1967 that Barrow did. He remembers "Eddy" as a "guy who liked to help people."

"You might have an argument with him one day and the next. . .he'd be under the hood of your car if you had any trouble," recalled Davis.

One instance of his kindness, said David, is how Barrow devised a pressurized watering can for the Garden Club in 1980 when it had erected six-foot high planters without any way to water them. He painted the wheeled devices the same lime green as now is used on fire trucks.

Barrow had worked as an auto mechanic and an on-call firefigher before joining the department full-time.

"If a part didn't exist, he'd build it," remembered Davis.

Barrow is survived by his brother, Cohasset Police Sargeant Richard Barrow, sister Jean Salvador, and brother Robert Barrow, a custodian with the school department.

Students remember POW/MIAs

The students and faculty of South Shore Vocational Technical High School are working with the Massachusetts Vigil Society to keep alive the memory of American POW/MIAs from the Vietnam War.

Kevin Jewers, a Marshfield resident and a Vietnam veteran who is an active members of the Massachusetts Vigil Society, approached the vocational techincal high school with a construction project for 59 enlarged replicas of military dog tags. The replicas are approximately 20 times the size of the conventional dog tags worn by the men and women who served in Vietnam. Each dog tag has the name and hometown of one of the 59 Massachusetts men who are still missing from the Vietnam War.

The dog tags, Jewers explained, will be displayed from a bamboo Christmas tree that will be displayed in Boston as a reminder of the Christmas seasons that have been missed by each of these men who are still unaccounted for as a result of combat in Southeast Asia.

The vocational students from the shop areas of precision metal fabrication, drafting and auto body embraced the project and quickly formalized the design, cut and polished the raw stock, lettered each man's name and hometown. The lettering was protected with several sprayed coats of lacquer.

Students working on the project include: Louann McCullogh, Lynn Smith and Michelle Pigeon of the drafting shop, John McDonald, Kenneth Thompson and Francis Berryman of the precision metal fabrication shop and Anthony Johnson and William Gammon of the Auto body shop. Instructors Richard Seggelin, Paul O'Donnell and Michael Walsh supervised the project.

Working on a project remembering America's POW/MIAs is not new to the students of South Shore Vocational Technical High School. Richard Fitts, an Abington resident and graduate of South Shore has been missing in action since 1968 and several other graduates were killed in Vietnam.

At Christmas a missing Vo-Tech graduate and 58 other Massachusetts men are not forgotten by the Massachusetts Vigil Society or the students of South Shore Vocational Technical High School.

☐ Helen Pratt of Hunneman's Cohasset office received the designation of Accredited Relocation Counselor as a result of completing advanced courses in relocation services offered by Relocation Resources, Inc., of Norwell.

The course dealt with the complexities and special problems concerning corporate relocation and transferees. As a result of this specialized training, Helen is now certified to handle corporate listings especially those requiring special marketing and property management.

☐ Must begin by wishing a special gal a super (tho' belated) birthday. Holly Pompeo turned eighteen last weekend, which sure is reason for celebration. Holly had two reasons to celebrate, actually, as she received word from Bowdoin College that she was accepted on early admissions. That sure tells you what a great gal she is, it takes a lot to be accepted at that prestigious school! Everyone is proud of you Holly!

☐ Speaking of Cohassetites making good, did you read about our own Laura Young in last week's Herald? We all know that Laura is the Nutcracker Star, and now she has another claim to fame! She and Don Edwards doned high hats, tails and georgeous gowns to "trip the light fantastic" at the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. John Russo. It was the first floor show ever at the Ritz ballroom reception. The couple did a Fred-and-Ginger number, then some heavy ballet. Did you know that the ceiling had to be measured before the two dancers were okayed? Nifty thought that Laura should be the first to do such a number at the Ritz!

☐ Everyone is talking about Jeff O'Neill's "debut" at Boston College. A lot of hockey fans were watching the game and saw him score that "awesome" goal. Keep up the good work, Jeff. Plenty of us loyal fans love to watch you play hockey. We are sure that your name will be in the news often!

☐ VFW Post 9146 held their building fund drawing last week, and have announced the winners. The VCR was won by Vicky Williams of Doane Street, the $100 prize was won by Chris Pattyson of Stowe, Mass., and the $50 prize went to Glenn Robbins of Holmes Street in Halifax. The Post would certainly like to thank everyone who contributed to their fund!

Tilly Nardo served some punch to an appreciative Don White during the senior center Christmas party.

☐ One thing that sure is missing "around town" is Betty Enders walking with her two beautiful dogs. She is a patient at South Shore Hospital as this is being written, but here's hoping that she is reading it from her own living room at home. Get well soon, Betty.

☐ Two more ladies awaiting word that they can be home in time for Christmas are Charlotte Fraus and Priscilla Dresser. Here's hoping their Christmas wishes come true, no matter where they may be.

That's the news from here. This is the season that everyone has lots to tell, tell us your news!

Happy and healthy holidays!

Santa replies to kindergarten students

Dear Santa,

I love you. My name is Erica. I am fine. I never saw you in a long time. I hope I see you this year.

At Christmas we go to Edaville railroad. I like the ponies best.

I hope your mother is feeling good.

Love,
Erica Dean

December, 1987

Dear Erica,

Happy Holidays! Thank you for writing me a letter. I've been to Edaville Railroad and it really is fun. Tell the ponies I send my greetings.

All the elves are busy making toys in their workshops. Rudolph's nose is extremely bright this year to help us guide the way, and the rest of the reindeer are in good flying shape for Christmas.

The other day we had a fun time because it was winter carnival day. The elves, reindeer, and I all joined in an iceskating contest on Candycane Pond. Frosty the Snowman was there, too. Mrs. Claus judged us all. There was one part of the pond that wasn't totally frozen, and we all tried to avoid it, but Dasher was showing Dancer how he does his fugure eights, and he fell in! I got a rope and helped him out. We all went back to Frosty's house for hot chocolate. The rest of the day the elves enjoyed reindeer rides and everyone loved the sleigh rides. However, when we were on a sleigh ride, the sleigh, which was pulled by my favorite white horses, got stuck on a hill! We all had to get out and help push. Well, I have to go now. Don't forget to leave me milk and cookies.

Love,
Santa

Dear Santa,

Mom and Dad say Merry Christmas. My brother Jason is 9 years old and is nice. I like my teacher a lot and she's so nice. I have a friend and her name is Jessie. We play at school with dolls. I love to color and play with my dog - a golden retriever - Chester. I like Christmas for happy times.

Love,
Alanna Murphy

December, 1987

Dear Alanna,

My elves and I are very busy up here at the North Pole. The reindeer are getting all ready for the long trip. They practice flying every day so they will be able to make it around the world. They also practice taking off and landing so they won't crash. Usually it gets very cold up here around the month of July, but this year it got cold in May! The reindeer had to come into Mrs. Claus's and my house and the elves all needed warmer clothes. It was even too cold for my friend Frosty the Snowman! The elves, the reindeer, and all our pals that usually live outside had to come inside. Mrs. Claus baked some cookies and I brewed some tea. A few days ago the elves went and got our Christmas tree. It took one hundred and fifty of them to carry it home! We decorated it yesterday with ornaments of every girl and boy in the world. Mrs. Claus is making me a new Santa suit just like my old one because I'm beginning to get holes in the knees. It also is becoming black because of all the ashes and soot.

Well, I have lots of kids to write to so I'd better be going. Remember to be a good girl and I'll try to get you everything that you want.

Merry Christmas, Alanna, HO! HO! HO!

Love,
Santa Claus

P.S. Please leave some carrots for my reindeer - they LOVE carrots!

Dear Santa,

My name is James. I am 5 and a half years old. I love to ice skate. I have a brother named Ian, and a sister named Gerdian. I have a dog named Lawtwin.

I hope you have a nice Christmas. I hope it snows on Christmas Eve.

I have lots of friends. Some are John and Jimmy.

Love,
Jamie Simons

Dear Jamie,

Thank you for your letter. HO! HO! HO! How are you? How are Ian, Gerdian, and Lawtwin? I hope they are doing fine.

It has been very busy up here in the North Pole because it's getting so close to Christmas time. The elves, Mrs. Claus, Frosty, Rudolph, and I just had a winter carnival with rides, snow castles, sledding, and your favorite, ice skating! We also had a reindeer flying contest. Blitzen, Dasher, Dancer and Rudolph were in the big race. Now, Blitzen is the biggest and strongest reindeer in the North Pole, and so everyone thought he would win. But, that's not what happened! In the beginning of the race Blitzen was in the lead. But, by the last bend Rudolph was right with him. Blitzen saw this and flew with all his might, and so did Rudolph. Rudolph won the race! It was a terrific day!

Well, Jamie, I must write to many thousands of children, so I'd better go now. Remember to be the best boy you can be and I'll try to give you something you'll like.

Have a very, very, very Merry Christmas!
HO! HO! HO!

Love,
Santa Claus

Dear Santa,

My name is Jennifer. I have one sister and one brother, and seven cats! I like to swim and play soccer.

My favorite thing to do at Christmas is play in the snow. I like to decorate our tree with bells, lights, stars, angels and gingerbread men.

Have a good holiday.

From Jennifer Meehan

December, 1987

Dear Jennifer,

Hi, Jennifer, I've been checking my list about who's naughty and who's nice. I haven't found your name on the list yet, but don't worry, I'll find it. I have a story to tell you about my vacation.

The Christmas season was over, and I was very tired from delivering all those presents. I needed a vacation so I asked Mrs. Claus where we should go. She said we should go somewhere warm for a change. I asked all the reindeer to take us to California. Mrs. Claus and I hopped in the sleigh and headed for Disney Land.

When we got there, we parked the sleigh in the space. We went to meet Mickey Mouse and we went on all the rides. Mrs. Claus said that we should take vacations more often. Suddenly, a child yelled my name. All of the children in the park came at us. Then they shouted what they wanted for Christmas. "I want this. I want that," they said. I took down everything they wanted on my list. After I wrote down what they wanted, we left. That was our vacation.

Jennifer, I really liked your picture. Mrs. Claus and Rudolph liked it, too.

Love,
Santa

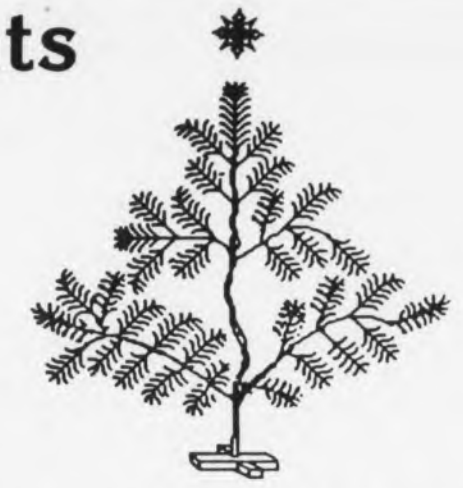
P.S. See you soon.

Dear Santa,

My name is Jimmy. My sister's name is Jenny and my brother's name is John. My Mom's name is Judy Figueiredo and my Dad's name is Jimmy too. I have 2 fishies and 1 bunny.

I like to play in the snow and make snowmen and snow forts.

At Christmas time we play next to the Christmas tree and play games like care bears.



I hope you have a good Christmas and don't get too tired making lots of toys.

Love,
Jimmy

December, 1987

Dear Jimmy,

I hope you have a white Christmas to do all of the games you like to play in the snow. Up here at the North Pole we have had a large amount of snow. The reindeer like to play in the snow like you, but lately they have been too busy getting ready for Christmas.

As you asked before, I don't get too tired making lots of toys because the elves help out. Frosty helps too, but not as much; he can't take the indoor heat. Say hello to Jenny, John, Judy, and your father Jimmy for me and maybe I'll get a letter from them later.

Love,
Santa Claus

P.S. Merry Christmas

Dear Santa,

I have one sister, 1 year old. She can't crawl yet.

My favorite thing to do is play hide and seek. My best place to hide is in the back of an old tree. I like to play in the snow, and when it's deep, I like to dig tunnels! I make them all over the yard.

I like to put the glass balls on the Christmas tree. We put toys on the tree, tied with little golden string.

I hope you have a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Love,
Sean

December, 1987

Dear Sean,

Merry Christmas! The elves and reindeer are all excited and playing in the snow outside. We have lots of snow here. The elves went out and cut a very big Christmas tree. They decorated it with many beautiful ornaments, also. The elves are working very hard, fixing last minute details.

Right now Mrs. Claus is baking home made chocolate chip cookies, and hot chocolate. She also made me a brand new red suit for this Christmas. Mrs. Claus also tells me to say hi and Merry Christmas!

Do you know what happened yesterday? One of our cats ran away. We looked for her all day. Guess who came back later that night? Our cat, followed by five little kittens! We named them Snowball, Fluffy, Clover, Elizabeth, and Chewy.

Thank you for writing to me. I'm very glad I received your letter. I love getting letters, and I try to answer all of them. Except sometimes there are so many letters, I cannot always write back to everyone. We are all hoping that you will be especially good at school, to your parents, and your sister. Have a Merry Christmas! And a Happy New Year! HO! HO! HO!

Love,
Santa Claus

Dear Santa,

My name is Geralyn. My brother's name is Colby Breton Heath. At school I like to paint. At home I like to play on my swings when it's a nice warm day.

At Christmas me and my Uncle Jerold like to string popcorn and put it on the tree. Sometimes I eat it.

My favorite friends are Naomi, Jessie, Erica, Melissa, Jacqueline, Jimmy, Eric, John and Alana.

I hope you have a nice Christmas.

From Geralyn Miller

December, 1987

Dear Geralyn,

Merry Christmas! Weather at the North Pole has been cold lately, but my elves have been working hard. I have been watching over you and your friends through my crystal snowball, so be sure to be good. Christmas is getting closer every day. Mrs. Claus has just painted the sleigh and it looks very nice. By accident, a clumsy elf bumped into her, and the can of paint landed on his head! Now his whole body is red, but the color suits him well.

Guess what? I like to play on the swings, too. Please save some popcorn for me! I love popcorn. I'm going on a diet because all these cookies are making me too fat and jolly.

Love,
Santa

Editorial

Christmas wishes

Before we close out 1987, we'd like to make a few comments about this year. We have had our ups and downs, like everyone else in this town. We"ve had some good stories and some awful ones.

We make our sincere apologies for any misleading headlines, misspelled words, and inaccurate information. The business of gathering news is trying some weeks, and some weeks we just don't try hard enough.

Each year at this time, we like to fill this void in the paper with our "gifts" to the good residents of Cohasset. We hope we do not, as we have in the past, offend anyone. Our gifts are given with the greatest honor and respect.

Before we begin, allow us this time to express our gratitude to this great town. The nicest people in the world can be found in our tiny little corner by the sea. Sure, you're quick to point out our spelling errors, our omissions and our misstatements. But how can one learn without being told of one's errors? We really do appreciate those people concerned enough to care. Without your constant watchful eye, discerning knowledge and keen awareness, we could not prosper .

And we are extremely grateful for the many calls and letters we've received throughout this year - a brief message thanking us for a feature you enjoyed, or a photograph you admired. Without those words of encouragement, a week can seem like an eternity. Thank you for taking the time to tell us what you think about your newspaper, and please continue. Good or bad, we need your help in deciding what people want in their hometown newspaper.

And without further ado, we present to the people of Cohasset, our Christmas Wish List for 1987:

- to the town's advisory committee, a fairy godmother with a bulging wallet;
- to Fire Chief Daniel Brock, access to her American Express gold card;
- to Selectmen Rocco Laugelle and Burt Pratt, someone in this town they aren't related to;
- to Mary Klein, the woman who is fighting the town to provide affordable housing, a brighter future and less publicity;
- to Jack Nicholson, the only decent thing about The Witches of Eastwick, an Academy Award. It would soothe our disappointment over this disappointing film.
- to School Supt. Stephen Hart, a new opening to his annual presentation of the budget. Something like, "You won't believe this, but I've got some really good news for you. We have more money than we know what to do with this year."
- to all town employees, affordable homes in the town where they work;
- to the town's clergymen who proposed an official day of rest, a daily appointment calendar with every 'Sunday' page missing;
- to the water department, no embarrassing moments which would f(oil) their efforts to keep our water clean;
- to our local cable company, someone who is devoid of all meaning in his life, who has absolutely no friends, no social commitments, no reason to exist, and is therefore available to videotape selectmen's meetings;
- to the sewer commissioners, a faster approach to solving our septage problems - a pick and a shovel to dig their way to Hull. And a great big pipe to stick up their treatment plant.
- to Cohasset Heights Ltd. owner Paul Barry, a legal degree with a minor in sanitary engineering;
- to the dump protesters, an invitation to dine atop La Heights du Garbage which boasts a quiet atmosphere, a rustic setting, and one of the best views from Cohasset. And for your dining pleasure, the subtle sounds of Mr. Leachate Welz and his babbling bubbles;
- to health board administrative assistant Carol Oteri, a used police chief's car;
- to Selectman Martha Gjesteby, her own Mr. Microphone. Not only will she now be audible during meetings, she'll be a big hit at all social engagements;
- to Cohasset's Constitution Bicentennial Committee, a big pat on the back for making what had the potential to be the most ignored and overlooked celebration in history, into a distinguished, meaningful and educational observance for schoolchildren and adults;
- to all the volunteers in Cohasset, from the Social Service League, to the senior center, to the classrooms aides, a huge 'thank you' and more time in your 1988 calendar to continue your appreciated efforts;
- to Pauline Litchfield, custodienne extraordinaire, a double dose of penicillin to clear her ear infection quickly;
- to Executive Secretary Donald Andrew, a new antique auto and a garage to store it in beside his new town hall office which contains a full-sized refrigerator to hold his year's supply of Diet Coke. Anything else, Don?
- to administrative assistant Janet Chalke, a sign outside her new office at town hall, saying "I'm not the receptionist!"

Merry Christmas, Cohasset.

The Summit

It's Christmas, 1987;
the frost still sparkles on the spires in the village;
the bustle is the same,
yet
there's more hope this year.
Two world leaders smile, shake hands and come together on a winter stage.
The waiting planet, wrapped in boughs and tinsel, listens while two different minds converge, proclaim a challenge to their people to work side by side, to choose their destiny—
and to refute
the threatened Armageddon, the curse handed down
for centuries . . .
Even opponents can choose peace not war, can build bridges toward each other—but,
those who truly wish to save the earth can simply
love.

Coalition to form education task force

The South Shore Coalition is moving ahead to establish a task force on education.

Weymouth Selectman Brian McDonald will work to bring together school committee members, superintendents, teacher representatives and PTO and PTA representatives from the coalition's 11 member-towns.

State Sen. William Golden had proposed the idea of an educational task force at the coalition's Nov. 19 meeting.

In a letter to the coalition, Golden said he envisions the task force as a forum where members could meet to exchange ideas and share resources.

"This task force could examine ways that schools could work together on a regional basis and could identify and address specific problems in individual communities," Golden said.

"United as a group," he added, "the education task force would have an advantage in an expanded ability to access information from the state on technical and fiscal matters, as well as pending legislation.

"I believe that the South Shore Coalition would be the ideal vehicle for initiating this effort, in view of the organization's success in addressing other issues on a regional basis."

Ann Federico, Golden's aide, told coalition members, "Many people have called us about this. They are very excited about it."

Golden noted that the task force could address a number of issues and problems. Issues include:

- ❑ Participation in state legislative, program and funding priorities;
- ❑ Expansion of specialized course offerings;
- ❑ Shared planning of curriculum and joint purchasing of textbooks and other materials;
- ❑ Day care for faculty, staff and teenage parents;
- ❑ Audiovisual and software resources. Utilization of cable television, joint video, film, audio, and software libraries;
- ❑ Enhancement of special needs collaborative efforts and programs for the gifted and talented;
- ❑ Social and health issues. Drugs, alcohol, sex and AIDS education;
- ❑ Role of the private sector in the educational process and vice-versa;
- ❑ Public relations and community involvement;
- ❑ Capital investment and sharing of resources.

"In some cases," Golden said, "there is a real opportunity for South Shore Coalition communities to share programs and other resources.

"In other cases," he added, "the task force would serve as a regional voice for addressing and resolving those educational problems which are beyond the power of any single community acting on its own."

McDonald said he will try to arrange a forum for the various community education representatives of the region in early January, 1988.

Letters to Santa, and his replies to Osgood kids

James Watts and Lauren Dooley pose with their decorations which are about to grace the Community Center tree. (Alan Chapman)

Dear Santa,

I have one sister and one cat named Lite-Brite! My favorite thing to do in the winter is make snowballs and snow castles.

We put up a big Christmas tree that touches the ceiling. We decorate it with white doves with real feathers on them.

I hope you have a nice Christmas and that we have lots and lots of snow!

Love,
Naomi

Dear Naomi,

HO, HO, HO and a Merry Christmas to you Naomi. Thanks a lot for sending me a letter; that really made me feel good.

Naomi, I also have a sister whose name is Samantha. My sister also helps me check the list to see who's been good or bad, but your name has not shown up yet. When it shows up, I'm sure it will be on the good list.

This year I'm happy to say that all the reindeer are happy and glee, and Rudolph is shining brighter than ever with his red nose ready to lead the way right to your house. Rudolph told me yesterday after he read your story that we would go directly to your house to deliver your gifts, so they don't get cold or snowy.

Well, I have to go now. Be good to your family and friends, and you will have a Happy Christmas.

Happy Christmas
Love,
Santa Claus

Dear Santa,

My name is Teddy and I have one big brother named Tucker. I have no sisters. I have my Mommy and Daddy. I have some best friends. Their names are Robin and J.B. and Yakie and his father is Paul.

I play with my dog and he's real old.

I like Christmas because we get to decorate the Christmas tree and I like to help.

Hope you have a nice Christmas and say hello to Mrs. Santa Claus for me.

Love,
Teddy

Dear Teddy,

Hello, how are you? I've been very busy watching over all the children. I just came back from vacation.

The weather in the North Pole has been very cold and lots of snow, wonderful for making snowmen! Rudolph and the other reindeer have been doing a daily exercise program to keep them in shape for the busy night ahead. My head elf is very busy, also. His main job is keeping Rudolph's nose shining.

All the elves have been trying to fix the sleigh; we have a problem with it. You see the elves and I decided it was time to enlarge our sleigh because of all the toys we have. So my chief elf brought the sleigh down to "Speedy Sleigh King" to get tuned up and enlarged. Everything is taken care of and we are just counting the days until Christmas.

Remember I'm watching you, so be good!

Love,
Santa Claus

Dear Santa,

I am almost 6 years old! My little brother's name is Patrick, he's 9 weeks old. Jay is my other brother, he's 3. He's fun to play with.

I help mom put the ornaments of the tree. We put lots of different colored lights on the tree.

I like to play in the snow and make snowmen, especially little ones!

Before we go to bed on Christmas Eve, we leave cookies and milk for you by the fireplace. I hope you like them.

Love,
Sarah

Dear Sarah,

It is getting very chilly up here at the North Pole. All of my workers are working very hard. The elves are making all of the toys for the boys and girls, the reindeer are practicing for their big night. Mrs. Claus is decorating the big tree with pretty ornaments and colored lights. She hopes it looks as pretty as your tree. Frosty is making snowmen, and I am going over my list to make sure I know who has been naughty and nice.

I am very glad to hear you have been playing with your brother. This is very helpful to your mother. I am also glad to hear you help your mom decorate the tree. I really enjoyed your tree last year. I bet it will be even prettier this year.

I hope you leave out the same kind of cookies as you did last year. Those cookies were delicious! It is very nice to have a snack so I'm not hungry during my long trip. Rudolph, Dasher, and Dancer asked me to ask you if by chance you had an extra carrot! My reindeer love carrots! Make sure you go to bed early on Christmas Eve because I get very embarassed if people see me delivering my gifts. I hope you and your brother enjoy your presents.

Thank you very much for your lovely letter and picture. I will always remember them.

Love,
Santa

Dear Santa,

Do you like ice cream? I like candy canes at Christmas. I have a dog named Oliver. He's a Hunter dog. He & I like to catch snakes. I have a brother William 4 years old. I'm 6. I like to play GI Joe. I like school a little bit. I like Mom & Dad. I like to ride my bike. I hope you have a nice Christmas Santa.

Andrew
Andrew McAuliffe

December, 1987

Dear Andrew,

I just want you to know that I love ice cream, especially chocolate chip. I really like candy canes, too. I hope you and William are getting along. When I was your age, I loved school!

Mrs. Claus and I are doing fine up here at the North Pole. It's cold, as usual, but we can handle it. Right now it is a little under 5°F. All of my reindeer are doing fine, especially Rudolph. He always looks forward to flying to the houses of all the boys and girls. All of my elves have been working day and night to make toys for Christmas. I thought your picture was good! I hope this is the best Christmas ever!

Love,
Santa Claus

Dear Santa,

My name is Emily. I have one sister. Her name is Katherine. I like to go over my next door neighbor's house after school to play with my friend Emily. We play with her Pound Purries.

Christmas is fun because we go to my grandmothers' house. I like to help decorate the Christmas tree with my Mommy and Daddy.

Look for the cookies I will leave for you on Christmas.

Love,
Emily
Emily Coyne

Dear Emily,

The North Pole has been very busy lately. The elves are preparing presents. The reindeer are all excited about the long trip. They practice by themselves now. Mrs. Claus, and I have just finished decorating our tree. Mrs. Claus is baking cookies for the elves and reindeer. The sleigh is waiting. Christmas will be here soon. Have fun decorating your tree. Last year Rudolph didn't do very well leading us. Once we almost crashed because of that but this year Rudolph's nose has brightened up. Rudolph's nose had brightened up because we've been feeding him more nutritious foods. Last year, we found out that he was sneaking candy from us. Now because of his new diet we will be able to see better. I'm looking forward to eating all the cookies. I've saved my appetite by going on a diet. Remember to be a good girl.

Love,
Santa Claus

Dear Santa,

My name is Liam and I live in Fairoaks Lane. I like to watch TV and play with my G.I. Joe stuff. I have a dog named Randy and a pig named Spanky. I play with my brother, Kevin all the time. I play with my sisters — sometimes!!

I like to play with the blocks at school and build things, Santa, I work very hard at school. I would like you to bring me the G.I. Joe Crossfire. I have been a good, good, good boy this year.

Love,
Liam
Liam O'Donnell

Dear Liam,

We've been so busy making toys lately, but I love it when children write to me! I hope you've been good, not upsetting your babysitters! Say hello to Spanky and Randy for me.

Your drawing was really good. We'll put it on our Christmas tree beside a little lovable boy's from Spain named Antonio. He's really nice. I wrote to him about you!

Do you like sledding? I sure do; I go sledding almost every day. When I fall, it doesn't hurt; I bounce!

Rudolf's nose is so bright, we need to put a cover on it. Did I tell you I have other animals? I have ten birds, three kittens, four cocker spaniels, and six hamsters. They are so cute!

Merry Christmas!

Love,
Santa Claus

Letters to Santa from Osgood school

Dear Santa,

My name is Adam. I have a big brother named Brett. I have my father and his name is Robert and my mother's name is Jane. I used to have a rabbit named Montgomery. I like to play with my friends William and J.B.

I like decorating the Christmas tree. My mother bought a fairy to put on top of the Christmas tree.

Have a Merry Christmas
Love,
Adam

Dear Adam,

I'm so glad you wrote to me! How's your family? Mrs. Claus and the elves are fine, and Mrs. Claus still cooks those yummy cookies, but now they are better!

Our Christmas tree is enormous. It takes us ten days to decorate it. Your drawing is very pretty, and we'll put it on our Christmas tree with many others. Yours will be beside a little girl from China. Instead of a fairy, we are putting on a little star that fell from the sky two weeks ago, it is so pretty!

I have many pets, I've got ten birds, three kittens, four cocker spaniels, six hamsters and all the reindeer. Everybody loves to play with them,and they love sledding. We made a huge snowman yesterday, his name is Frosty.

Merry Christmas!
Love,
Santa Claus

Dear Santa Claus,

My name is Jacquelene. I hope you have a Happy Christmas.I have alittle brother and an older brother, used to have a hamster. My favorite thing is to play with my little brother. He is two. I like to play soccer.

I have a lot of friends. My best friend is Jessica. My other friends are Jennifer, Elana, Jessie, Emily and Lja.

Love,
Jacquelene Kahn

Dear Jacquelene,

Today I was just finishing up on all the toys my elves and I are building. All my elves are happily at work to make this the best Christmas ever.

Guess what! Rudolph is now three thousand years old. It's his birthday today. We are celebrating it with a one hundred foot cake. All this cake hopefully will make Rudolph's nose brighter than ever.

By the way, how are Eli and Curtis? I hope you've been nice to them lately. Speaking of family, Mrs. Claus is helping to deliver the gifts to all you delightful kids.

I hope you have the best Christmas ever. Your friend, ho, ho, ho!

Love,
Santa Claus

Meredith O'Haye places an ornament on the tree at the Community Center. (Alan Chapman)

Dear Santa,

My name is Robin Cunningham and I especially like to play with my yellow mats. My dad made them out of a rug mat.

I play at Jody's house a lot and my best friend there is named B.J. Sometimes I play with my stuffed animals. I like to pat my dog named Rosy.

On Christmas I like to help decorate the tree and I like to put the star on the tippety top.

I like to play castle on my swingset and go sledding in the snow. In the summer I love to dig at the beach and go in the water. When I think of Christmas I think of little ornaments and red little men hanging on the tree.

Last year we left carrots out on my back porch for your reindeer and some cookies for your reindeer to.

Merry Christmas
From Robin

P.S. The cookies and milk that are inside are for you santa. The carrots & cookies outside are for the reindeers.

Dear Robin,

Merry Christmas! My reindeer team thank you for the carrots and cookies last year. How did you know those cookies were their favorites? I like to sled, too, and there are a lot of big hills up here to sled on. The elves are busy making toys in their workshops, and Frosty the Snowman has been a real help this year. In fact, we have so many toys for the good little girls and boys, that I had to get a bigger sack to put them in.

Rudolph and his friends are well, and they have come up with new reindeer games. They love to have running races, ice skate, ski, fly, and sled. The reindeer like to make things out of snow, too. Mrs. Claus has made some new cookies called chocolate peanut butter chip. They are really yummy!

I hope it's a good, clear night on Christmas, but we always have Rudolph to help guide the way. Well, I have to go now. Be good.

Love,
Santa Claus

Dear Santa,

My name is Melissa Joan Pyfrom. My sister's name is Jessica and my brother's name is Colin. I have a bunny and his name is Benjamin. I like to feed him.

I like to swim but the water is cold — freezing.

I hope you have a nice Christmas. I wish I could ride in your sleigh. I like sitting on your lap. Thank you for the lollipop. Were the grape lollipops all gone already?

We won't forget to leave cookies and milk and carrots for you and your reindeer. I hope your reindeer will share the carrots.

xoxo from Melissa Pyfrom
Melissa Pyfrom

December, 1987

Dear Melissa,

I like your picture of the gifts, the house, the big snowman and the beautiful Christmas tree. Swimming would be fun in the North Pole, but the water is ice.

The elves are very busy making toys and are nearly done. They can't wait for Christmas. The reindeer are getting ready for their long flight and can't wait for the big day.

Melissa, I hope you, Jessica and Colin have a nice Christmas.

Thanks for the cookies and milk, and I'll be sure to give my nine reindeer the carrots.

Love,
Santa

P.S. You're welcome for the lollipop, but I'm out of grape.

Christmas 1987

Dear Santa

My name is Ethan. I have dark brown hair and I'm five years old — a little bit big, but not that big. I have a sister named Rachel and a brother named Jeremy. They like to play "He-Man and "She-ra". My sister Charlotte likes to listen to tapes.

My house is white with black shutters. You can slide down my chimney at Christmas or come through the door. There will be cookies and milk and carrots for the reindeer.

I like to play with my G.I. Joe. My friend Liam and I like to run and fall down. My friends and I like to play on the monkey bars.

A cat, a dog and a bird live at my house. We had some insects, but we let them go.

Good-bye Santa, for now.
"Like",
Ethan

Kindergarten letters to Santa

Dear Ethan,

This is Santa! Burrr! it is getting very cold up here. It is so cold that Samanta (my sister) has caught a cold. So this year I'm going to have to check the list to see who's been good or bad.

This year's going to be the busiest year of them all, making the gifts, getting the lists checked, and getting the reindeer and sleigh ready and set to go.

Rudolph says "Happy Christmas." Rudolph's nose has been shining brighter than ever. We don't know why this happened; it just got brighter, all in about one minute. This is the weirdest thing I have ever seen in my life.

Well, I have to go now because we're having dinner soon. So just remember clean your room, and be good to your family and friends and you will have a happy Christmas.

Happy Christmas
Love,
Santa

Dear Santa.

My name is Caitlin Donovan. I have tons of brothers Please, can you bring me some girl things? I wish I could kiss your beard. I love you. I like to play with all my dolls. I like to draw in my house. I am my daddy's princess. I like to play with my brother Gregory. I like to play in school. I have a little baby brother and his name is Markie. Sometimes Brian and Adam are nice to me.

Santa, I hope you have a nice Christmas!!

Love,
Caitlin D.

Dear Caitlin,

Thank you for your letter. Ho! Ho! Ho! How are you? How are mummy, daddy, Bobby, and Malcolm? I hope they are doing fine.

It has been very busy up here at the North Pole because it's getting close to Christmas time. The elves, Frosty, Rudolph, Mrs. Claus and I just had a winter carnival with rides, ice skating sledding, snow castles and a reindeer flying contest. It was terrific fun! At the carnival Blitzen, Dasher, Dancer and Rudolph were in the big race. Now, Blitzen is the biggest, strongest reindeer in all of the North Pole so everyone thought he would win. But that isn't what happened at all. All through the race Blitzen was in the lead but as the racers rounded the corner, Rudolph was pulling ahead! Blitzen saw this and flew with all of his strength, passing Rudolph. Blitzen was going so fast! As the reindeer reached the finish line, Rudolph, again was in the lead. Rudolph won the race! It was a wonderful day!

Well, Caitlin it seems to be snowing again; I'd better go put the reindeer inside. Have a very, very, very Merry Christmas!

Love,
Santa Claus

Second Congregational church

Minister: Gary A. Ritts, Secretary: Muriel Wheelwright, Office Phone: 383-0345; Parsonage Phone: 383-1422; Office Hours: Monday through Friday, 9 - noon.

THERE WE WENT A-CAROLING. Seventeen enthusiastic voices drew together for our all-church outing last Sunday (12/13) afternoon. Hopefully, the nursing home residents and shut-ins received as much Christmas spirit as we did singing for them! Many thanks to John, Linda, Mac and Katie Campbell; David, Barbara, Breezie and Jason Crossman; Karen Ford; Jim, Barbara, and Heather Lyons; Bob, Andrea and Andrew MacNeill; Gary and Alli Ritts. "Let's do this again!"

CHURCH SCHOOL: Children, you did such an outstanding job on the pageant. We are all so proud of you!

I'd like everyone to know that the adorable animal costumes were made by Linda Campbell, Debbie Anderson, Joan Pyfrom and Judy Ritts . . . and all on very short notice! Sue Cameron, Lillian Ketchum, Peter Guild and the Jenkins's also deserve a big thank you as do the Sunday School teachers and mothers, all of whom were so helpful.

There will be no Sunday School this week. Let's all remember to bring an unwrapped gift for a needy child (up to age 12) to church.

CHRISTMAS CARE PACKAGE MAILED TO WEST VIRGINIA, included 17 gifts and 3 dozen cookies. Most sincere thanks to the wonderful group of teenagers we have in this church! "Light their way when the darkness surrounds them!"

CHRISTMAS WEEK: Thursday, Dec. 24, 7 p.m., Candlelight Service - with special music and individual candlelighting. Followed by a "live" nativity; 11 p.m. Watchnight Service - beginning with special music & carol singing, then 11:30 p.m. Order of worship concluding with communion services at midnight. Friday, Dec. 25, MERRY CHRISTMAS! Sunday, Dec. 27, 10 p.m. Worship - Children in Church.

Please note: anyone needing a ride to a worship service, please call the Ketchum:s (383-6434) the Bates' (383-1129) or the church office (383-0345).

Beechwood Congregational

The Beechwood Congregational Church invites everyone to worship Sunday mornings at 10:45 a.m. The pastor is Stephen S. J. Hall. Adult child care is provided downstairs following the childrens' sermon.

There will be no Sunday School Dec. 27 and Jan. 3. The children invite their parents to come with them to church. Sunday School resumes Jan. 10 at 9:30.

The annual Candle Lighting Service was held Sunday evening with the children of the Sunday School depicting the miracle of the birth of Christ. A superb job by all involved.

Wed. Dec. 23 the entire congregation is invited to go caroling to shut-ins and then return to the church for hot chocolate and cookies. Be at the church at 6:30 p.m.

Thursday morning, church members and friends will go to the Cardigan Nursing Home at 10:30 a.m. for a carol sing. Let's all show up and share the joy of the season.

We would like to wish you a Happy holiday season!

PARISHIONERS GO CAROLING

Wednesday, Dec. 23, parishioners will meet at the Bartow Room to go caroling at 6:30 p.m. As always, we will serenade parishioners, stroll through 60 Elm Street singing carols, and visit nursing homes. Adults and children are welcome. We will finish up with a party in the Bartow Room, beautifully decorated for the season. Don't miss this evening which captures in a special way the joy of the season.

CHRISTMAS SERVICES

There will be two services on Christmas Eve, Thursday, December 24. The first will be a family service at 5 p.m. The children's choir will sing at this Eucharist. There will be a blessing of the creche and a children's homily on the Christmas story.

The second service is our festal Eucharist at 11 p.m. A carillon recital of Christmas music will precede the service. Our worship will be enhanced with special music by the St. Stephen's Choir.

On Christmas Day there will be a service of Holy Eucharist at 10 a.m. in the chapel.

claiming the Christmas story will be read and Christmas carols sung. The Eucharist will include some of our most beautiful hymns. Also at this service we will include the prayer for St. Stephen's Day and take up the church school's Advent Offering to support the church's adopted orphan, Afera Kiros in Ethiopia. There will be no church school this day.

St. Stephen was one of the church's first deacons, ministers ordained to serve. It is appropriate that on this day our church school make an offering to serve another child in a different part of the world.

YOUTH MINISTRY PLANNING BEGUN

Sam Pease of our parish has taken the initiative to call all the churches of the town together to look at the opportunity for an ecumenical youth ministry. The response has been enthusiastic with two committees formed, one to study the need and the other to organize a project which can bring all our churches' young people together. Pam Earle is secretary to the group.

At the same time we are organizing a youth ministry at St. Stephen's. If you would like to help this important work, please contact Sam, or Pam, or the Rector.

CONFIRMATION CLASS TO BEGIN

A Confirmation Class for young people, Junior High age or older, will begin on Sunday, Jan. 10 at 4 p.m. This class will study the essentials of the Christian faith and prepare young people, should they wish, for confirmation when Bishop Johnson comes on Sunday, Feb. 28.

Confirmation involves a public expression of faith and reaffirmation of baptismal promises. The bishop lays his hands upon those to be confirmed and prays that they be strengthened in the Spirit.

If you are interested in this class, please call the office (383-1083).

Obituary

Edward P. Barrow

A funeral Mass was celebrated Dec. 21 in St. Anthony's Church for Edward P. Barrow, 58, a senior Cohasset firefighter who died Dec. 18 at the South Shore Hospital. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

Mr. Barrow was educated in the Cohasset school system and later attended Weymouth Trade School. He specialized in mechanics at that school.

He was a firefighter in Cohasset for the past 20 years, and was a part-time mechanic and former owner of Barrow Marine Co.

A Navy veteran of World War II, he was active in many community services.

He leaves his brother, Richard P. Barrow, a Cohasset police officer, and Robert E. Barrow, both of Cohasset; and a sister, Jean M. Salvador of Cohasset. He was the brother of the late Helen Louise Barrow.

Memorial donations may be made to the Joslin Diabetes Center, 1 Joslin Place, Boston, 02103.

Holiday bird count

Enjoy the holiday season! Visit South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell and take a leisurely walk in the woods, visit the museum store, view the exhibits and browse through the Vinal Library.

BIRD COUNT FOR KIDS

Children 7 years and older are invited to join naturalist Trygve Swift on Wednesday, Dec. 30 from 9 to 11 a.m. for the Natural Science Center's First Annual Bird Count for kids only! Explore the woods, fields and pond areas in a search for birds. We'll list all of the birds we see and keep a record of our sightings to compare to future counts. Pre-paid registration required (members/$3; non-members/$4). Call 659-2559 for information.

South Shore Natural Science Center is on Jacobs Lane, Norwell, just off Route 123 and less than a mile from the Hanover/Rte. 3 interchange (Exit 13). The Center is open Mondays through Saturdays from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Sundays and most holidays from 1 to 4 p.m. Closed New Year's Day. Trails, exhibits, store and library. Free admission.

American sign language course

Norwell Recreation is offering a 10-week course in American sign language on Tuesday, 7 to 9 p.m., Jan. 5 to March 15, at the Norwell Town Offices cafeteria (lower level).

Participants will be instructed by Diane Squires, an instructor with South Shore Collaborative. Learn fundamentals of grammar and signs for communication with deaf people. The fee of $45 may be mailed to Norwell Recreation, P.O. Box 295, Norwell, 02061 by Dec. 29.

Watercolor in Montserrat

Paint the island of Montserrat in watercolors. Join watercolorist and teacher Virginia Avery for an eight day excursion to this unspoiled Caribbean Island first discovered in 1493 by Christopher.

Avery's annual winter watercolor workshops, sponsored by the South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset, have taken students to exotic places in the Caribbean.

This winter the group will journey to Montserrat March 13 through March 20 for eight days of painting, touring, basking in the sun, swimming in the surf and dining on native foods. The tour cost of $1,335 includes round trip airfare, 7 nights double occupancy in the Vue Pointe Hotel in Old Towne, daily breakfast and dinner, nightly entertainment, daily art lessons, gratuities, round trip transfers and a donation to the Center.

Avery selected this island because of its unspoiled charm and diverse landscape. The island itself bears a striking resemblence to Ireland and many of the present day inhabitants are Irish. And there will be much to paint — mountains, volcanic sand beaches, hot springs, waterfalls, old sugar plantations, beautiful gardens and more.

Artists, non-artists and spouses are all welcome to join Avery's winter watercolor workshop on location in Montserrat. Bring your paints, your canvases, your artistic ability — no matter what level from non-existent to advanced, your suntan lotion and your summer clothes and join Avery on an adventure to the island of Montserrat.

For detailed information call Millbrook Travel.

Pack 38 Cub Scouts

Pack 38 would like to thank all the Scouts who participated in the CHRISTMAS FAIR. Everyone appreciated those who baked, made goodies, and made different things to sell. It was a very good effort for all the den leaders and helpers during the busy season.

Speaking of donations . . . The Cubs traditionally make or create a decoration for the Christmas Tree. As Christmas is a time for giving, our lovely decorated tree will be donated to the Ripley Road Nursing Home. If you get a chance you could go and visit the ladies there and wish them a very Happy Holiday. I'm sure they would love to see you!

DATES TO REMEMBER

Dec. 28 Mon. Rollerskating at Skatetown USA in Whitman on Rt. 14, cost is $3 per person, time 7-9 p.m. Must pre register and pre pay by 12/15/87 Old Colony Council, 2438 Washington St., Canton, MA, 828-8360.

ADRIAN'S JEWELRY SHOP

Locally owned and operated by Adrian Del Rosso for over 24 years

In every community there is one store we can depend on all year round for any number of occasions. We speak, of course, of the jeweler and the firm he represents. Christmas, birthdays, engagements, weddings and anniversaries are just a few of the times in your life when you want to give something special to someone you care for.

There can be no doubt the people to see for these occasions are Adrian's Jewelry Shop, located at 140 Pleasant Street in South Weymouth. Phone 335-2671. Their inventory of gold earrings, bracelets, necklaces and charms is endless. The selection of men's and women's engagement and wedding rings is exquisite. Diamond, emerald, ruby, pearl and onyx are a few of the stones found in a variety of settings.

They also have a complete line of Sterling Silver Jewelry. Watches in famous brand names such as SEIKO and LONGINES are available in a price range for almost everyone. A complete selection of cameo's, Cleopatra necklace, scrimshaw can also be found in their fine store. Adrian designs, repairs fine jewelry, as well, watches and clock repairs.

Mastercard, Visa and American Express are excepted. Gift Certificates are available plus a convenient layaway plan with only 10% down.

The only thing you have to know about Jewelry is Adrian's. Come in and sign up for their $500 shopping spree. Drawing will be held Dec. 24th and announced on WJDA. Open Sundays. Refreshments served Sundays only - Mon. thru Sat., 9-9, Sunday 12-6.

Artisan continues life's work without big-city pressure

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Tired of the rat race in Manhattan, Cliff Roberts returned to the South Shore last summer. He longed for the slower pace of the suburbs, and found Cohasset to be that perfect place "of land and sea."

Roberts, a trained artisan and weaver, opened up a small shop along Rte. 3A last summer. Weave Inc., located at 808 Chief Justice Cushing Highway, is Roberts' effort to continue his life's work, but without the pressure pace and strain of working and competing in the big city.

Weave Inc. is a small, comfortable shop along busy Rte. 3A. Fluffy, luxurious sweaters, blankets, throws, and scarves are creatively displayed in two rooms. Some hang from wooden dowels strung along the room, others are attractively thrown atop a comfortable stuffed chair or a wooden chest.

And this is no ordinary knitting shop. Along with the one-of-a-kind handknit items, the finest materials are sold here. They include exotic precious yarns such as mohair, cashmere, camel hair and silk. "they are above and beyond your typical wools and cottons," he explained.

The secret to his success, is that Roberts, a textile designer for the international furniture industry, buys his materials in bulk. "I buy big, so I can sell it by the ounce and the prices are therefore much more affordable," he said. His travels as a furniture consultant allow him time and the contacts to buy the exact colors he wants, and the amounts he needs for his Cohasset shop.

"I travel around the world and I find these unusual yarns, particularly in the domestic mills. I use much of the yarn in my own work, and offer the surplus to my customers here," he added.

Weave Inc. includes a variety of high fashion sweaters, luscious throws, blankets and scarves, ruana shawls that would comfortably wrap around any appreciative body.

"It's as if we brought back the old world of artisans," he said, noting that most of the clothing in the shop is made by artist friends. "These are beautiful, handmade things here. You will find these no where else. They're all originals."

Roberts said he decided to locate his shop in Cohasset, purposely away from the malls. "I wanted to be near a metropolitan area, but I wanted to be near the land and the sea. I think Cohasset is perfect - it's really beautiful," he noted.

Although he took no art classes in high school, Roberts attended college to study interior design. As part of his curriculum, Roberts was required to take a textiles course, a subject he "took to like a duck to water."

He continued, "I also grew up in a household where my mother sewed and could make anything. And my aunt in Vermont also knew how to make everything. So it was sort of natural for me to follow along."

In early January, Roberts intends to use one entire room of his two-room shop as a space to complete his weaving and artwork. "I do major fiber art sculptures," he explained. "I have three or four major commissions that I have to get to in January."

Cliff Roberts of Weave, Inc. stands aside his loom inside his shop at 808 Chief Justice Cushing Highway. (Chris Edwards)

Roberts has exhibited his fiber artwork in Boston, and is a featured artist at the South Shore Art Center's current exhibit.

In addition to the art work, Roberts enjoys the challenge of his weaving. Customers will often bring in swatches of their new upholstry, and will ask the shop owner to create a special throw for their new furniture. "I can get a variety of colors by using different kinds of yarns," he said. "I can work on something that will go perfectly with the room, and that's fun. People now are very into whites and pastels, and we create a lot of fun fabrics and colors to go along with those shades."

The shop hours at Weave Inc. during the winter months will be 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Thursday through Saturday. But this shop is informal and as comfortable as the clothing that hangs from the displays.

"If I'm around during the off-hours at the shop, working on my looms in the back room, anyone is invited to come right in. The shop really won't be closed as long as I'm here working," he said.

In fact, if Roberts ever finds room for his seven looms, he will begin seminars and classes at his shop for interested weavers and craftspeople. "It will be a sort of work-study program," he thought aloud. "People will learn while they work."

How we weathered 1987

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

It was a year of new beginnings, and endings. It was a year shared by promise and sorrow, as each day brought new challenges and confrontations. 1987 was a year we weathered well.

The Hollywood movie we awaited so anxiously did not live up to all our expectations, as the future so seldom does. The Witches of Eastwick showed others the spectacular beauty of our town. And for that, at least, we are grateful. Although many were disappointed with the content of the film, everyone agreed Cohasset never looked more beautiful.

This was the year when it was decided a Super Stop and Shop would become a part of this town's business district. And further down the road on Rte. 3A, we watched as the old familiar Winter Gardens sign was torn down as the neighborhood skating rink was replaced by a more profitable business. The rink, which was filled day and night by skaters young and old, was replaced within days by a boat yard.

This was the year when voters in Cohasset decided it was time to build a new addition to town hall, and that repairs to the police and fire station could wait no longer. The community center added a huge new wing to its building on North Main Street, while a new art center was constructed down on Ripley Road.

But voters put their foot down and closed their wallets tight when it came time to finance the athletic field improvement project. The cost of revamping Lillard Field and making adjustments to Milliken Field was too steep, and the article was narrowly defeated at the October special town meeting.

Certain issues remain unanswered today, as they had in 1986. Is the Greenbush rail line coming to Cohasset? Will we enter into a contract with SEMASS? And is the state going to punish Cohasset for its restrictive housing? These questions have lingered from year to year, with no resolution in sight.

This was the year that familiar faces left their familiar surroundings, including longtime Harbormaster Harry Ritter and South Shore Music Circus producer Ron Rawson. Our community suffered many personal losses this past year, including former school committee member Jack Langmaid.

But of all the news generated within our community in 1987, nothing dominated the headlines more than Cohasset Heights Ltd. The privately-owned commercial landfill was again embroiled in a bitter battle against town officials and residents. Although the dump was closed for at least a few days by the local board of health, it quickly reopened. And a permanent closure appears unlikely in the immediate future.

The following is a month-by-month account of the news and events that occurred in Cohasset during the past year.

January

The year began with a bang, as a coastal snow storm caused seas to swell and winds to rip through Cohasset and other South Shore towns. There was minimal damage to homes and residents, as most people refused to leave the safety of their homes. About a dozen people traveled to the temporary civil defense center at the high school, but no one stayed overnight. Comparisons to the 1978 blizzard faded as this storm passed quickly out to sea.

In that same month, the sewer commissioners decided to suspend longtime sewer treatment plant operator Manuel Salvador. They later terminated the position and hired a private consulting firm, York Water Consultants, to supervise the plant operations.

That month, selectmen defeated plans presented by the harbor study committee to construct a 72-boat finger-slip marina in Cohasset Harbor. A proposal to present the plans to the zoning board of appeals was quashed by selectmen's rejections.

February

In February, complaints about an annoying and potentially hazardous smell in the Cohasset Heights Ltd. - Rte 3A area were brought to the public's attention.

The state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE), and the local fire department took samples of the air during "smelly" episodes near the landfill, but a source has never been determined.

The local sewer commissioners received welcome news this month from DEQE. The state finally, after many years of meetings and appeals, approved a $2 million sewer plan for the town. But the glue that will bind this entire package together is an elusive agreement to use the Hull treatment facility. Unless and until that agreement is settled, the remaining portion of the sewer plan will remain in limbo.

Cohasset Heights landfill was in the news once again, as health board members insisted the liability insurance policy be presented by March 5. Although several residents, including water commissioner Ronald Goodwin, asked the board to close down the landfill until the policy was produced, health board members decided to implement the deadline, which was met by CHL attorneys.

The local Chamber of Commerce celebrated another successful year, and named Andrea Merill as the community's business leader of the year. A local realtor and manager of the Cohasset Consignment Shop, Merrill was the second recipient of the Forrest E. King Memorial Award.

March

The month began with a flurry of activity as plans for the Super Stop and Shop on Rte. 3A were approved by local officials and the company's attorney. Before the matter reached a Norfolk County

DEQE defends approval of CHL expansion permit

The board of health will appeal a recent decision by the state to expand Cohasset Heights Ltd., arguing that permission was granted only after political pressure was applied.

But a spokesman for the state Department of Environemtal Quality Engineering (DEQE) denied that charge, and said approval to expand the commercial landfill was given on the basis of technical information.

The attorney for Cohasset Heights Ltd. denied there was any "political motivation" on his part in seeking the landfill expansion.

Atty. Anton Moehrke, representing Cohasset Heights Ltd., said that approval of the landfill's expansion into two and a-half-acre area Four A was accompanied by a standard number of requirements set by the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE).

"The approval was granted by the state based on a number of engineering conditions set forth by DEQE," he explained. "In August, the DEQE had outlined a number of certain requirements, and as I recall they were all technically-based. One of things I recall was the kind of materials to be used and the type of liners to be used. Everything was engineering-based, but that is the jurisdiction of the DEQE."

Opposing attorney Michael Leon, representing the local health board, is in the midst of preparing a legal appeal of the decision. "We fail to see how or why the DEQE approved this expansion," he explained. "I think very clearly it was through political efforts employed by CHL, through their political connections and contacts, that they applied pressure to the DEQE. It's been indicated in conversations with DEQE employees that pressure was applied."

Atty. Leon refused to name the political connection or contacts used by CHL to gain the permit approval.

Atty. Leon said the Dec. 22 expansion permit approval was a "significant reversal" of the department's initial statements made to the health board last summer regarding the expansion application by CHL.

A spokesman for the DEQE, Myles Brown, said there is "absolutely no truth" to the charges of political manipulation. He explained that in the department's original correspondence last summer, the DEQE erroneously included a number of engineering specifications not required under the solid waste act. A rebuttal of the correspondence by Atty. Moerhke noted the discrepancies, he said, and the corrections were made.

"There was no political discussion of the expansion application at all," Brown emphasized. "Approval of the application was made on the basis of facts at the landfill. That is the jurisdiction we have."

The spokesman said deputy commissioner Thomas McLaughlin did referr the matter to the regional DEQE office, stating "we can't sit on the zoning issue." McLaughlin was referring to the current dispute between the landfill and the Cohasset Zoning Board of Appeals

A dream home come true for the Sweeneys

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

For Walter and Nancy Sweeney, it was a "dream come true."

They recently learned that after battling town officials for five years, they have been granted permission to rebuild their home on Bow Street.

An amended septic system plan was submitted this month and approval was given by the board of health. A total of 13 variances were necessary before the stamp of approval was granted.

The Sweeneys, who are now residing in San Diego, Calif., plan to begin construction of the septic system in the spring. "I'm not sure when we will move back," Sweeney said this week from his home in San Diego. "But we will eventually be returning to Cohasset."

Sweeney, a native of Cohasset, said he and his wife were "ecstatic" when they heard the news from their attorney, Charles Corkin.

He estimated that with engineering costs and legal fees, this septic system will have cost him about $65,000.

The home in which Sweeney and his brothers were raised was destroyed by a fire in 1972. At the time, Sweeney was a professional football player for the San Diego Chargers. Because he requested permission to rebuild the system more than three years later, Sweeney first had to apply for a manifest injustice from the health board. That was granted, and then he applied for variances to rebuild the system within a non-comforming lot.

The original Sweeney homestead contained four bedrooms and two bathrooms. Although Sweeney proposed a smaller home with two bedrooms and one bathroom, the board originally denied three of the thirteen variances necessary to rebuild the septic system.

And in September, 1986, the deputy commissioner of the state department of Quality Engineering (DEQE) interceded in the Sweeneys' behalf. Thomas McLaughlin toured the lot at 21 Bow Street and reviewed plans prepared by Perkins Engineering. He attended a meeting of the local health board at which he stated, "There is no reason why a septic system cannot be built there."

The health board in June, 1986 rejected the engineering plans for a retaining wall. At that time, board members concluded the wall did not afford adequate environmental protection "in lieu of slope requirements" set forth under the state Title 5 public health code.

The board rejected a second variance and stated there must be at least a four-foot depth of naturally-occurring pervious soil to meet the same state code requirements. And the third denial stated that a 75-foot setback from coastal wetlands to the septic system is required by the town. The Sweeneys originally-proposed system was within 50 feet of the wetlands.

The Sweeneys, through Atty. Corkin, requested the hearing be reopened Dec. 7. The health board approved the request and reviewed the new plans.

Cohasset's week . . .

Election papers deadline

Nomination papers for the Town Election on April 9, 1988, will be available at the Town Clerk's Office starting Jan. 8, 1988.

Last day for candidates to obtain nomination papers will be Thursday Feb. 25, 1988 until 5 p.m.

All nomination papers shall be submitted to the registrars of voters for certification of names and address on or before Monday, Feb. 29, 1988 until 5 p.m. at the Town Clerk's Office.

Positions that will be available for nomination are as follows:

Selectmen — One position for three (3) years;

Assessor — One position for three (3) years;

School Committee — Two positions for three (3) years each;

Trustees of Paul Pratt Memorial Library — Three positions for three (3) years each;

Board of Health — One position for three (3) years;

Planning Board — One position for five (5) years;

Water Commissioners — One position for three (3) years;

Sewer Commissioners — One position for three (3) years;

Recreation Commission — One position for five (5) years.

At least fifty (50) signatures needed to have name placed on ballot.

Housing plans

The housing authority will be meeting with selectmen Jan. 12 to formulate plans for affordable housing in Cohasset.

The meeting, which will be held at 60 Elm St., will include a discussion about the possible use of the 53-acre George Curtis estate for low and moderate income housing. Joseph McElroy, a neighbor of the Curtis estate, will attend the meeting to discuss his concerns about the proposed private development of the vacant property.

Although the property trustees have not yet filed a petition to sell the property with the probate court, there is an agreement to sell the land and four structures to a private developer. In the meantime, according to Executive Secretary Donald Andrew, selectmen will pursue a possible use of the property by the town.

Hold those trees

Jan. 9 is the day all residents should bring their Christmas trees to the Cedar Street landfill for disposal.

The state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) issued a $3,600 fine against the municipal landfill last week, and listed several conditions for its continued operation. One of those conditions states the dump can not accept brush unless it is chipped.

The Tree and Park Dept. chipper will be stationed at the town landfill from 7:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Jan. 9. During those hours only, trees will be accepted for disposal. No trees will be accepted into the landfill prior to that date.

Building trends

An increase in the cost of a minumum building lot as well as installations of hot tubs are two of the trends spotted by building inspector Donald Robbins during 1987.

The cost of a no-frills lot in the West End of town has risen to a base of $100,000 and can go as high as $400,000 on the "right" parts of Jerusalem Road, Robbins said in an interview.

Meanwhile, hot tubs and greenhouses have replaced passive solar hot water heaters as the "in" additions to one's home."Once the tax credits [ended], there went the incentive to buy" the sun-powered apparatus, said Robbins.

During the year, he issued over 400 permits for approximately $110 million dollars worth of work, mostly additions to existing structures. The only major commercial structure permitted this year is the Super Stop and Shop on Route 3A, scheduled to open in the middle of January. Only 13 permits for single-family homes were issued during the same time.

There were no major subdivisions such as the approximately 40-acre Wheeling Farm development of 1986.

Another trend that Robbins has noticed is that more homeowners are constructing their home additions themselves.

Also, as the number of prime lots dwindles, he sees more and more applications to build homes on marginal land. These areas are so called because ledge, proximity to wetlands, uneven contours, steep slope or shape make them almost unbuildable.

Committee backs SEMASS contract

The Disposal Area Study Committee will stand by its recommendation of three weeks ago that the selectmen sign a 15-year contract for disposal of the town's trash at the waste-to-energy incinerator run by the SEMASS Partnerhsip.

However, the committee will urge the town fathers not to sign the contract until the January 31 deadline set by SEMASS so the panel can determine whether it would be less expensive to send Cohasset's trash to a Maine facility instead.

At its Monday night meeting, the committee decided it would need to confirm that the Penobscot Energy Recovery corporation would offer the town a "tipping" or dumping fee of $22.50 per ton of trash at its Orrington, Maine waste-to-power plant. The plant is scheduled to begin operation this summer, according to committee member Jeffrey Power, who showed the panel a sample contract.

The SEMASS plant, on the other hand, could not accept Hingham's trash until the spring of 1992, by which time a planned expansion will have been finished. The lowest rate SEMASS is offering, through a 15-year contract, is $49.50 per ton, rising with inflation.

A committee member has suggested sending trash to the Orrington plant, including transportation, would cost between $92 and $95 dollars per ton versus a minimum of $135 dollars per ton at SEMASS.

Power suggested the town sign a letter of intent with Penobscot Energy in order to obtain the latest rate, but admitted company officials in New Jersey still had not confirmed that the rate was still available.

Power has been negotiating with the company since March of this year.

"Sounds like a hedge to me...I'm getting nervous about this," committee chairperson Priscilla S. Tebbetts said.

Committee member and management consultant Donald L. DeMichele questioned a quote Power obtained from a trucker of $600 to take one trailer load of trash from Cohasset to Orrington, calling it "low."

The trucker hauls pine bark from the Orrington area several times a week, according to Power, and would like a load for the trip back to Maine. Another bark hauler had quoted Power a price of $1.50 per mile or $420 for the 280-mile one-way trip to Orrington.

DeMichelle warned that if a back-haul deal could not be obtained, as round trip hauling is known, then the town might have to pay between $1,000 and $1,200 per load.

He also suggested that choosing the Orrington plant over SEMASS could necessitate that the approximately $600,000 transfer station to be built would have to be designed around a particular hauler's trailers.

Animal control budget

A Parker Street woman, who related an incident which occurred Dec. 10 on Government Island, informed selectmen the animal control officer does not have the proper rescue equipment.

In response, Executive Secretary Donald Andrew explained that the officer's proposed fiscal 1989 budget will contain enough money to properly equip the department. "I have been assured by the animal control officer that he is asking for everything he needs to properly carry out his duties so that such an occurance as you reported will not happen again," Andrew stated in reply.

Constance Parker of Parker Avenue reported that a cat was caught in an animal trap Dec. 10 in the creek between Government Island and Parker Avenue. Although the animal control officer responded promptly, he was unable to retrieve the animal until he received the necessary rescue tool from Hingham. "I understand that this pole which costs in the vacinity of $100 has been previously requested and denied to the Dog Officer. How do you expect this man to do an efficient job without a most necessary tool of his job?" Parker asked in her letter to selectmen.

James McGonigle of Norwell, a performer in The Witches, also participated in the benefit premiere sponsored by the local Chamber.

(Continued from page 1) Superior Courtroom, attorneys for the town and the developer reached an agreement, which paved the way for construction to begin at the corner of Rte. 3A and Sohier Street.

Although it was originally intended to be a 24-hour operation, town meeting in April passed an ordinance prohibiting any round-the-clock businesses.

Early that month, the owner of the Winter Gardens skating rink surrendered a losing battle against the dollar, and sold the property. The high increase in liability insurance forced James Hoban to sell the rink he bought in 1985. The rink was quickly converted into a yacht yard by new owner Richard Garvey of Scituate.

Members of the local ISIA skating club, the Silver Blades, and the Seahawks youth hockey organization have worked together for months, attempting to find a location for a new neighborhood skating rink, and the financial resources to do it.

Both the boys' and the girls' basketball teams were successful this season. And although they had promising playoff games, they lost before making it to the finals. The girls' team lost at the skillful hands of Coyle-Cassidy High School, while the boys' lost in double-overtime to Hopkinton.

Once again, the health board issued an ultimatum to Cohasset Heights Ltd. They wanted to see an actual copy of the insurance policy by March 16, or the dump would be closed. This vote was taken after the landfill's attorneys presented a certificate of the insurance just minutes prior to their March 5 deadline.

Once again, the requirement was met, just minutes before the deadline. A shutdown of the commercial landfill was postponed several times this month, until a full public hearing which was scheduled in April. Many residents, including members of Greenpeace, angrily voiced their concerns to the health board, and repeatedly called for a complete shutdown of the facility.

At a March 30 public hearing, the board came within one vote of shutting down the landfill. They rescheduled the public hearing to April 13.

In the meantime, the high school chorus was preparing for an honored invitation they received to perform at Disney World's Epcot Center.

April

At the annual town meeting, voters overwhelmingly approved plans to construct a $1.1 million addition to town hall. And although they were warned of skyrocketing costs for capital projects, and their effect on the town's tax rate, voters also approved $16,000 in engineering costs to begin definitive plans on the Milliken Field project.

Plans to renovate the police and fire station were postponed until an October special town meeting, and once again, approval of the amended Ward sewer plan were delayed until an agreement was reached between the town and Hull officials.

Tensions between the health board, residents and Cohasset Heights Ltd. continued this month as tests of nearby swamps in the Trustees of Reservation land were ordered by the board.

And in local elections, Martha Gjesteby and Burt Pratt were elected to the board of selectmen. They had

Sweeney's home approved

Health Agent Joseph Godzik said this week the amended plan submitted earlier this month by the Sweeneys met state code requirements. The plan has been forwarded to the DEQE for review. The state has until Jan. 10 to reject the plans. "If we don't hear from them after that, we'll assume everything was approved by the state and the Sweeneys can go forward with their plans," he said.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson explained that variances are granted on the basis of hardship to the applicant, and that the engineering solutions provide the same environmental protection as a standard septic system. "The problem previously had been that the board was not satisfied with the technically-designed system," he explained. "The technical aspects of the system were redesigned to meet the state requirements, and the plans were therefore approved."

Since that time, Walter and Nancy Sweeney left Cohasset. In November, 1986, Sweeney, a former professional football player in San Diego and Washington, moved back to the West Coast. He accepted a position in marketing and community relations with the chemical abuse branch of the Sharp Cabrillo Hospital. He is also a consultant for Mediplex in Wellesley, and plans to return to this area for a brief visit Jan. 9.

Sweeney has been a visible and prominent member of Governor Michael Dukakis' Alliance Against Drugs. For the past several years, he has traveled to 30 Massachusetts schools, talking to students about his personal fight against drug abuse. It was his drug addiction in the 1960's and early 70's that caused Sweeney's early retirement from professional football.

In the past several years, Sweeney, who is currently living on a boat in San Diego, estimated he has spent about $65,000 on the plans for a residential septic system for his former Bow Street home. He left Cohasset angrily last year, and vowed to fight the health board's rejections of his plans in court. He declared last year he would retain Atty. Corkin and file suit against the local health board "for depriving me of my constitutional right to live on my native soil."

Septic system troubles

The Koko Island Restaurant will have to completely redesign its septic system, according to Health Agent Joseph R. Godzik, in light of two serious sanitary code violations at the King Street site.

An inspection by Godzik and Board of Health member William E. Baird on December 8 revealed that effluent from the restaurant "is being carried by groundwater from the leaching area into catch basins at the northwest side of the parking lot," according to the violation notice Godzik sent to the restaurant.

It was also determined that groundwater on site is less than four feet below the bottom of the leaching field, a health code violation.

Godzik said there is no danger of drinking water contamination, as there are no private wells near enough to Koko Island to be effected.

The health agent recommends that either the water table on the property be lowered by means of interceptor drains, that a larger septic tank be installed or that the existing leaching area be replaced.

Restaurant owner William Lee said as of Monday he had not read the notice and did not offer any comment on it, except to say the system was no longer backed up.

Godzik said he has had no complaints about the restaurant's waste disposal since his citation of the establishment.

In a related matter, Godzik discovered raw sewage on the Cushing Plaza parking lot during the evenings of December 8, 9 and 10, according to an abatement order he issued on the 11th. The discharges occurred in front of the Beechwood Medical Center and Godzik saw other discharges in front of Mr. Donut on the nights of the 9 and 10.

The Banker Company of Cambridge, which manages the Plaza, has contracted with Michael Spirito of Hingham to keep the septic tanks there from overflowing and is awaiting a report from an engineering firm on the problem, according to property manager Chris Kuklinski.

A Beeechwood Medical Center employee told the Mariner that there has been a noticeable smell of sewerage around the building for several months.

Spirito said in an interview that buried stumps and old telephone poles beneath the plaza's parking lot are much to blame for the property's poor drainage.

Under current building regulations, tree stumps are considered hazardous waste and cannot be buried underneath a building site.

Both Lee and the Banker Company have a month's time in which to present engineering plans to correct their septic problems, said Godzik.

plenty of competition from four other candidates. Nancy Sandell was named to the school committee. It was an easy election for this first-time candidate who had no opposition in the campaign. Ted Guild won re-election to the sewer commission, despite competition from Lot W. Bates. All remaining incumbents also retained their seats on various boards and commissions in this unusually-active election.

Reports of the demise of the Greenbush commuter rail line were greatly exaggerated this month. Sen. William Golden vowed to continue to fight for the restoration project, despite earlier reports that the Greenbush line was last in line for federal financing.

Also this month, the local health board issued an order requiring all trash to be disposed of in bags at the town's landfill. Turning their attention to the town's dump, health board members concluded that less litter in the surrounding neighborhood will result if the refuse is contained in plastic bags.

May

There was little reprieve in the battle between the town and Cohasset Heights Ltd. as another public meeting ended in controversy and conflict. At their May public hearing, the health board heard proposals by the landfill engineers to collect on-site leachate. Before the meeting concluded, however, a Drano and orange juice demonstration by dump-protester Brian Lipsett caused a walk-out by landfill owners, engineers and attorneys.

A special town meeting, tentatively scheduled for June 23, was postponed by selectmen. The primary proposal before the special town meeting will be approval to sign a contract with SEMASS, but as of May, it appeared the SEMASS contract deadline would be extended. Several weeks later, selectmen decided to move the special town meeting date to October.

Mark Lavange, and Michael and Nicholas Lelecas, were honored this month as Cohasset's newest Eagle Scouts. And in more good news, three essay contest winners were announced by the Cohasset Constitution Bicentennial Commission and the Col. Thomas Lothrop Chapter of the DAR. The top essay writer was Travis Coley of the eighth grade.

June

The state Executive Office of Communities and Development warned the town that if it does not start planning some low and moderate income housing, the state will begin to withhold discretionary state funds from Cohasset. In reaction to this warning the town's newly-formed Fair Housing Committee scheduled meetings with state officials.

Protesters were out in full force this summer as residents joined together and called for the shutdown of the commercial landfill off Rte. 3A.

The state attorney general's office approved an April town meeting edict which prohibited 24-hour commercial business operations in Cohasset. Because of this new bylaw, the new Super Stop and Shop, which had planned a round-the-clock business, will now be restricted to a 7 a.m. to 11 p.m. operation.

And after months of diligent phone calls and scheduling, the local Chamber of Commerce received permission from Hollywood to host a benefit premiere of The Witches of Eastwick. All proceeds from the event were to be given to the athletic field project.

One hundred and one graduates received their diplomas from Cohasset High School. Members of the class of 1987 were called "natural leaders" of the future by their teachers and administrators.

This month, health coordinator Michael Gill announced the introduction of AIDS education into the schools' curriculum. As part of his effort to educate the schoolchildren of Cohasset, Gill recruited residents for a citizens' advisory committee.

The Witches benefit was extremely successful for both the participants and the Chamber. Several thousand dollars were raised by the event, and more than 300 persons attended a four-course dinner at Hugo's, followed by a fun-filled viewing of Cohasset's scenery in Hollywood's rendition of the John Updike novel.

A widespread group of protesters stepped up their efforts to educate the public about the problems at Cohasset Heights Ltd. Placards and picket signs dotted Rte. 3A during heavy commuting hours, as residents demanded a complete shutdown of the commercial landfill.

And after years of fundraising, decision-making and the mounting headaches of major construction, the town could now boast of a new art center. The opening of the new Ripley Road facility coincided with the annual summer art festival. Although it appeared the water commission would put a damper on the opening of the center, they granted the facility a reprieve with a temporary permit allowing the water main to be left below a sewer line under the street.

And the town staved off a probable attack by the state EOCD by meeting with state officials to discuss the town's affordable housing dilemma. At a meeting between town and state officials June 22, everyone agreed to work harder and faster to implement a fair housing policy for the town. With some assistance from Sen. William Golden, the state agreed to back off from a June 15 deadline for the housing policy. It was agreed during the meeting that Cohasset officials would work to establish a plan to develop low and middle income housing.

July

Mary Klein, a native of Cohasset, returned home with a strong voice decrying the lack of affordable housing in her hometown. At several public meetings, she urged town officials not to go ahead with their plans to sell the Independence Building on Main Street, and has asked the courts to stop the sale.

Selectmen denied Klein's request to stop the sale, although the fair housing authority asked town officials to defer sale of town-owned property in the future. Selectmen continued to work, along with the planning board and the housing authority, to establish a fair housing policy for the town.

Deck Point Inc. proposed a 16-unit low and moderate income housing development off Rte. 3A. In preliminary discussions with selectmen this month, Deck Point officials said their plans include construction of a development containing 130 bedrooms, with 25 percent of the units designated for low income.

Through the courts, the town attempted to remove seven fishermen from the harbor. The move by town officials was temporary, according to town counsel, at least until they received moorings. The fishermen, more commonly known as roosters, dock their vessels at vacant moorings they do not own, as they become available. The defendants' attorney charged that the harbor is run in a discriminatory, unfair manner.

And in that same month, a local lobsterman, Herbert Jason, publicly acknowledged he is suing the town. According to Jason, the former harbormaster skipped over his grandson's name in the sequential mooring list, thus prohibiting his use of a new 36-foot lobster boat.

August

A 23 year-old Norwell resident by way of San Diego, Steven Osborne, was named harbormaster. He replaced longtime "monarch of Cohasset Harbor" Harry Ritter. The new harbormaster, a Navy veteran, quickly got down to business and checked the validity of every registered boat in the harbor, matching registrations with moorings.

The Cohasset Swim Team was on its way to a successful season, crushing its opponents on its way to a championship summer.

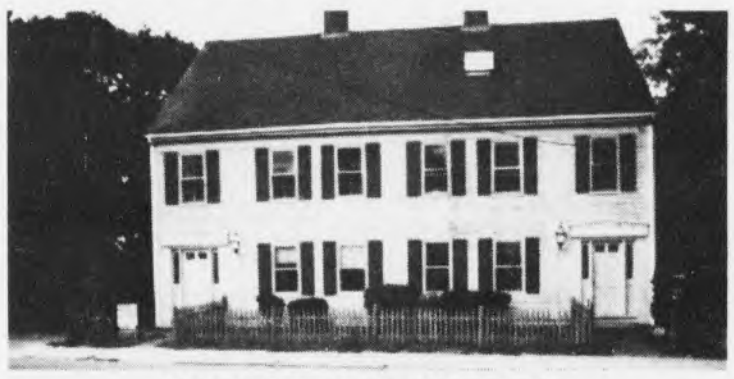
The town was saddened to learn that Ron Rawson, the producer of the South Shore Music Circus for the past 20 years, was retiring after this season. The New York City and Cohasset resident said it was simply the right time to leave - the time was right for a transfusion at the Music Circus.

During a school committee meeting this month, it was suggested that the school department swap a piece of school-owned property to a local developer in return for a generous donation to the high school scholarship fund. The deal was eventually frowned upon by town counsel.

Residents of King Street converged upon selectmen at their weekly meeting, and protested plans to install a traffic signal at the entrance of their street on Rte 3A.

Although they met frequently with selectmen in the next weeks, their plans to convert King Street into a one-way roadway were later defeated at special town meeting.

A new age of awakening of global civilzation took place under the guise of the Harmonic Convergence. Cohasset's observance of this cosmic event took place on Bassings Beach with about 20 resident present.



And a preliminary environmental report issued by the MBTA regarding the commuter rail line, concluded that the rail system would aid in the fight against air pollution and traffic, and would enhance the real estate value of homes near the station. The preliminary report also stated that rail service would create some noise, local traffic and parking problems and displace some businesses from Braintree to Scituate. A station parking lot proposed for Rte. 3A will abut a section of Great Swamp and pollutants from the lot could have a negative impact on water quality and downstream wetlands. The lot will be designed with an internal drainage system and catch basins to separate pollutants from runoff water.

The planning board voted this month not to sign a housing agreement previously approved by selectmen and the housing authority. The board members agreed too much power was being handed over to the state. "The planning board is for low income housing that is run by the town," chairman Robert Sturdy said in announcing their rejection of the document.

September

Selectmen were asked once again to consider Cohasset the Hollywood of the east coast, as representatives of NBC films asked permission to use town land as a backdrop to A Rockwell Christmas. Although selectmen were initially inclined to consider the request, a flurry of angry residents protested the proposed defoliation of town common trees. Film producers had indicated they would defoliate the trees to make the background more winter-like. The controversy was brief and unnecessary as the producers ultimately decided to make the film elsewhere.

A superior court justice ruled against the town and in favor of local fisherman William Figueiredo and his proposal to place floats in Bailey's Creek. The court justice reiterated a previous opinion by the state Department of Environmental Quaity Engineering (DEQE) which approved the moorings, despite the harbormaster's denial.

And the state finally made it official - denouncing Cohasset as unreasonably restrictive in its housing practices. The official reprimand by the Executive Office of Communities and Development (EOCD) made Cohasset ineligible to receive state discretionary grant money until the situation is improved to the state's satisfaction.

Town officials supported efforts by local firefighter William Sestito to remain in the department. The state Department of Personnel Administration's Medical Occupational Review Panel ruled Sestito could not be named to a permanent position because he has diabetes. Sestito, who is a certified EMT, appealed the verdict, won the appeal and has been named to a permanent position on the force.

The new year was ushered in with a huge wet nor'easter last January, which flooded coastal areas of town, including the West Corner.

Cohasset welcomed a new METCO director, Patricia Brown, to town. The new coordinator said she sees herself as a role meodel for the 48 METCO students who are participating in this 26th year of METCO in Cohasset.

Under cloudless skies, schoolchildren joined town officials and other residents in a fitting tribute to the nation's Constitution. For many months, the local Constitution Bicentennial Commission, under the chairmanship of David Wadsworth, worked diligently to prepare a significant observance of this event. It was an amazing sight to see small schoolchildren pay homage to the founding of American government. A park at the corner of Ripley Road next to the post office was dedicated Sept. 17 as Cohasset's Constitution Park.

The town's area disposal study committee learned this month that Cohasset is no longer eligible for a contract with SEMASS within their primary facility. Any contract signed with SEMASS will allow Cohasset

☐ Be sure to take a long look at the Community Center when you go by, it sure looks grand! The new addition looks like it has always been there, something that is hard to achieve! Hats off to all that were in on the planning of that, and we are lucky to have such a fine Center in our center!

☐ Hope all of you have heard about Ellen McAuliffe Morrissey's efforts to help the Childrens Hospital benefit auction. Ellen donated a Christmas tree, entitled Tally-Ho, which drew one of the bids there! Her work is beautiful!

☐ Congratulations go to Coach Ed Minnelli, whose team won last Friday Night. What made that memorable for Ed was the fact that it marked his 100th win as a CHS coach. He was presented with a game ball with the number 100 on it at the conclusion of the game, and it's safe to say that it will earn a special place in his home. Keep up the good work, coach.

☐ It was a sad day for Cohasset last week, with the death of Ed Barrows. Ed was a fine man, a good fireman, and a good friend. He will be missed, and thought of often.

☐ Congratulations to Jamus M. Driscoll, who made the Headmaster's List at Derby Academy. To achieve that honor, Jamus had to make an A- or better average! Caroline Arbury, Jonathan Foley, Eve Libery, Nicholas Manganaro, Andrew Pozatek, and Kristine Pozatek all made Second honors. They all achieved a B average or better. Fine work, ladies and gentlemen!

☐ Herb Crehan will be facing a line-up of former Red Sox greats when he participates as a "camper" at the 1988 Fantasy Camp in Winter Haven, Fla. The camp, which will be held Jan. 31-Feb. 7, is sponsored by the Red Sox Exchange.

☐ It was nice to see Norwell win the Superbowl a few weeks ago, that certainly says a lot for the league we are in. A note that might bring back memories for many is that Corey MacDonald, Norwell's superstar, is the son of Douglas MacDonald, who was a "famous" CHS star. In fact, Douglas played in the football game against Hull this year, the Sat. after Thanksgiving.

☐ During November, Ann Gilligan of Scituate negotiated the most sales and Peter Breen of Minot listed the most property through the Cohasset office of Jack Conway real estate.

Cohasset resident Jane Bowler of North Main Street negotiated the most sales through Conway's Hingham office during November.

The names of achievement award winners are displayed on a plaque in their office.

Editorial

As we enter into a new year, many issues remain unresolved; many questions are left unanswered.

The town must still face up to the fact we do not have a housing agreement as required by the state. This issue has dragged on for years, but reached a pinnacle of confusion and controversy earlier this year. Cohasset's housing situation has been termed unreasonably unrestrictive, and that label carries with it an inability to receive state discretionary grant money.

Three town boards - selectmen, planning and the housing authority, have yet to come to an accord and have failed to unanimously sign a document that would pry this label from our town borders. If one revision is adequate for one board, a subsequent revision displeases some other board members.

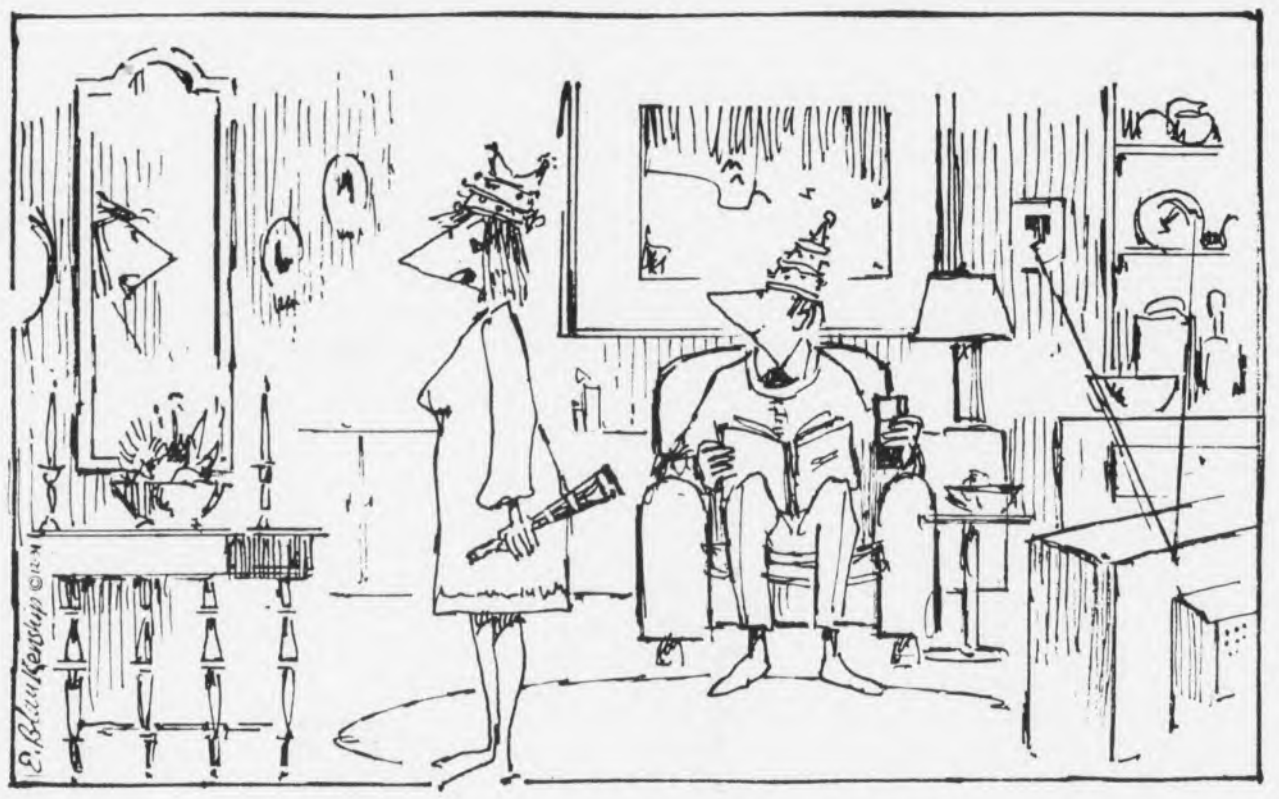
But the problem is ultimately not numbers or words on a paper that concern us, it is the people. By our restrictive housing practices, we are closing the door on many, many people who cannot afford to live among their friends, relatives and close to their work.

We hope that 1988 will find this issue resolved, with a document prepared in response to the state's requirement, and a definitive affordable housing plan approved and underway. This is a situation that can no longer be tolerated or ignored by any town official. We need some decisive action in 1988.

The question of whether Cohasset Heights Ltd. will remain open has been in the forefront of the news in 1987. Although there is a concerned faction in town, vocal in its opposition to the commercial landfill and adamant in its fight to protect our water supply, they have not succeeded in stopping the landfill operation. The state has watched this facility closely, and engineers have inspected this property from near and far. Yet they have never uncovered the facts needed to shut down this landfill.

No one would argue, probably not even owner Paul Barry, that a commercial landfill should not be located adjacent to a water supply area. But Barry has also welcomed inspections of his business, and dared the town to compare his high-tech landfill to the municipal dump on the other side of town.

And that brings us to yet another unresolved issue in 1988. The town's landfill is in deplorable condition, now facing a stiff $3,600 fine from the state. There are three years left in this landfill. But in the meantime, there are many costly improvements and repairs to be made.



Will the town turn to SEMASS to ease its trash disposal woes? Or will that alternative be too costly or impractical? As it looks now, Cohasset may have an opportunity to get into the SEMASS addition, if and when it is constructed. But the costs will be higher than originally quoted a few years ago, and there are no financial assurances the addition will be built.

The future of Rte. 3A appears to be busy, with many sites being prepared now for construction. We will watch with anticipation as new commercial enterprises crop up along this busy business district. What the future holds for the business community within Cohasset will be closely watched and protected by our zoning laws.

These are but a few issues we shall confront in the coming year. Let's hope it is a year filled with promise and solutions. We have some problems to solve, some issues to resolve and many new situations to face. Let's hope 1988 brings Cohasset residents new prosperity and happiness.

Rep. Murray's land bank vote

To the Editor,

My towns of Cohasset, Hingham and Hull had articles at Town Meetings for a "land bank bill." The following is attendance and the vote in these towns:

	Town quorum	Attendance	yes	no
Cohasset	200	203	113	90
Hingham	300	307	208	98
Hull	150	107	101	7

I had planned to vote for the "Land Bank" bill based on the favorable votes in my three towns.

However, The House Ways a Means came out with a new version of a "Land Bank" bill (H-6347) at 11:30 a.m. on the day of the debate on this issue.

I changed my vote for the "Land Bank" bill due to the following additions and changes in the bill.

Town Meeting, by a majority vote will vote to accept this legislation and then will be placed on referendum. This, to me, is the only good section of the new bill — allowing a general election vote because more people vote in this manner than attend town meetings.

Cohasset, Hingham, and Hull articles call for town meeting votes for appropriation of land bank funds for the purchase of land — however,in the bill before the House, Town Meeting will not be considered.

Under the new bill H-6347 the land bank subcommittee of municipality shall spend the land bank fees upon prior approval by the municipal executive. No town approval.

The new bill also calls for a "Growth Management Plan" which must be approved by the state secretary of Environmental Affairs and the state secretary of the Department of Communities and Development. If these Secretaries disapprove of a plan, these Executive Affairs must notify the collector of taxes to cease collection of real estate transfer fees until such time as a new or amended growth management is approved by both said executive offices. I know the problems one of my towns has had to obtain approval for a shellfish management plan from the Department of Environmental Affairs. Another town has had problems developing a housing plan with Communities and Development. I do not want any more state departments involved with my communities. They are already to restrictive and override my constituents feelings now.

Also, our three towns' legislation has exemptions to the land tax. There are none in the legislation presented to the House.

Cohasset, Hingham and Hull also voted the tax on the purchaser. The House bill placed the tax on the seller.

Legislation voted by all three towns stated that this tax would be used for open space. H-6347 calls for not less than 25% of the fund to be expended for open space and not less than 25% for affordable housing.

I compared the legislation submitted by Cohasset, Hingham and Hull with H-6347 and in good conscience could not vote for the new bill submitted by Ways and Means.

Mary Jeanette Murray

Chamber to vote on King Award

Plans are being made by the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce for the third annual Forrest E. King Memorial Award. The winner of the award will be presented with an engraved plaque at a dinner dance ceremony to be held at Kimball's by the Sea in February.

Andrea Merrill of the Cohasset Consignment Shop and Hallmark 100 was last year's winner of the award.

Ballots have already been sent to the membership asking them for the name of the nominee of their choice. Ballots must be received by James Kearney, CPA by Dec. 31, 1987 in order to be counted. The three nominees will be placed on a ballot to be mailed to the membership in January for the final decision.

The Forrest E. King Award, named for Valerie King's late father, the longtime proprietor of King Jewelers, will be presented annually to the member of the Chamber who has demonstrated during the previous year the highest standards of business ethics, management, employee and public relations and civic responsibility consistent with the goals of the Chamber of Commerce, and whose actions have reflected favorably upon the membership and to the credit of the member, their business organization and the Cohasset Community. Forrest King's own high business standards prompted the chamber to name the award in his memory.

Ms. King as well as Richard Straley, President of the Chamber are urging all members to cast their vote for the nominee of their choice. Everyone is eagerly looking forward to the final results which will be announced at the dinner dance ceremony at Kimball's by the Sea in February.

If you did not receive your ballot or would like more info please call Valerie King at 383-1755 or Dick Straley at 383-6317.

A look back at 1987

Eddie and The Cruisers 1987 almost made it to the top last year with Bogarty and crew. Just wait 'till this year!!

Happy graduates filled the Music Circus last June during the Cohasset High commencement.

Noel Ripley, Keeper of the Town Clock, worked on the extensive damage to the First Parish timepiece.

While repairs were being made this summer to Minot's Light, photographer Alan Chapman caught a mistake as one of the granite blocks plunged to the sea.

Our friends from Souppes Sur Loing visited Cohasset last summer. It was the first extended stay by a group of Souppes youngsters.

space within a proposed addition to the plant. Currently, there is no financing for that addition.

October

The Cohasset Social Service League and the board of health sponsored a first-of-its-kind AIDS seminar which was free to the public. Three medical experts and Cohasset School Supt. Stephen Hart participated in the panel discussion Oct. 7. About 50 residents attended the evening seminar.

More bad news for Cohasset Heights Ltd., as they reported a leachate spill to the health board early this month. Because of heavy rains and a failure by transport trucks to pick up the leachate from the dump's collection tanks, the containers overflowed. Engineering tests indicated the leachate contained no hazardous materials, but the health board was quickly notified of the spill.

As residents prepared for the Oct 26 town meeting, several articles remained in limbo. The conservation commission withdrew its support of an article calling for a swap of land off Evergreen Lane between the school department and a local developer. The conservation commission argued that land given to the developer is included in the Wetlands Protection Act.

And the state rejected Cohasset's latest effort to prepare an affordable housing plan, placing the blame with planning board members who refused to sign the document. State discretionary grants, including the $2.6 million in sewer funds, will be in jeopardy until a housing agreement is signed by selectmen, the housing authority and the planning board.

But Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray scheduled a meeting between all state and local officials regarding the housing statement. After reviewing the document line by line, the planning board and the state agreed there could be an early settlement of their differences.

The health board voted to shut down Cohasset Heights Ltd. because the landfill failed to post the required $750,000 bond as stated in the dump's site assignment. And during a routine inspection of the landfill earlier that month by the health agent, he found leachate spilling from the landfill across a road at the landfill and into an area of hay bales near the underdrain tanks.

CHL protesters later barricaded the entrance to the landfill, and several were arrested for trespassing. Although the landfill was officially shutdown for at least a few hours, CHL received the necessary bonding and the shutdown was only momentary. The protesters, using placards to express their displeasure with the dump, discussed their concerns with landfill owner Paul Barry, but refused to leave the site until escorted by local police.

Special town meeting refused to finance the $600,000 athletic field project. Another close vote was more successful - the $1 million police and fire station renovation project. Although many residents protested a second vote called on that question by Town Moderator William Weeks, the affirmative decision to finance the project remained.

In frustration, members of the original Milliken Field Improvement Committee resigned.

November

A diesel oil leak into Lily Pond was detected by a local fisherman who alerted water department officials. No estimates have been given on the costs of cleaningup the oil leak into the town's reservoir. Clean Harbors was immediately called in to eliminate any danger to the town's drinking water. There was no ban on the town's water throughout the episode. The oil was found leaking from an old storage tank left unattended for many years regarding the landfill's site assignment.

DEQE defends permit approval . . .

"He never spoke to an engineer. He simply told the regional office not to rest on the zoning issue and to go ahead with the technical aspects of the application," Brown added.

Atty. Moerhke explained that an application was made for expansion about six months ago. "We made application, put our arguments before them, and waited until the department reviewed it," he stated. "The state sets up certain standards and the applicant has to meet them. The plan approval stage of the DEQE is such that it is not one in which landfills are disapproved. What happens is that the state sets up standards. I have never seen a landfill disapproved flat out.

"My reaction to their approval is that I'm surprised it took so long," Atty. Moehrke added. "I am not being critical of DEQE, but my reaction is surprise that it took so long to approve. But given the long history of dispute, perhaps they were careful of this process - giving it extra caution because of the long history of mediation here. Perhaps the state wanted to cover all bases."

Landfill operator Paul Barry said he and his brother John were "tickled pink" to receive the expansion approval from the state.

"It gives us a couple of years to continue here," he added, noting that without the expansion, Cohasset Heights Ltd. would be "winding down sometime next fall."

Barry said the provisions within the approval require the landfill to install a special kind of synthetic liner in the new area. "If the engineers have determined that is the best way to go, then that's what I want to do here. I want to do what's best here," he stated. Barry said the landfill will be applying for another application to expand into area Four B. The landfill is currently using more than 20 acres of the total 48-acre property owned by the Barry brothers.

Several residents, including Peter Whittemore of Elm Street, questioned the state's approval of the expansion. "There are a number of questions that arise now," Whittemore stated. "In August, the DEQE issued a statement saying that several matters must be cleared up before approval is granted. One of those things was that the expansion be resolved before the zoning board appeals. Nothing was resolved before this decision was handed down last week."

It was his understanding that a DEQE engineer, Jeff Hartley, was told by deputy commissioner McLaughlin to "hurry up" the approval process. That is charge DEQE spokesman Brown strongly denied.

What is particularly distressing to the local health board, according to Atty. Leon, is that "in the DEQE's official correspondence last summer, the department strongly indicated that until zoning matters were decided, the application for the landfill expansion was strongly in our favor. There were several issues that had to be resolved, according to that correspondence. We simply can't understand this decision which is a significant reversal of the department's original position."

First term honors at Derby

The following students were named to the honors lists for the second term of the 1987-88 academic year at Derby Academy.

Headmaster's List, for those students who have achieved an A- or above average of all subjects, was awarded to Jamus M. Driscoll of Cohasset.

Second honors went to Caroline K. Arbury, Jonathan J. Foley, Eve A. Liberty, Nicholas P. Manganaro, Andrew J. Pozatek, and Kristine A. Pozatek, all from Cohasset.

Cohasset Heights continuing headlines . . .

along Lily Pond. Most residents, including some water commission members, never knew the old pump house contained a nearly-empty diesel oil tank.

Just as selectmen were putting the ceremonial first shovel into the dirt at the site of the new town hall addition, Fire Chief Daniel Brock said he rejected the architectural plans. The chief, who said he received definitive plans only ten days earlier, rejected the plans because of an inadequate sprinkler system in the addition. The chief met later with the architects to work out his concerns with the required sprinkler system.

Cohasset clergymen made some news this month as they asked selectmen to endorse an official "day of rest" by forbidding the use of town land by organized groups on Sundays. Selectmen were reluctant to fully endorse the proposal, and did not vote on the matter. However, Selectman Cliff Mitman said they would discourage the use of town property by organizations on Sunday mornings.

Landfill Supt. Joseph Laugelle informed the health board that the town's landfill can be used for about three more years.. Board members suggested they hold a public hearing to discuss the possibility of banning commercial trash from the town's dump.

A housing agreement with the state EOCD is still up in the air following the housing authority's rejection of this latest version. The document had been signed by the planning board and selectmen, but the housing authority said it was not legally correct. Members objected to the inclusion of the Government Island and Bates Building properties into the contract.

Longtime art center director Margaret Dillon was honored for her long hours of volunteer efforts. The members' gallery in the new art center was named after the former director.

The Cohasset High School boys' soccer team was defeated in the finals of the divisional championship game against Bromfield. It was deja vu for many of the players, who were defetaed in the final seconds of the game as they had been the previous year, against the same opponent.

December

Six lucky and talented Cohasset schoolgirls were named to the cast of the Boston Ballet's Nutcracker. The girls included: Courtney Schultz, Karla Kennedy, Melissa Weier, Keeley Dwyer, Michelle Equi, and Alyssa Cross.

Several dog poisonings in the Elm and Summer Streets area have been investigated by the animal control officer. At least three dogs in that neighborhood were poisoned in the past week, and residents say it also could have occurred earlier in the fall.

Eighty-nine senior center volunteers were honored this month at their annual holiday luncheon at Kimball's By The Sea.

And selectmen awarded a contract of $10,584 to Concrete Floatation Systems Inc. of Plymouth for floating concrete floats in the harbor - the first of its kind in Cohasset which will remain in the water year-round.

Local clergymen brought their day of rest proposal before the school committee this month. Although sympathetic to their request, the school committee decided not to officially endorse the resolution. Instead, they will continue to support the school department's stated policy of discouraging use of school-owned property and fields on Sundays.

The Mariner also reported this month about the changing face of Ripley Road. Interior designer Phil Smith has spruced up the former art center building, which will coincide with facelifts given to the Log 'n Line and the entire block of stores along Ripley Road. The new art center at the corner of Ripley Road and Pleasant Street has added to the new look of the town's business district along that road.

Beechwood Church services

The Beechwood Congregational Church invites everyone to worship Sunday mornings at 10:45 a.m.

Adult child care is provided. Pastor Hall will be in Japan visiting his son, and we are pleased to have Rev. Robert Campbell, Minister Emeritus filling the pulpit Jan. 3.

There will be no Sunday School Jan. 3. We invite the children to bring their parents to church instead. Sunday School for Grades K-8 will resume Jan. 10 at 9:30. All neighborhood children are welcome to attend. Registration is not necessary. Come, be part of the growing Beechwood population.
